MELBOURNE LASHED BY RAINSTORM

Wind and Torrents Make Worst Storm Ever Known in Area

EIGHT LIVES LOST AND DAMAGE HEAVY

MELBOURNE, Dec. 1 (AP). — A terrific rain and wind storm out of the Southern seas today had brought death to at least eight persons and caused property damage of more than $1,225,000.

The storm was described as the worst ever to visit this part of the Island Continent. For two days the wind-swept torrents smote the city.

Scores of small boats were hurled ashore, and inland seas a mile across have been created in many cases overnight.

Latest estimates place more than 2,000 homeless.

BODIES WASHED ASHORE

Two bodies were washed ashore wearing lifebelts with the name of the Coramba, a small coastal steamer. It was feared the toll may mount as additional information of the severity of the storm continued to reach here.

All except two holes at the Country Golf Club course were under water. The two were used by American golfers who played a 34-hole tournament.

The Kooyong Tennis court, on which the Victorian and Australian championships were to have been played next week, were under twenty feet of water.

TYPHOONS GIVE NO LONG TRUCE

Seventh of Cycle Nearing Philippines While Toll of Sixth Uncounted

MANILA, Dec. 1 (AP).—Another typhoon neared the Island of Samar, tonight, as the Central Philippines counted sixty dead or missing in Thursday's tempest, sixth of a series of hurricanes which have caused more than 300 deaths in less than three months.

With many hundreds of flimsy native shacks still flattened by winds that arose in the Pacific and roared across the islands toward the China coast, belated dispatches told of scores of fishermen drowned or missing, and of deaths on shore, in the latest gale.

Manila itself escaped the fury of the storm on Thursday.

Islands and provinces southward of Manila, however, felt its full force. Ten dead fishermen were flung ashore on Antique Island, which reported twenty-one others missing.

From various central provinces came reports of twenty-four dead or missing, and the Island of Leyte told of two fishermen dead and three others possibly drowned.

Meanwhile, warnings went up on Samar, easternmost of the central islands of the archipelago, of another tempest forming in the Pacific, breeding place of tropical typhoons.

CYCLE OF STORMS

The cycle of storms began September 8, when at least two persons were killed.

On September 30, the second typhoon swept the south central provinces, killing thirty-nine more and causing wirespread damage.

Eighty persons perished in the furious storm of October 16. Four days later, another disturbance killed twenty.

The terrific storm of November 14 took a toll of at least 150 lives, endangered shipping and leveled thousands of flimsy bamboo homes.

The storms developed a total loss of life aggregating at least 283, the figure being regarded here as ultra-conservative. Thursday's storm then added to that total.

"GIVE A JOB"

FOR the fifth consecutive year, the Victoria branch of the Employment Service of Canada launched its "give-a-job" campaign yesterday. Each year between 100 and 200 men and women in Victoria are placed in temporary employment or found casual work by this means, to help slender Christmas savings. The appeal is a general one, addressed to the owners of homes or business premises where a day's work can be found for a qualified man or woman. The employment bureau, operated jointly under Federal and provincial auspices, guarantees to send reliable help. Its telephones are Garden 2411 and Empire 1931.

MAYOR CALLS ON CITIZENS TO ORGANIZE FOR BETTER TIMES

St. Peter's to Have New Setting With Wrecking of Slums

ROME, Dec. 1 (AP).—Majestic St. Peter's will rise from a new setting in solitary magnificence as soon as plans now in formation are translated into action, it was learned today.

Experts of the Vatican and the Italian Government have begun to plan the wrecking of scores of slum buildings on streets running from the Tiber to St. Peter's.

The Basilica, which is cut off from a close view until a visitor arrives at St. Peter's Square itself, will be easily visible from the time of crossing the Tiber, a half mile from the cathedral.

Sergei Kiroff, Member of Powerful Bureau, Slain in Committee Headquarters at Leningrad — Killer Captured, But Not Identified

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press)

MOSCOW, Dec. 1 (AP).—An assassin who, the Soviet Government asserted, was "sent by enemies of the working class," today shot and killed Sergei Mironovich Kiroff, Revolutionist, for thirty of his forty-six years a member of the Communist Party's Political Bureau.

The assassin, who slew Kiroff in the party committee headquarters at Leningrad, was captured by Soviet police. Despite the questioning to which he was submitted, he still had not been identified late tonight.

HELD HIGH POST

As one of the nine members of the political bureau, which makes the decisions on policy unfailingly followed by the Government, Kiroff belonged to what is generally regarded as the most powerful bodies in the Soviet Republic.

He was also secretary of the Communist Party's central committee, from which the political committee is appointed, and the most influential party member in Leningrad, headquarters of the Bolshevist Party until it moved to Moscow.

FIVE ARE SLAIN ON GRECIAN FRONTIER

ATHENS, Dec. 1 (AP). — Five men were killed today when Bulgarian Frontier guards, pursuing a number of Pomak families (Bulgarian Moslems), who were attempting to reach the Greek town of Drama, opened fire. Several women were wounded.

An inquiry will be opened, since it was alleged the killings and woundings occurred on the Greek side of the border.

Formal Launching of Systematic Campaign for Tourist Trade on Wednesday

$20,000,000 YEARLY IS AIM OF DRIVE

Victoria's co-ordinated drive for tourists will be formally launched next Wednesday by Mayor David Leeming, when he will meet with the full advisory committee, representative of all classes of the community, which was authorized by a meeting of ratepayers held on September 25. The outcome of the gathering of property owners was the formation of the Tourist Trade Development Association. Organization work has been completed, different functioning committees have held initial meetings and are collaborating in the creation of a strong, virile mechanism, to give effect to a well ordered, definite and progressive plan covering development of tourist attractions for the next five years.

DEFINITE PLAN

This is the first time in the Northwest that the programme for a step by step expansion of the attractions of the city and district has been arranged. Mayor Leeming, in conceiving the idea of a plan of systematic development, considered the selling of enjoyment to visitors, as a matter of modern business. Even as an industrial concern before engaging in the erection of a factory would survey the possibilities of success; would estimate the marketing opportun-

SAILORS SAVED AS HOPE FADED

Score of Men Rescued From Wrecked Ship During Great Lakes Gale

MUSKEGON, Mich., Dec. 1 (AP). Another thrilling chapter in the annals of Great Lakes rescues was written today when, after hope had been almost abandoned, all twenty-three members of the wreck "jinx" freighter, Henry Cort's crew were taken off alive, although at the cost of one rescuer's life.

A sixty-mile gale and one of the worst lake storms in years tossed the freighter, last "whaleback" on the lakes, against the breakwater guarding the entrance to Muskegon Harbor as it raced over Lake Michigan for shelter last night. She is still rested there tonight, hanging precariously to a rocky ledge, but her crew was safely ashore.

BUFFETED BY STORM

With daybreak, five coastguardsmen made their way along the three-quarter-mile breakwater, buffetted by wind and waves. Two coastguard boats and a shore crew made ready to shoot a breeches buoy line aboard, but the self-reliant sailors took care of all that themselves by sending a line to the breakwater head.

Down this line they came, one by one, in an improvised breeches buoy. Once on the breakwater they were lashed together in groups of three, and when the last man had left the ship they started for shore.

RENEW OBJECTION TO OIL MONOPOLY

Great Britain and United States Protest Manchukuan Government Action

TOKIO, Dec. 1 (AP). — Great Britain and the United States today, for the third time in five months, concertedly notified the Japanese Government of their objection to the Manchoukuo oil monopoly, in diplomatic representations.

With these diplomatic moves the Anglo-American oil controversy against Japan was regarded by observers as having entered a more tense stage.

The British note, which was vigorously worded, reasserted Great Britain's contention that the monopoly violates the treaty rights of the open-door principle of China, and insisted that Japan cannot escape responsibility for the actions of Manchoukuo.

Grave Possibilities May Result From Jugoslavian Action

Italy Fears Appeal to League of Nations May Be Start of Turmoil

ROME WILL SUPPORT HUNGARY AT LEAGUE

ROME, Dec. 1 (AP).—Conflict, bad feeling and perhaps even graver possibilities stare from the pages of the memorandum that Jugoslavia presented to the League of Nations, demanding an investigation of the respons... ...r the assassination of King Alexander.

That is the Italian view. The memorandum, some Italians say, may be a live coal thrown into the European powder keg.

A Government spokesman told the Associated Press that it would be much better to let the matter run its course in the courts of the several countries—France, Italy and Hungary—where persons suspected of complicity in the assassination have been arrested.

MEANS TROUBLE

Taking the matter before the League of Nations and openly demanding an investigation means trouble, Italians say, because the Jugoslav memorandum demands the searching out of the ... ...ibilities for the assassination.

The Slav kingdom's ass...tion that these responsibilities amount to a plot against Jugoslavia, long prepared abroad, is viewed here as an exceedingly grave ch..., possibly containing the implication of Italian responsibility.

B.C. CHANGES RELIEF RULE

Municipalities Advised of Forty-Sixty Ratio on Relief Disbursements

Retro-active to October, Hon. George S. Pearson announced a new plan yesterday for the distribution of relief outlays as between Dominion, provincial and municipal authorities, under which the municipalities will pay 40 per cent of relief disbursements.

The two Governments will pay the remaining 60 per cent, the Federal share being at the rate of a fixed allotment of $150,000 monthly.

Administration costs will be borne separately by each authority.

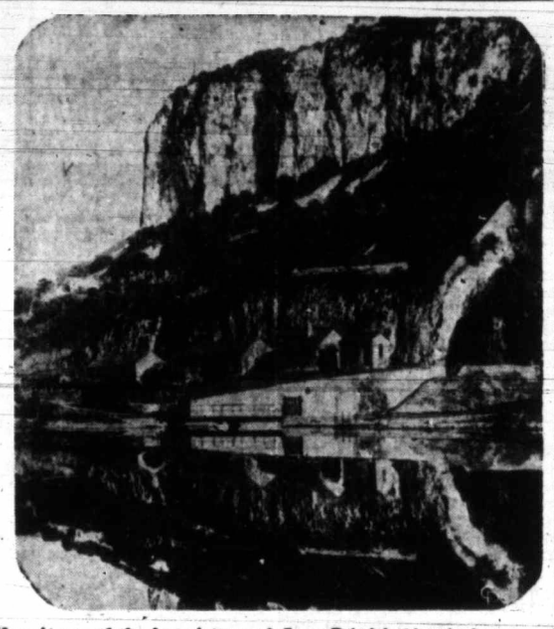
PROVINCE PAYS MORE

While this arrangement means that the municipalities will have to provide 40 per cent of relief outlays, compared with 33 1-3 per cent previously, provincial relief officials estimate that the Province will absorb a greater proportion of the ultimate difference under the new Federal allocations than before.

The 40 per cent arrangement will mean that municipal costs will be increased by 20 per cent instead of 24 per cent, in respect to the difference in fixed allocations on relief in British Columbia.

The ratio of 46 per cent will apply to actual disbursements on relief, exclusive of administration costs. It takes the place of a previous provincial order, under which the Province was to absorb half of the difference involved.

Historic British Fortress



Here is one of the few pictures of Great Britain's historic fortress of Gibraltar commanding the Mediterranean Sea, showing for the first time the openings in the rock leading to the gun galleries within. The famous rock withstood a siege of more than three and one-half years at the hands of a Spanish fleet from 1779 to 1783, and was a valuable defence during the Great War.

Motorship Watco Drifts Helpless As Engines Fail

Ship Saved by Shifting Winds—Crew Reaches Victoria and Tell of Struggle Off West Coast — Seven Spend Night in Open Lifeboat Before Landing at Tofino

WALLOWING helplessly in the trough of high seas for more than twelve hours, her engines disabled and drifting hourly towards the reef-strewn shore of the West Coast of Vancouver Island and manned only by four of the crew of eleven, the motorship Watco, of the Hygiene Coal Company, escaped destruction when within half a cable length of Break Reef by a mere shifting of the wind.

The story of the vessel's plight, when her engines gave out on Sunday evening, November 25, off Estevan Point, was recounted by members of the crew on the arrival of the Watco at Victoria shortly before 2 o'clock, yesterday afternoon, in tow of the Salvage Queen.

Lighthouse Tender Wins Long Battle

PORTLAND, Dec. 1 (AP). — Five men—three of them suffering from severe colds—were removed, late today, from the Tillamook Rock Lighthouse, where raging seas had kept them virtual prisoners more than three weeks.

Over dashing waves, through which no craft dare come close to the rock, the men were swung on a breeches buoy set up after the lighthouse-tender Rose finally succeeded in "shooting" a line to the rock.

Fresh groceries, other supplies and two relief lighthouse attendants were landed on the rock over the breeches buoy.

Wheat Experiments Helping to Provide "Ready Money" Crop

Study of Scores of Strains Affording Knowledge Enabling Farmers to Grow Grain to Best Results in Various Districts

By FORBES RHUDE

VANCOUVER, Dec. 1 (CP).—A co-operative effort is going forward with the object of placing more quick cash in the hands of the British Columbia farmer. It concerns wheat. The object is not to turn the province into a granary to compete in a surfeited world market, but to fit wheat into the mixed farming situation, where it would be a "ready-money" crop. The demand lies in a home market, which can use a substantial production of quickly available crop.

Scores of strains have been studied over long periods of experimental growth to gather the bulky data now at hand, and the work still proceeds. If the British Columbia farmer wishes to grow wheat with maximum results and profitably, he must not take the attitude that "wheat is wheat" and let it go at that. There is "wheat and wheat," it is pointed out, and this applies particularly to this province, where the widest diversity has been found in the fitness of various sections to grow varying strains. Each locality must plant its proper strain.

TO LEARN POSSIBILITIES

The study started as far back as 1917, in an effort to learn the possibility of producing a low protein wheat for pastry milling at home

SENTENCED FOR MERCY MURDER

Sexagenarian Mother Admits Putting Imbecile Son to Death in England

LEEDS, England, Dec. 1 (AP).—A sixty-two-year-old mother, who painlessly put to death an imbecile son, because she faced a serious operation and feared she wouldn't survive, was sentenced to death today on a charge of murder.

The frail little mother, Mrs. May Brownhill, of Pannal, who had devoted the last thirty years to nursing the son, Denis, heard the verdict of the jury and the sentence of the judge stoically, standing with her head erect.

Asked if she wished to address the court, she replied, "I did it in mercy." There were tears in the eyes of many in the audience.

PUT SON TO SLEEP

According to testimony at the trial, the mother, upon being told she could live only six months unless she underwent a dangerous operation, put her son to bed and gave him one hundred sedative tablets, then turned on the gas.

Next day she calmly told the family doctor who came to investigate:

"I've just put Denis to sleep."

Later, when police charged her with malicious and wilful murder, she retorted, "Not maliciously, I simply put my boy to sleep."

A jury, which deliberated only five minutes, recommended mercy.

Mrs. Brownhill only recently had recovered from the operation which was performed after she was put under arrest.

FLYERS READY TO START ON HAWAII DASH

Ulm Expects to Establish Weekly Airplane Service Over Ocean Eventually

TAKE-OFF DELAYED BY ADVERSE WEATHER

OAKLAND, Cal., Dec. 1 (AP).—Weekly airplane service between Australia and Hawaii will evolve from the trans-Pacific flight Lieutenant Charles T. P. Ulm and two companions expect to start tomorrow from the Municipal Airport here.

While mechanics tonight put finishing touches on repairs of the silver and orange two-motored plane, "Star of Australia," Ulm said:

"Full financial and technical plans have been completed. I expect the Great Pacific Airways, Ltd., of which I am managing director, to establish a service in the next two years."

GREAT SAVING IN TIME

Planes once a week each way between Sydney and Honolulu, to connect with steamer service between the United States and Honolulu, will reduce transportation time of twenty-one days from San Francisco to Sydney, to seven and a half days, Ulm said.

"Eight passenger planes which will also carry up to 300 pounds of mail, are now available," he stated. "In my opinion, as a result of recent discussions with manufacturers of aircraft, I am perfectly satisfied that regular transport air service can and will be put in ser-

CONFIDENT OF SUCCESS

There is no question in the minds of Ulm and his crew, G. M. Littlejohn, co-pilot, and J. L. Skilling, navigator and radio man, that they will reach Australia over the route planned of 8,687 nautical miles.

Closely following weather reports which told of cloudy conditions over Hawaii that kept him from hopping off late today, Ulm said:

"If it were just a matter of 'hope' to get to Australia, we wouldn't be

FALL IS NAMED FOR PRINCESS

Discovered on Potaro River in Guiana by Canadian-American Party

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana, Dec. 1 (CP). — A great waterfall tumbling 500 feet into a rocky gorge deep in British Guiana's hinterland, was named today after the new Duchess of Kent.

Marina Falls it was called by the Canadian and American exploration party which discovered it dropping into the canyon through which the Potaro River rushes at express train speed toward Kaieteur Falls—the highest in the world—just twelve miles downstream.

The falls, one of the world's biggest, was found on Thursday—the day Princess Marina of Greece became the bride of the Duke of Kent in London. And it was fitting that it should take the new Duchess' name, for the explorers reported it resembled nothing so much as a huge bridal veil.

The party was searching for gold-bearing territory when the waterfall was discovered. E. Horne, of Montreal, representing a Canadian mining company, was in charge of the party, and with him were Leonard E. Schlemm and J. R. Lightfall, of Montreal, and W. Bracewell, chief of British Guiana Geological survey.

Empire Programme To Be Broadcast on Christmas Morning

Many Dominions and Colonies to Contribute to Elaborate Presentation — Canada to Be Heard Five Times

OTTAWA, Dec. 1 (CP).—An Empire Christmas Day programme in which microphones will pick up songs by Quebec lumberjacks, scenes from India and Australia and South Africa, a message from the King at Sandringham and, finally, a massed choir and orchestra, whose members are separated by thousands of miles, will be presented this year by the Canadian Radio Commission in co-operation with the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The basic idea on which the programme is being built, the commission announced today, is that of bringing into the broadcast typical national scenes from various Empire countries. The programme, starting at 5:55 a.m. (P.S.T.) and lasting an hour and ten minutes, will be heard around the world.

B.C. TO TAKE PART

Canada will enter the programme with typical Canadian scenes at three different points. The first will be from a Quebec lumber camp, a microphone picking up songs by lumberjacks. This will be followed immediately by a broadcast from British Columbia, contrasting a scene on a snow-clad mountainside with activity on the far Pacific seashore.

Later in the programme Canada will contribute a scene from a fisherman's cottage in the Maritime Provinces and, still later, a brief pickup of a hockey game and children's skating party from somewhere in the Dominion.

FROM OTHER DOMINIONS

Other broadcast scenes will come from a dairy farm in New Zealand; the famous Botanical Gardens in Melbourne; a tea garden in India; the home of the Chelsea pensioners in London; a Christmas greeting in Ireland, and a power station on the Shannon in Ireland.

There will be bits from a skyscraper in Johannesburg, South Africa; from a whaling port in New Zealand, a tollkeeper's stand on the famous Sydney Bridge of Sydney, Australia. The world will hear from a native compound in South Africa.

As in the two former Empire Christmas broadcasts, this programme will conclude with a message from His Majesty, speaking from Sandringham.

CHRISTMAS BELLS

Altogether Canada will be heard five times. The programme will open with the ringing of Christmas bells around the world, commencing with the bells of Bethlehem and including bells in India, Australia, Canada, Ireland and England. The carillon in the Peace Tower at Ottawa will contribute to this introduction.

In the finale, massed choirs and orchestras in England, Australia, South Africa and Canada will be merged by the control boards of the British Broadcasting Corporation in London in an Empire-wide rendition of the National Anthem.

CHARITY SHOW WILL BE GIVEN

Kinsmen Club Arranges Entertainment at Empire Theatre to Raise Funds

The Kinsmen Club will give two performances of a professional show at the Empire Theatre on Monday, December 10, in aid of their Christmas charity fund. The management of the theatre has generously assisted the club by placing the theatre at the disposal of the organization. This is the theatre's contribution to the cause.

"Sweethearts of Syncopation," which includes a popular jazz orchestra and twenty-five girls, will be the entertainment. Ten variety acts will be given. The first performance will start at 8 p.m., and the second at 10 p.m. If necessary, a third will be held.

Tickets to the performances will be sold by women who are on relief. They will be given a percentage of the ticket sales, and will have credential cards with them when they call at the various homes.

The Kinsmen's Club asks all those approached by the ticket sellers to lend their support so that the Christmas charity work can be carried out.

OPEN FORUM TONIGHT

The usual open forum will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock at 608½ Cormorant Street, with three short addresses being given. The first will be "Unemployment," by E. Logan; the second, "Why I Joined an Unemployed Organization," by W. White, and the third, "Constructive Criticism," by Hans Kroeger.

Funeral Service to Be Held Tuesday

LATE HAROLD FLEMING

WHO passed away on Saturday morning in his sleep at his home, 948 Foul Bay Road, was a commercial photographer of Victoria for the past forty-seven years, and a highly respected citizen of the community. The funeral service will be held on Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, at Hayward's B.C. Funeral Chapel. Rev. Canon A. E. deL. Nunns, rector of St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, will officiate. Interment will be made in the Royal Oak Burial Park.

SPECIAL RATES OVER HOLIDAYS

Canadian Passenger Ass'n Announces Reduced Fares for Entire Period

WINNIPEG, Dec. 1.—In an effort to meet the requirements of the traveling public over the Christmas and New Year's holidays, special holiday rates will be put into effect on both the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways, according to an announcement made, today, by J. B. Parker, secretary, Canadian Passenger Association, Western lines.

A feature of the reduced rates is that not only are the individual holidays covered, but a special rate is allowed which takes in the entire holiday time in question.

Return tickets at a fare and a quarter are offered from December 21 to December 25, returning midnight, December 26, and from December 28 to January 1, returning midnight, January 2. Fare and one-third tickets are offered from December 20 to January 1, returning midnight, January 10.

Teachers and students are offered fare and a quarter for round-trip, upon presentation of passenger association certificate not more than three days prior, nor three days later, than closing date of school or college. Return limit is opening date of school or college, but not later than January 31.

ENEMY OF MANKIND

It is to the inspiration of a Danish postal clerk, Einar Holboell, that we owe the Christmas seal idea. In 1904, he interested his Government in the idea of a sale of stamps at Christmas time, to build a hospital for tuberculosis children. Since that time Christmas seals have been sold all over the civilized world to carry on the fight against mankind's oldest enemy — tuberculosis. If you would help in this great work in your community, buy Christmas seals from your local tuberculosis association.

CHURCH MUSIC IS IMPROVED

Dr. Sydney Nicholson Tells of Movement Introduced in Old Country

What was described by Dean Quainton as a conservative reform in connection with the music of the Church of England was explained, yesterday morning, in an address in Memorial Hall by Dr. Sydney Nicholson, whose name is so prominently identified with the move inaugurated in the Old Land. Dean Quainton, who introduced the speaker, said that in this project there was continuity in change.

The address of Dr. Nicholson, who is director of the School of English Church Music, London, was made doubly interesting and forcibly, by the fact that he illustrated some of the changes which were being introduced in the singing by records on the gramograph. The old method of chanting and singing were reproduced with the newer style recommended under the movement that is known as the School of English Church Music, which has proceeded to the extent of having headquarters at the College of St. Nicholas, where practical instruction is given.

As an instance of what is being carried out under this new system, Dr. Nicholson explained that while the chants were retained for instance, the new school insisted upon the words being audible in all their syllables and the natural accents connected with the words of the chant were maintained as in ordinary speech.

ILLUSTRATED CHANGES

The illustrations on the gramograph showed how the beauty of the music was unimpaired, but the words conveyed the meaning they would have if used without the music.

What the movement had in view was to maintain the tremendous tradition behind the music of the Church of England, and which was bound up with the life of the nation. The movement had been started in order to revive the music of the church, which some thirty years ago occupied an important part in the worship of God throughout all the churches.

There had been a decline in this respect in later years, Dr. Nicholson continued. In a practical way the movement was assisting the churches outside of the Old Land. This had been done by preparing editions of music adapted for use in the churches, obtainable at reasonable prices.

Unless music aided in adding to the dignity of the service of God, it had no part. Sometimes choirs paid more attention to preparing for competitions than for the service of God. What was good enough to be adjudicated upon was none too good for the worship of God, said Dr. Nicholson. The service should be real.

BOYS IN CHOIRS

Dr. Nicholson is strongly in favor of male voices in the church choirs. He strongly advocated the use of boys in the choirs. There was definite reasons for this. The great composers had prepared their music for church use for boys' voices. It was, therefore, to be expected that boys' voices were adapted to interpreting such music. Again, if boys were not utilized in the choirs, there would not be the training afforded for the adult male voices that would be required later. It was also for the benefit of the boys to have them retained in the church work.

At the gathering in Memorial Hall, yesterday morning, there was a large number drawn not alone from the choirs and those interested, who were members of the Church of England, but also choir masters, pastors and others from denominations outside the Church of England.

LOCAL MANAGER SEES NEW CARS

Ben Grossman, of Jameson Motors, Ltd., Views 1935 Essex and Studebaker

Ben Grossman, sales manager for Jameson Motors Ltd., returned last week from Eastern Canada and the United States, where he attended a mass meetings of dealers, distributors and factory executives for Hudson Terraplane cars. The meeting was held in Windsor, Ontario, and again in Detroit, Michigan, culminating in a banquet.

While there, Mr. Grossman gained a preview of the 1935 Essex Terraplanes, and is enthusiastic over the sensational advance made. One of the most outstanding features will be the "electric hand," which eliminates gear shifting and gear levers.

From there Mr. Grossman proceeded to South Bend, Indiana, where he took part in a mammoth meeting of Studebaker dealers and distributors. This was one of the largest gatherings of the kind ever held, with over 3,000 representatives attending. Here he viewed the 1935 Studebaker, featuring the "planar independent suspension," which is termed "the miracle ride," adding inconceivably to the riding comfort and giving the same stability in both front and rear seats.

Mr. Grossman was greatly impressed by the general feeling of optimism which prevails in Eastern Canada. Great faith is placed in the outcome of the purchase of low grade wheat by the United States. It is estimated that this will release many millions into Canada, and this is bound to react favorably on trade in general.

Mr. Grossman returned via the Great Northern, arriving in Victoria on Friday.

THE HON. CECIL KNOWS HIS PINEAPPLE

You see, he once went kangaroo hunting in the Kangaroo hunting districts of Australia and almost had a bounding beastie cornered, by Jove, when it bounded right into Queensland where pineapples for Libby's are grown. Well before the Hon. Cecil Eustace got the idea, that kangaroo had drunk three glassfuls of pineapple juice and had bounded clean into New South Wales and escaped. Now the Hon. Cecil insists on a glass of Libby's pineapple juice every morning and at least once a day he eats a dessert made from Libby's Centre Slices of Australian Pineapple. Some day, he says, he's going back to Australia and he's quite determined no kangaroo is going to out-bound him again.

THE TANGY, NEW HEALTH DRINK

Libby's Unsweetened Pineapple Juice is a remarkably delicious health drink! It brings you the tang of finest field ripened pineapple, exceptionally rich in natural Esters. Esters, the flavour-carriers of the pineapple, are concentrated in the juice cells that have been most fully ripened by the sun, while the fruit is on the plant in its native element. You are missing a thrillingly new and delicious drink if you've not tried this new favourite. Just ask your grocer for Libby's Unsweetened Pineapple Juice.

LIBBY GIVES YOU BETTER PINEAPPLE—JUST THE CENTRE SLICES

Picked as they sun ripen on the sunny plantations of Queensland, Australia, at the time the fruit reaches the full natural tang of it luscious flavour—the centre slices only are selected and packed at Libby's kitchens in a golden syrup made from the pineapple itself — no wonder Libby's Centre Slices of tangy Australian Pineapple are so superior to others. Your grocer has them or can get them for you.

BOYS save the following Libby labels—Catchup, Tomato Juice, Tomatoes, Pork and Beans, Sauer Kraut. With these labels you can get camping equipment—tents, axes, knives, flashlights, hiking boots, etc. BOY SCOUTS can get official equipment. This is how you get started. City Mourns Death Of John R. Matson; Many Tributes Paid

Late Publisher of Victoria Colonist Held in High Regard by Citizens of Community — Prominent Men Express Sorrow.

TRIBUTES to the worth and character of the late John R. M. Matson, president of The Colonist Printing and Publishing Company, Ltd., who died unexpectedly at St. Joseph's Hospital, early Friday evening, were expressed by prominent Victoria citizens, yesterday, and scores of messages of condolence were received by members of the family through the day.

PREMIER PATTULLO

Of the late Mr. Matson, Premier T. D. Pattullo said:

"Jack's death came as a great shock. In recent years I came in frequent contact with him, and held him in increasing regard.

"Jack liked humanity, and everybody liked Jack. He will be very much missed both socially and in a business way.

HON. JOHN HART

(Minister of Finance.)

"I am greatly shocked and grieved by the sudden passing of Mr. Matson, who was one of the most outstanding of younger business men. His father, the late Mr. J. S. H. Matson, was among the first men I was associated with in Victoria, and I have known the sons since their early boyhood and watched with interest as they grew up. His presence, whether in sport, business or club life radiated good fellowship. He will be missed greatly by his very wide acquaintanceship. I extend my sincere condolence to his family."

MAYOR DAVID LEEMING

"I was deeply shocked to hear of the sudden passing of Jack Matson.

"Mr. Matson held a leading place among the young business leaders of this community, and his enthusiasm in all matters pertaining to the advancement of Victoria and surrounding district will be sadly missed.

"In the field of sport, young Mr. Matson was a national figure, and his loss will undoubtedly be most keenly felt in all sporting circles, as he was always most willing to give generously of his time and money in the support of all athletic activities.

"The city of Victoria can ill afford to lose young men of the ability and energy of Mr. Jack Matson, and we are the poorer for his untimely death."

W. T. STRAITH

"The very sudden passing of Mr. Jack Matson is a serious loss to the community. The recent death of his father, Mr. J. S. H. Matson, who had been such a representative citizen, created a serious gap in the business life of our city. Mr. Jack Matson was splendidly equipped in the matter of education and training to take his father's place, and had found a place of influence in his association with The Colonist. It is regrettable that his untimely death has robbed this city of one of its younger and more active business men."

HAROLD HUSBAND

(President, Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau.)

"Victoria and British Columbia have lost a valued friend and an outstanding citizen in Jack Matson. He was a loyal, courageous sportsman, who was destined for high places in our provincial and Dominion business and political life. His sudden death at a time when he had everything before him comes as a terrible blow to his friends. Our sincere sympathies are extended to his family."

J. E. WILSON

(President Victoria Golf Club.)

"Jack Matson's sudden and unexpected passing will be taken as a personal loss by hundreds of sportsmen in Victoria and the Pacific Northwest, where he was so popular and favorably known. I can speak for the golfers, particularly for the members of the Victoria Golf Club, when I say that his absence from the fairways will be much deplored. He could always be counted on to help in any club activity, in addition to being one of the club's best players. Possessed of a happy sense of humor, it was always a pleasure to meet him."

J. GRAHAM GRAHAM

(President of Colwood Golf Club.)

"The members of the Colwood Golf Club learned with the greatest regret of the death of J. R. Matson, who was an esteemed member of the club for years, and widely known as 'Jack' in British Columbia and the East. This extremely popular amateur golfer was the most generous opponent. He played golf in the best sporting spirit, and was a model in this respect. He was rightly considered to be the best medal player in British Columbia. His help and assistance in representing British Columbia golf in the East will always be remembered by those who knew what he actually did. We extend our deepest sympathy to the members of Mr. Matson's family."

R. L. CHALLONER

President Uplands Golf Club

"The tragic passing of Jack Matson in the prime of his life is a great blow to the membership of the Uplands Golf Club as a whole, and more particularly to myself, as a personal friend and schoolmate for many years. While not an active member of the Uplands Club in the playing sense of the word, Jack, as he was known to all, could always be counted upon to help with any plans for the betterment of the club, and he was never known to fail to carry out a promise once given. The low handicap players of the club, particularly Bob Morrison and Harold Brynjolfson, who have been on the British Columbia teams, which Jack Matson has so ably captained, have lost a worthy opponent, and the club and city are poorer for the loss of a real citizen and sportsman."

F. A. JACKSON

Secretary Victoria Lawn Tennis Club

"By the passing of Jack Matson, Victoria loses one of its most popular and outstanding athletes. Possessing a natural athletic ability, Jack was able to excel in any branch of sport that he happened to take up. Of late years he was most interested in golf, and his proficiency in this line was known throughout Canada. But he could, at any time, step on the tennis court and give any member of our club a hard game. Of a cheery and genial nature, he will be greatly missed by his many friends in the Victoria Lawn Tennis Club."

PERCY PAYNE

Past President of the Victoria and District Cricket League

"The passing of Jack Matson removes one of the outstanding athletes in Victoria. During his association with local cricket teams he was always looked upon as typifying all the outstanding qualities of a great sportsman. He was a great bowler and one of the finest batsmen ever developed in this city, and his tremendous power at the wicket brought delight to thousands of followers of the game. He scored runs faster than any other player in the history of local cricket. His death is a great blow to his many friends of the cricket field."

RUSSELL KER

Past President of the Victoria Rugby Union

"It was an awful shock to me when I learned that my boyhood chum, Jack Matson, had gone. It is terrible when a young athlete like Jack is taken from us. Jack in his prime was a great rugger, being fearless and brainy. Jack and I were teammates on the University Old Boys' Rugby team several years ago."

P. A. RAYMOND

Secretary of the Elks

"The members of Victoria Lodge, No. 2, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, of which their late brother, John R. Matson, was an active and very popular member, were shocked and deeply grieved at the untimely passing on of this bright young business man, who, through genial disposition and personality, had endeared himself to all who had the privilege of knowing him. He will be deeply missed by the business and social fraternities of all classes in the city."

COLONIST COLLEAGUES

"We feel sure we express the sentiments, not only of the members of The Colonist composing room staff, but likewise all members of the Typographical Union in Victoria and on Vancouver Island, at the sudden death of Mr. Matson. To all of us he was known as Jack Matson, and the spirit which prompted the use of this familiar term was amply reciprocated by the man himself. His hand was always outstretched to assist those in his employ, and the memory of his kindly words and counsel will long be cherished by those who were so closely associated with him.

"Though his immediate connection with The Colonist only dated from the time of the sudden death of his father, many of those on the staff of the newspaper had watched him grow from his youth to manhood with an affection that is only bestowed upon real worth. His death has left a vacancy which will be difficult to fill, if that were possible. "James D. Davidson,

"President."

"Victoria Typographical Union 201."

HUGH ALLAN

"As president of the Victoria Conservative Association, I would like to say that we all heard with great regret of the death of Mr. Matson, whose passing marks another loss, not alone to one of the strongest Conservative families in the city, but to the community as a whole. Our sympathies will go out to the family. Mr. Matson had already established himself in the business life of the city, and had taken over and was carrying on his father's work. His loss, to business, athletic and community circles, will be very widely felt."

Japan's Mandated Islands

Japan is accused of fortifying the Marshall, Caroline, Ladrone and Pelew Islands, formerly occupied by Germany, in violation of the mandates over them granted by the League of Nations. This is denied in Tokio and affirmed by neutral observers. Meanwhile, Japan is barring foreign visitors from the islands.

MOTORSHIP DRIFTS AS ENGINES FAIL

a strained back, but all others are in good condition physically in spite of their experience and exposure.

The Watco lost the port lifeboat Monday afternoon and when it was found the anchors would not hold, Captain Croft gave orders to abandon ship. Seven of the crew cast off in the starboard lifeboat and headed for the shoreline. Captain Croft, Chief Engineer Pierce, Second Engineer Buchanan and Cook Rhoule remained on board. All others in the crew would have stayed aboard, but the captain was insistent they take to the boats.

CREW AT TOFINO

It was nightfall before the lifeboat reached the entrance to Clayoquot Sound and in darkness the seven of the crew made their way for nearly fourteen hours before putting into Tofino.

Meanwhile Captain Croft and his skelton crew worked at the disabled engines and it was only by the shifting of the wind and the fact that the engines worked astern a few minutes later that the vessel was saved from piling onto the reef, which could be discerned a half cable length distant. The Watco put into Riley's Cove to be later taken in tow of the Salvage Queen and towed to Victoria.

The Watco left Vancouver on Wednesday, November 21, docked at Port Alice, on Friday, and cleared that port Saturday for Stockton, California, with 310 tons of raw pulp in her cargo hold.

ENGINES DISABLED

The log of the Watco shows the vessel developed engine trouble off Estevan Point and ran south for several hours on three cylinders. On Sunday night off Bare Island the second cylinder gave out due to burned out bearings and the ship was forced to drift.

"Things looked very bad for us on Monday morning. The sea was running fairly high and there was a brisk wind. Conditions became worse on towards late afternoon and the captain considered there was little chance of saving the vessel. He commanded the crew to take to the boats, but we did not want to," said one of the members of the crew interviewed last night. "Seven of us went into the starboard boat and four remained aboard ship. We had a hard time of it, especially after dark because we could not see where we were going and we found ourselves nearing Tofino at daybreak. It was a tiring night and the weather was biting cold. I assure you we were glad to be on land again."

Second Engineer Buchanan, who remained aboard ship and with the aid of Captain Croft, the chief engineer and the cook, worked courageously to get the required pressure to start the engines. Meanwhile the vessel drifted closer toward the reefs, which dot the coastline at the entrance to Clayoquot Sound. They had almost given up when the wind changed suddenly and within a few minutes the engines were started astern. The vessel backed away from the reef and to safety.

That night the Watco steamed slowly southward and anchored in Riley's Cove, at 8:30 o'clock, Tuesday morning. The Watco will remain in port here for several days making repairs. The Watco is powered by Diesels of 320 horsepower. She is 110 feet long with twenty-two foot beam. She was built in 1919, and was formerly the Arran Firth. Practically all of the members of the crew are from Sydney, Nova Scotia, and joined the vessel at Vancouver.

WHEAT EXPERIMENTS HELP MIXED FARMING

and for export to the Orient. Results to date, however, indicate that a low protein should be grown only in the Southern Coast areas, including Vancouver Island, or under special conditions such as irrigation. Other sections surprised with the high protein percentage of their output, ranking with Manitoba number one Northern. Practically the whole province has been mapped for wheat production possibilities and another year will complete the field tests.

Vancouver Island, it is indicated, grows wheat suitable for poultry feed, the price of which has continued at an enhanced figure because of high freight rates. It is felt that the mixed farmer on the Island might turn his attention to a ready-money crop for the poultry-feed market.

STRIKING FEATURE

The co-operative feature of the effort is striking, involving the Dominion and Provincial Governments, the University of British Columbia, provincial district agriculturists and individual farmers. A provincial wheat committee is in charge under the chairmanship of Dr. G. G. Moe, professor of agronomy at the university, and other members are L. H. Newman, Dominion cerealist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa; W. H. Hicks, superintendent, Dominion Experimental Farm, Agassiz, B.C.; and C. Tice, field crop commissioner, Department of Agriculture, Victoria. The results are collated at the University of British Columbia.

Protein determinations are under the direction of Dr. W. F. Geddes, chemist in charge, grain exchange, Winnipeg. The experiments are being financed by the Dominion Experimental Farms on recommendation of Mr. Newman.

It has been found that, while low protein averages of from 7.66 to 9.25 are grown at Point Grey, Myncaster reported a yearly average as high as 16.45; Armstrong, 12.69; Salmon Arm, 13.32; and Rose Hill, Kamloops, 15.40. The latter place reported as high as 18.5.

ACREAGE IN PROVINCE

The acreage devoted to wheat in British Columbia is about 60,000 acres, composed of, approximately, 45,000 acres of Spring wheat and 15,000 acres of Fall wheat. The 1933 production was 1,317,000 bushels. There are four main areas: Kamloops; North Okanagan between Lakes Shuswap and Okanagan; the Bridesville and Myncaster area, lying between the Okanagan Osoyoos Valley area and Grand Forks, and adjacent to the United States boundary, and the Peace River district of British Columbia. There are smaller areas scattered throughout the province, such as the Princeton area, Bulkley Valley and the Coast. Results indicate that Fall wheats are better adapted to production in Southern British Columbia than are Spring varieties. The Peace River district, growing a major crop of hard Spring wheat, is regarded as falling within a different classification from the mixed farming areas of the rest of the province. The Peace geographically fits into the general picture of the Prairie situation.

Mills are located at various points at which wheat can be marketed, including Armstrong, Kamloops and Vancouver.

ASSISTING AGRICULTURISTS

The district agriculturists assisting in the work are George Challenger, Kamloops; G. L. Landon, Grand Forks; C. B. Twigg, Creston; M. S. Middleton, Vernon; Stanley French, Prince George, and Donald Sutherland, Smithers. E. M. Straight, superintendent of the Dominion Experimental Farm, Sidney, is also assisting in the experiments.

TREMENDOUS COLLECTIONS

The study has covered so many years, so many strains, so many soil and climate variations that the statistical accumulation of information is alone tremendous. To put it simply, however, the fact is that a farmer who wishes to put wheat growing into a proper relation to mixed farming, can learn what type of wheat he should grow. It is a mixed-farming proposition with a ready-cash appeal. There is no idea of making the Province wheat-conscious or a drive towards quickly increased acreage. It is for the individual farmer, with information now available to him, to decide what proportion of his land he can profitably put to wheat to give him ready money. There is a greater home market available than is being used, both from a milling viewpoint, and for poultry-feed use.

here. We are really going to fly to Australia."

RADIO EQUIPMENT

Two sets of radio equipment, long and short - wave, and radiophone facilities for conversation with ground stations, are part of the plane's equipment. A robot will keep the plane on its course while the pilots relax.

Nautical - mile distances of the route planned are: Oakland to Honolulu, 2,408; Honolulu to Fanning Island, where a new field has been prepared for the flight, 1,211; to Suva, Fiji Islands, 2,255; to Auckland, N.Z., 1,321; to New Plymouth, 160, and to Sydney, N.S.W., home of Ulm and his crew, 1,332 miles.

"The primary object of the flight is a further demonstration that long-distance flying is feasible, that modern aircraft has reduced the hazards of over-water fying. We hope to instill confidence in the flying public," Ulm said.

USE CHRISTMAS SEALS

Next week, many thousands of letters will be delivered throughout Victoria and district, containing tuberculosis Christmas seals. They sell for one dollar a sheet or one cent each. The money obtained annually in this way is used by the Kiwanis Club of Victoria to fight tuberculosis in Victoria and district.

SUPPORTS HUNGARY

Hungary and Italy politically are semi-allies, united by a pact which requires each to consult the other before taking any step that would react upon the other power. When the Jugoslav demand comes before the League Assembly, the Government has indicated that they will act together.

With Jugoslavia will be her allies of the Little Entente, Rumania and Czechoslovakia, which [illegible] her memorandum to the League. Foreign Minister Bogolub Yevtich consulted the foreign ministers of the other members of the Little Entente, and they agreed to back the Jugoslav demand.

REFUSE INQUIRY

If Jugoslavia seeks to force extension of the investigation to within the borders of Italy, will the Rome Government permit it? High official circles reply: "Certainly not." Hungary might be more amenable, but it is considered probable that, with Italian backing, she will adopt the same attitude.

The result, it is predicted here, will be a deadlock, and the aftermath of the accusations and counter-accusations, bad feeling.

Jugoslavia's action before the League pushes farther into the background any possibility of Italo-Jugoslav rapprochement, and therefore influences the efforts for Italo-French understanding.

INTERNATIONAL ACTUALITIES

The actualities of any situation are what ought to guide the decisions of statesmen. For some reason, in respect to international affairs, those actualities appear to be lost sight of, or at least they become so beclouded by conferences and pour parlers as to present no clear vision to the public eye. There is the case of the interrelation of the League of Nations and the Treaty of Versailles. The League, deny it who may, was embedded in the Treaty, was incorporated as it were with it, and the extent of the influence of the League depends on its ability to enforce the decrees which stand as the verdict of the Allied Nations on the outcome of the Great War. The fact is that the Treaty of Versailles, if not as yet actually reduced to a scrap of paper, has badly frayed edges. Reparations from Germany have gone by the board; Germany is re-arming in contravention of the Treaty; her present Government, when its policies are matured, is determined to leave of the Treaty not even the shreds and patches.

One of the latter day failings of masses of people whose mentality has been bemused by propaganda of one kind or another is a tendency to burke issues and to sidestep facts of situations in the international realm. That is because of the character of "internationalism" that is preached. The late President Wilson of the United States was the author of the League of Nations. Paradoxically enough one of his Fourteen Points was self-determination, whereas the League has developed on the lines of action which tend to destroy this principle in national affairs. It is exactly the same with Disarmament Conferences which are children of the League. The main actuality of the situation, regrettable as it is, is that the operations of an international body built up with peaceful aspirations have not softened the asperities of international politics. They have not insured universal peace.

Those who were instrumental in framing the League of Nations and in defining the terms of the Treaty of Versailles were not those who foresaw and prepared for the Great War. They were wholly well-intentioned, it is true, in treaty-making idealism with the object of putting a new diplomacy into effect. In no respect, however, does the operation of this form of "internationalism" seem to have removed the strain and stress of national differences. Europe remains an armed camp. The Disarmament Conference has failed. The League has suffered two major defections among the nations in the absence from its counsels of Japan and Germany. The former deserted because of League interference with the doctrine of self-determination. The latter is a deserter in preparation for scrapping the Treaty of Versailles which, in these latter years, the League has made little attempt to enforce. These are the actualities of the situation affecting "internationalism." They are not being faced squarely. It is action not propaganda that decides the course of destiny. Great talkers are never great doers.

THE MORAL CHOICE

There is some danger in the modern trend of education that a right proportion is not being maintained between scientific and humanistic knowledge. It may be possible that at one time education was too literary; the problem now is that it may have swung too far in the scientific direction. Science submits things to laboratory tests. Those matters of life, the imponderables and invisibles, such as friendship, fellowship and loyalty, cannot be measured. It would be well if, in any and all schemes of education, sufficient stress is laid on those things that affect the course of conduct and that may have little or nothing to do with knowledge. Too much attention to science is held, in some quarters at least, to blunt thought and sensitiveness regarding the truest values in life.

Man has a dual nature. He has that which confines him to material preoccupations; there are as well the immortal longings of his soul. There is thus an issue of quantity and quality, a duality in human outlook that must be recognized in envisioning life as a whole. The scientific task in education is largely, if not altogether, confined to one part of the amalgam. It is limited by the quantitative tether. It wants to know the "how" of everything and leaves all too severely alone the question of "why." The issue of the "how" and "why" is the perplexing element in many lives, apart from education as well as concerned with it. It is a matter of finding a balance between material needs and spiritual aspirations. Those who claim that they have no need for religion since they are too much occupied with keeping body and soul together must recognize, in deeper moments of thought, that one of the component parts of the human make-up is being starved. If life is to be truly lived both must be sustained and one part has far more capable powers of development than the other.

The outlook that calls for all concentration on material needs breeds the canker of self-centreness. It denies that there is a soul as well as a body, that there is form as well as matter, that there is quality as well as quantity. No one, however self-centred, is free all the time from making a choice which involves the constituents of the human amalgam. It is true that in some lives the moral choice, when it clashes with self-interest, too often goes by the board, but even those who reject the better way know in their hearts that there must be some ends that are intrinsically higher than others, and that those ends in the scale of judgment cannot be determined by laboratory tests. Where the wrong choice is made there is the condemnation of an accusing conscience. Wrong choices ruin the development of character, for each decision in life between material ends and spiritual aspirations, between quantity and quality, has its effect upon those silent forces which mould the future.

It is habit that tends to fetter choice, and the extent to which it is permitted more and more to govern decisions affects the extent of the mark that is left on personality. There is grave seriousness in choice where the religious life is concerned. It is true that life is made up of choices in little things. These are what are decided in a period of probation, a training ground for larger decisions that sway and govern the development of character and personality. There is the quality of moral action to be found in choices both great and small. Consistence in choice of the lower in preference to the higher atrophies the moral sense; it means that there is a darkening of the vision regarding spiritual values; a loss of power in appreciating them. There is the danger, above all, that repeated bad choices in the issues that arise will mean that the voice of conscience, because resolutely ignored, will become silent. The conception in the human heart that life is so full of interest, that all its pleasures must be enjoyed if its full values are to be attained, may well tempt the devotees of this creed to forget that such a course may not mean development of an inner harmony and consistency of character. The call for a decision between competing aims produces a tension in life for all those who are not governed by the desire to serve God and fellow-men most effectively. That tension is between a Christian society with the higher standards and the paganism of materialism with which that society is surrounded. In life there must be selflessness at times. The Cross stands as the symbol of self-abnegation and self-denial.

The issues at stake between quality and quantity are not speculative but practical. They affect the whole development of the personality. The right choice braces men and women to renewed moral and spiritual vigor. It ought to be a high pursuit to bring moral power to its fullest development; to admit the claims of faith and what they can accomplish; to realize that unbelief is bankruptcy of character, for if spiritual powers are neglected or weakened there is nothing left to meet the last great accounting. Faith may cost much in the way of self-sacrifice, but it has abounding recompenses, and one of these is that it makes the present life to be lived one in which the world is to be disciplined to the purposes of a higher life where Everlasting Love is enthroned. Whatever the distractions that prevail, however great preoccupation may be in the search for satisfaction of material needs, it is well always to remember that by the conscious exercise of spiritual faculties there is all that is ultimately worth while to be won—"The world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever."

THE LESSON OF THE RACE

When the motor that bore him touched fifty—a wonder new-born.
A mere cruising-speed as our up-to-date motorists know it;

And, spurred by that urgent desire to speed faster and faster,
Of the realm that so long was unconquered the absolute master,
Exultantly leaving all avian records behind.

Three days and three nights and the goal of his hopes lies before him.
To the ends of the earth in his triumph the airman has ranged,
And by man in his pride and the wonderful engine that bore him
In one generation the face of the world has been changed.

For good or for ill, it has changed and, an island no longer.
We know that if foes should attack us no soul would be spared.
And the arm that alone can defend us is all unprepared.

OVERBURDENED TAXPAYERS

Searching around for something that can be taxed more heavily than it is taxed, with a prospect of getting any large revenue, is in the present state of general impoverishment a good deal like the game of "Who's got the button?" What proportion of the people of Alberta have anything on which they can afford to pay the taxes they are already paying, to say nothing about paying part of what somebody else is paying? That is the question of first importance. Levying taxes on vanished incomes is no more productive than making levies on real estate whose value has also vanished.—Edmonton Bulletin.

News and Nonsense

By M. A. B.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn, after warring on various groups and classes in his own province, is entering upon an attack against the British North America Act, the structure of British parliamentary institutions, and the traditions of centuries. He wishes to abolish the office of Lieutenant-Governor. In this effort Mr. Hepburn is not likely to succeed. Talk and theatricals may accomplish much in the field of provincial politics, but they are not very effective when it comes to upsetting the system of government, patterned after that of Great Britain, adopted by the Fathers of Confederation, and approved by Her Majesty Queen Victoria. In the first place, in order to make his proposed legislation effective, Mr. Hepburn would require the Royal assent. Lieutenant-Governor Bruce, of Ontario, represents His Majesty, and has no authority to sign any bill to abrogate the rights of the King. Premier Hepburn knows this quite well. It is probable that the dynamic politician is merely making a gesture, knowing full well that it will come to nothing. He found that with a certain class at the hustings it was popular to denounce continuance of the office, and he intends to demonstrate that failure to maintain his pre-election pledges is not due to any lack of effort on his part. It may be good politics in Ontario, but it is a dangerous part to play.

It is gratifying to learn that in practically all departments of Government, receipts are higher than anticipated. Gasoline revenues for October established a record; liquor profits, as already noted, were most satisfactory, and fuel oil levies were substantial. These items all bear evidence of the gradual improvement of conditions in British Columbia.

Vancouver police have destroyed fingerprint records of Walter Sturdy, chiropractic practitioner. Mr. Sturdy was convicted of practising his profession before the Legislature made chiropractic legal within the province. Mr. Sturdy, who is highly regarded as a citizen of Vancouver, had a right to demand that records that identified him with the criminal class should be obliterated from the police files. If fingerprinting was general there would be no objection to the authorities holding the records, but when only those who are convicted in police or assize courts are so identified, the situation is one that honest men dislike. It would appear to be a wise policy to fingerprint the entire nation. If every person provided such a record of identity, a great deal of good might result. Missing persons could be more easily located, and mistakes in identification in many ways could be avoided. It might save the John Smiths and Jim Jones of Canada much annoyance, especially those who are not more readily established by occupations or well-known addresses.

Santa Claus made his official appearance in Victoria, yesterday. The hundreds of happy, excited little boys and girls who welcomed the representation of the spirit of Christmas, were as a tonic to older folk. There are some persons, so devoid of human understanding and sympathy, that they would abolish the fiction of Santa Claus. They are to be pitied. When the day arrives that sees the abolition of fairy stories and kindred legends, and children have no world of pretence in which to let their active imaginations wander, this will be a drab and sorry world. The tendency of modern biographers is to "debunk" the records of the great. They delight in smashing idols. This is a sad state of affairs, but let us preserve the illusion of children, and especially regarding old Santa Claus.

The Fraser River is to be bridged again. The former Government decided that another artery was essential for traffic entering Vancouver, so a plan was devised to build a span from Ladner to Lulu Island. New Westminster, which has the present bridge, bitterly opposed this, and the new administration listened with sympathy to the protest. It was then decided to build the bridge higher up the river, in the vicinity of New Westminster, but this displeased a section of Vancouver. Now the Government, with Solomon-like wisdom, has decided to satisfy both communities, so has signed an agreement to build the Ladner bridge as well. So, the traveling public, that was dissatisfied with one bridge, and couldn't agree on the site for another, will have three bridges, and it is to be hoped that everyone will be satisfied. Now, if the Government wants to complete the picture of peace and plenty, it will immediately start construction of the much-needed highway to Long Beach, and one or two other public works required on Vancouver Island to meet the requirements of the traveling public.

tions of the East are also experiencing the rigors of Winter. In Victoria the roses are blooming on Parliament Square, and the broom is in blossom on Mount Tolmie and about Oak Bay. Truly, we in Victoria have many things for which to be thankful. Our Winter is so short that we look for the appearance of Spring flowers at the end of February, and usually long before Winter loosens its grip on the more opulent East, Spring has been long established here.

What's New In Bookland

By MARION I. ANGUS

"The White Reef" (Dodd, Mead Company of Canada), by Martha Ostenso.

During one of those sleepless hours that sometimes come between midnight and dawn, when the fog horn was wailing eerily and monotonously, and the world outside your reviewer's window was shrouded in a thick, mysterious whiteness, this book was picked up with the hope that after a few chapters merciful sleep would come. But—from the first page—that hope was effectually banished. There was the fascination of unusual words depicting familiar things — "the tide," described the author, "was cat-footing it out . . ."—there was a poetic diction that was almost intoxicating, and there were familiar places wrapped in romance.

"The White Reef" is a story of life in a little fishing village on the West Coast of Vancouver Island. Unfortunately, your reviewer is not sufficiently familiar with the West Coast to know just what, if any, definite settlement is meant. But the atmosphere is definitely West Coast—the people are distinctly types that are to be met in isolated places—their ideas of morality are the results of their environment.

Nona Darnell, daughter of an Irishman and a white-haired Norwegian woman, is the heroine of this vivid story. As it opens, she has just run away from Heartbreak Cove with Quentin Wingate, the son of a rich man. The gossips of the small village are provided with a very juicy titbit, and Nona's future is discussed with relish, charitably and uncharitably, by the old women of both sexes. The Darnell family is wrapped in suitable gloom and are awaiting word by the "Princess" as to whether Quentin has made an honest woman of Nona or not.

Nona returns on the boat, five days later, embittered yet wiser, and Ivar Hansen offers her honorable marriage. Nona refuses, although she knows she is going to have a child.

As the years pass, Nona's heart is still filled with hatred, although her little son, Silas, is an adorable child. Life in the cove is limited by the narrow morality of its inhabitants and superstitions concerning the ghosts of Spaniards who had sailed up the West Coast in the days of Quadra. The people of the cove believe that the Spanish ghosts were, if not malignant, at least possessive, so they are not surprised that, on the night Nona's betrayer returned, her son is drowned off the White Reef.

Quentin's efforts to re-establish his fishing plant, the sinister influence that resisted his efforts, Nona's grief for the loss of her son and the gradual death of her hatred for Quentin form a story of power and drama. The sea forms a vital and impressive backdrop and the minor characters are depicted with life-like reality.

"Having Crossed the Channel" (Ryerson), by M. X. Boulestin.

If one can't travel, one's next best bet is to read travel books. This chatty little book takes the reader into out-of-the-way spots of Europe where the tourist has not yet left his mark. Northern France has little appeal for the author, but Bordeaux and its surrounding vineyards excite his warmest appreciation. He tells of the simple eating houses, and the picturesque Basque villages in a way that makes the reader feel almost as if he was there—an onlooker on a pleasant, satisfactory way of living.

Spain, Amsterdam, Brussels, etc., are described in an interesting manner, with the more objectionable features of each place lightly ignored.

Food, and rightly, occupies a great deal of the authors' thought and his appreciation of good food is as aesthetic in its own way as another person's appreciation of beauty in flesh, painting, poetry, etc.

A delightful evening entertainment may be obtained from this informal little book, and it would be an especially good book for two or more congenial souls to have read aloud and discussed while reading.

"Peace With Honor" (E. P. Dutton-McClelland & Stewart), by A. A. Milne.

Few people who have had any connection with the Great War, directly or indirectly, will dispute Mr. Milne's assertion that war is wrong. Unfortunately, most people see no immediate solution of this ever-recurring problem, and the general consensus of opinion is that the only way to prevent war is for a nation to be armed more than other nations, so that it will be aggressive enough to prevent invasion. This, the author claims, is a passive attitude that will not eliminate war.

"It is not," says the author, "enough, nor is it true, to say 'It has always been so.' We, the general public, as well as statesmen, prelates and rulers, must definitely make up our minds that there will be no more war.

The book is brilliantly logical, many of the arguments being presented in the form of imaginary conversations with persons either sympathetic to or interested in Mr. Milne's expositions. His defence of peace is absolute, and his indictment of war is scathing and bitter.

All those who contribute either through passive acquiescence or through active participation of any kind in the preparation for or the defence of war, come under his bitter denunciation. All arguments, both new and old, are answered and a plan for the eternal abolishment of war is presented.

New books, some of which will be reviewed in this column later: "The White Monk of Timbuctoo," W. B. Seabrook; "Pitcairn's Island," Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall; "Murder in the Opera House," Queena Mario; "The Proud Servant," Margaret Irwin; "The World in Birth," Romain Rolland; "Beside a Norman Tower," Mazo de la Roche; "Candy," L. M. Alexander; "Challenge," Upton Close.

Members Hear Much Of Red Cross Work

(Contributed)

Two visitors to Victoria during last week have contributed much of interest to Red Cross members and sympathizers. They were Mrs. Plumptre, of Toronto, who passed this way on her return from the International Red Cross Conference, held at Tokio, and Miss Birley, from Peace River, who brought three crippled children down to the Solarium. Miss Birley has been called "The Florence Nightingale of the North," having given her services to the sick and distressed for years before the Red Cross outposts were started up there—"and great fun it was," she cheerily affirmed. Her home is near Fort St. John, (Miss Claxton's part of the country), and she is a great friend and admirer of our plucky little Red Cross nurse. That severe north country would seem to attract a wonderfully fine type of women who literally go about doing good, giving their time and means to help the settlers and their children.

It was cheering to learn that many of the people up there insist on giving what they have in exchange for clothing; thus a load of wood, some butter, or vegetables, are often available for those who lack these things. The wool from the few sheep in the country is made into a thick yarn and knitted up by the women, who are also experimenting in making dyes.

Miss Claxton's last report tells of seventy-one hospital days in October in a two-bed hospital, besides 169 visits made.

SOS calls have been received from Miss Claxton and Miss Dunn for baby clothes, and two large parcels were sent up by mail last week. The babies must be the best-dressed people up there, judging by the lovely things sent in.

Those who heard Mrs. Plumptre—a really distinguished Canadian speaker—at a meeting of the Women's Canadian Club speak on the international aspect of the Red Cross, must have been encouraged to carry on in their service to this great human society — 14,000,000 adults "serving" in sixty countries, and 13,000,000 juniors in fifty countries helping children less fortunate than themselves, and learning to know each other better.

Mrs. Plumptre regretted that so little was known of the meaning of the Red Cross. Someone had said that the "Red Cross means war" the very thing which the Red Cross does not mean. Whenever this flag is shown, even in time of war, there is a zone of peace around it.

The speaker told of the part taken by the Red Cross in forstering and protecting the famous Dionne quintuplets, saying that she did not know if it was looked upon as a disaster, but it certainly was an emergency. Securing authority from the Attorney-General of Ontario, the Red Cross took complete charge with the kindly doctor at the little outpost hospital.

Space does not permit of more about the conference this week, but there is a thrilling story of the 5,000 juniors of Tokio gathered in one place to bring their greetings.

Anxious to obtain information that would help him in jury trials, a young lawyer asked an elderly man, who had served as juror many times, who influenced him most, lawyers, witnesses or judge.

"Well, I'll tell you how I make up my mind," the old juror replied. "I'm a plain man and a reasonin' man, and I ain't influenced by anything the lawyers say; no, nor by what the witnesses say; no, nor by what the judge says. I just looks at the man in the dock, and I says: 'If he ain't done nothing, why's he here?' And I brings 'em all in guilty."

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY

(From The Daily British Colonist of December 2, 1884)

Smuggler Seized—At 5 o'clock yesterday, Customs Officer R. Hunter, with four others, captured the small sloop, Fleetwing, of, about five tons register, for smuggling grain into British territory. The grain had been discharged and sold to a Chinese who owns a ranch on Foul Bay Road. The grain, as well as the boat, will be seized.

Naval Notes—H.M.S. Mutine will sail at 8 o'clock this morning for the Southern station, via San Francisco. She will not return to this station. H.M.S. Swiftsure will meet her relief in or near the Straits of Magellan.

Wagon Smashed Up—About 8 o'clock yesteday morning, a horse attached to a milk wagon became frightened by some object on Government Street and ran away. At the corner of Government and Johnson Streets, the horse ran into a post, upsetting the wagon and consequently spilling a lot of milk. The wagon was badly damaged, but the horse was uninjured.

Weather Notes—The weather along the C.P. Railway on the Mainland has been most favorable for construction, it being very warm and pleasant, with very little snow. A heavy southwest wind prevailed all day yesterday. However, it was a warm wind, with not one breath of frost in it.

ALL SAINTS

"All Saints." I love that all-embracing name,
The muster of those good souls gone to rest,
Who sought no honor and who won no fame,
But lived that others might through them be blessed.

The living saints, and not the dead alone,
Are with us, too, had we but eyes to see,
Their steps unnoticed and their names unknown
Their good deeds done in silent sanctity.

Some fond old mother broken with the years
Of loving service for a thankless brood,
Is glorified upon her household rood.

Who dreams of God among life's sordid things,
Than the small souls of millionaires and kings.

Or some kind neighbor in the noisome slums,
Her name unknown but to the suffering poor,
Yet gently as the morning light she comes Stealing in mercy through each opened door.

These wear no shining robes or glittering rings,
Their kind deeds sown among life's daily things
Like sweet flowers springing from the lowly soil.

Such living saints, the homeliest and the best,
In many a heart shine radiant, loved and blest,
The lights of God—the true salt of the earth.

The time used is Pacific standard for the 120th Meridian west. It is counted from 0 to 24 hours, from midnight to midnight. The figures for height serve to distinguish high water from low water. Where blanks occur in the table, the tide rises or falls continuously during two successive tidal periods without turning.

To find the depth of water on the sill of the Esquimalt drydock, add 18.9 feet to the height of high water as above given.

CHRISTMAS FARE SHOWN AT MARKET

Plum Puddings, Mincemeat, Turkeys and Geese Displayed on Stalls—Trade Good

A pre-Christmas atmosphere prevailed yesterday at the Victoria Public Market, as stall proprietors displayed their first assortment of Yuletide suggestions.

Chrysanthemums and other flowers in season added color to a gay shopping crowd, which thronged the market during the day.

Plum puddings, mincemeat, turkeys and geese were perhaps the features. Meat stalls, of course, had table birds, but one or two stalls, specializing particularly in this brand of produce, had tantalizing arrays of chickens, ducks, geese and turkeys, locally grown and of excellent quality.

Fancy prepared meats, home-cooked delicacies and other similar items enjoyed a fair turnover during market hours.

URGES STATE HEALTH PLAN

Dr. H. M. Cassidy Addresses Greater Victoria Teaching Body at Luncheon

State health insurance, covering employees, their wives and dependents, on a broad basis, including cash benefits, medical and dental services, hospitalization, nursing service, preventive work among children, and co-ordination of medical services, was advocated yesterday by Dr. H. M. Cassidy, director of social welfare, for the Province, in a luncheon address before the Lower Island District Teachers' Council. W. H. Wilson presided, upwards of 150 teachers of the Greater Victoria area attending the function, held in the Empress Hotel.

Preventive medicine was beginning to be realized as the key to public health, Dr. Cassidy stated. This involved adequate home care and proper guidance in the schools, to inculcate in growing children reasonable practices in respect to health and sanitation. Criminality, it had developed, was often the result of juvenile delinquency, the latter traceable to lack of supervision of the child at adolescent stages.

BRITISH SCHEME

Health insurance had been recommended by Royal Commission in British Columbia, and it was fair to examine how the plan worked in other countries, the speaker continued. In Britain, state health insurance had been the outgrowth of guild and private benefit societies, some with a membership of more than a million persons. The scheme was ratified by statute in 1911, and went into effect in 1912, with some 16,500,000 beneficiaries enrolled.

Costs were split three ways, between State, employer and employee. The employer and employee paid nine cents weekly, "health" stamps bought at the postoffice going on the payroll. To these contributions the State added whatever additional sum became necessary. The cash benefits were fifteen shillings weekly for a limited period, supplemented by medical supplies and medical services under a panel system.

Bitterly resisted when unknown and new, the British system was now generally endorsed in principle, while 20,000 physicians were wholeheartedly behind the plan, Dr. Cassidy continued. Working out of the scheme had been assisted by organized benefit societies, serving also as a useful check on abuses in operation.

WOULD INCLUDE ALL

The British scheme of State health insurance "could be improved, the speaker said, by making it applicable also to the wives of beneficiaries, and their dependents, from which groups arose most of the ordinary expense of ill health. To be effective, a British Columbia scheme should cover all dependents.

The British scheme did not provide hospitalization, nursing service or dental service, and was open to major objections on these grounds. It lacked, also, adequate provision for preventive work to avoid ill health; and was notable for the success it had achieved in spite of lack of co-ordination of the medical services of the country, and a hodge-podge of unrelated efforts in social welfare, Dr. Cassidy declared.

While Canada had been without the same opportunities for the organization of communal life in a group way as had occurred in Britain, much could be learned from the British scheme from its achievements, and by a study of its omissions.

PRINCIPLE ESTABLISHED

Workmen's compensation and group insurance had demonstrated what could be done by the banding of groups to provide mutual protection. Closer attention to old age pensions, health insurance and unemployment insurance were immediate problems demanding studied approach at this time.

Group protection against illness, for the lower salaried workers, could be tackled intelligently, with every reason to believe initial difficulties could be surmounted, Dr. Cassidy declared. British Columbia was the first province in Canada to contemplate action on State health insurance, and its efforts were being watched at Geneva, he concluded.

Captain F. F. Dexter, of Oak Bay, introduced the speaker, who received a cordial vote of thanks at the close of his address.

Clover Point Lifeboat Given Tryout

—Photograph by William B. Young.

MANY GREET SANTA CLAUS

More Than 2,000 Children and Adults Attend Hudson's Bay Play Here

Santa Claus arrived from the North Pole, yesterday, and greeted more than two thousand Victoria children and adults, in the Capitol Theatre. Santa Claus came to this city by airplane, through special communications and arrangements made by the Hudson's Bay Company.

Santa took a major part in a delightful Christmas show staged by Miss Violet Fowkes, for the Hudson's Bay. Music was supplied by Miss Jessie Jones, A.L.C.M., at the piano, and C. C. Warren at the organ.

There was such a huge response to Santa's arrival that two performances were necessary to accommodate the 2,000 persons. Preceding the Christmas show were two short films, "Our Gang Comedy" and a Walt Disney Silly Symphony.

WORKSHOP SETTING

When the curtain went up, the scene was shown to be Santa's own workshop, at the North Pole. Three large packing cases, labeled for Vancouver, Toronto and Winnipeg, were arranged across the stage, with petite and appropriately-costumed attendants.

The packing cases were opened and all the toys declared they would not go anywhere but to Toyland, at the Victoria Hudson's Bay Store. "Sniggy," the shop foreman, played by Marian Wingate, wound the respective toys and each did a turn for the audience.

Later, "George," the porter, played by Arthur Groves, led the entire audience in singing "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town." Santa then made his appearance and from a large book read the names of many Victoria kiddies.

CLEVER DANCES

Barbara Groves, as "Rosebud," a fairy, sang about the "Angel Cake Lady and the Ginger Bread Man." She was followed by Dorothy Graham, as the tap-dancing "Jack-in-Box," and June Gibson and Yvonne Simpson as the two walking dolls, who performed a cane tape dance.

The diminutive Christmas tree ornament, Shirlee Anderson, dressed in a glittering blue dress, offered a toe dance, after which Matie Griffin danced the part of an Indian doll. "Tiny Tootsie," the very tiniest doll of all, was Shiela Groves.

The eight Sparkly Hoop Girls, brought to the North by George, the porter, were Mary Burgess, Eva Jones, Patsy Jordan, Eileen Griffin, Marjorie Newman, Betty Waldron, "Mabs" Pinnington and Eileen Munroe.

In the finale of the play, the words, "The Bay Toyland," were spelled out by thirteen letters and two spaces, by Frances Farmer, Leslie Sargeant, Patsy Hines, Nettie Robertson, Ruby Craigie, Beverly Hamilton, Betty Cameron, Marguerite Munn, "Happy" Ross, Victor Palmer, Maxine Simpson, Lois Simpson, Norah Rushworth, Thelma Keradimus and Allie May Stevenson.

Storied Spots From Sea to Sea

WINDMILL POINT

The Canadian rebels of 1837-38 had enthusiastic supporters across the border. Throughout the northeastern states, secret societies known as "Hunters' Lodges" were formed, members taking an oath "never to rest until all tyrants of Great Britain cease to have any dominion or footing whatever in North America." A number of raids were organized on American territory, and bands of filibusters kept annoying the Canadian authorities by incursions from across the border during the years 1838-39. So powerful were anti-British influences in the United States that the American Government took little effective action, at first, towards checking these illegal enterprises.

The most important of the raids was that made across the St. Lawrence, at Prescott, in November, 1838, under a Polish exile named Nicholas von Schultz. He seems to have been a well-meaning man, who had been misled into believing that Canada was suffering under a tyranny like that of the Tsars in his own land. Crossing over from Ogdensburg, the raiders took possession of a stone windmill. Reinforcements, which tried to join them, were beaten off by armed vessels, and troops soon captured the mill. Von Schultz and nine companions were hanged on the Fort Hill, at Kingston. One of the lawyers who defended them was a young man called John A. Macdonald.

The mill is said to have been erected by a West Indian merchant, named Hughes, in 1832. Several similar buildings graced the banks of the St. Lawrence in the same period, but were soon superseded by water-driven mills. In 1873, the structure was converted into a lighthouse, and still stands as a commanding landmark on "Windmill Point," near the main highway a mile and a half east of Prescott. Over the entrance a table commemorates "The Battle of the Windmill" and the men who were killed in capturing the mill.

NOMINATION DAY IS NEAR

Sixteen Candidates in Field for Ten Vacancies—No Opposition to Mayor

With nomination day next Thursday, there are sixteen candidates in the field and contests assured in two of the four divisions. As yet no candidate has definitely announced himself in opposition to Mayor David Leeming, while the by-election to fill the one-year vacancy on the school board has but one candidate.

W. H. Sargent said he might run for mayor, but his candidature so far is problematical. Mr. Sargent has sought an aldermanic seat on several occasions, but has not been successful yet.

Kenneth Ferguson, a former trustee, is the only aspirant thus far for the one-year term on the school board. Nomination day for the by-election does not occur until December 10.

COUNCIL ASPIRANTS

For the aldermanic board there are exactly ten aspirants for the five vacancies. This means two contestants for each seat. The candidates are as follows: Aldermen James Adam, Dr. J. D. Hunter, Andrew McGavin and Walter Luney; Edward Williams, Mrs. Alice McGregor, F. J. Crowhurst, Walter Inward, Ernest E. Bragg and Arthur Hinder.

For the three two-year terms on the school board there are four candidates. They are Trustees W. C. Moresby, K.C., and P. E. George, and Mrs. D. L. MacLaurin and Alexander Marshall.

Nomination papers will be received in the council chamber between the hours of 12 o'clock noon and 2 p.m., on Thursday. M. F. Hunter, city clerk and returning officer, will be present during that period. The election will be held on Thursday, December 13.

CHILD HURT IN ODD ACCIDENT

Ronald Cornell, aged three years, of 1739 Lee Avenue, who was injured in an odd accident on Lee Avenue, Friday morning, left the Jubilee Hospital yesterday, and returned home. His injuries were confined to facial cuts.

The accident occurred when Mrs. H. M. Rochon, of Saanichton, driving her automobile along the avenue, noticed the boy sitting on the curb. After she had passed him, she heard a yell. She stopped her car, and getting out found that the boy had been dragged a short distance by her machine.

Apparently the boy was tied to a rope, which had been fastened to a post on the opposite side of the road to that on which he was sitting. As the car passed over the rope, the line became entangled in the wheels of the car.

EX-OUTLAWS TO BE STRONGEST

Indian Election Returns Give Independence Party Largest Group

NEW DELHI, India, Dec. 1 (AP). —The erstwhile outlawed National Congress "Independence Party" will have easily the largest group in the Lower House of the new Indian Legislative Assembly, latest returns in the triennial elections indicated today.

There is no chance of the Government being outvoted, however, because of the large bloc of official designates to the Assembly.

The Congress, allowed to resume normal activities only this year, after being banned during the Mahatma Gandhi's latest campaign, and its allies, will hold virtually half the elective seats. The forty officially nominated members, among them Government officials, will insure continued Government control.

THE STANDING

With eleven results still to be announced before December 10, the standing is:

Congress Party, forty-six; Malaviya Nationalists, eight; Independent Moslems, twenty-one; Europeans, eight, Moslem Conference, six; Unity Board, four, others, two; doubtful, eleven; total, 106.

Twenty-six officials and fourteen nonofficial members nominated directly by the viceroy, complete the Chamber of 146.

Worship Object of Music in Churches Says Noted Visitor

Dr. Sydney Nicholson, Former Organist at Westminster Abbey, Addresses Big Audience at Memorial Hall on History of Choir Music

The whole object of music in churches, the whole objective of improvement in choir singing, is the worship of God. It is not to fill the church; it is not to make the services attractive; it is not to please the choir; but it is to assist the worshippers, in corporate capacity, the better to worship God in the greater dignity and beauty of the church service.

Dr. Sydney Nicholson, director of the School of English Church Music, emphasized this point in the course of the very fascinating and erudite talk that he gave last evening, at Memorial Hall, on "In Choirs and Places Where They Sing." The interest of this was aptly supplemented by motets and hymns sung by Christ Church Cathedral Choir, under Stanley Bulley's direction; some gramophone records, which were recordings of singing by Westminster Abbey and the Chapel Royal Choirs, and a number of lantern slides, picturing some of the early monasteries, boy bishops and their processionals in the Middle Ages; some of the early and later English composers and organists of note.

PRAISES CHOIR

Particularly flattering to an audience largely composed of members of the Cathedral congregation, was Dr. Nicholson's commendation of the singing of their choir. "You should be very proud of your choir," he told them as the singers returned to their seats, after singing a motet of the early part of the sixteenth century, "Ave Verum." Going round the Empire, he had, he said, heard very few choirs that could sing the music so well as he had heard it last night. Later in the evening, endorsing the thanks tendered to the lecturer by George Carter, people's warden, Dean Quainton reminded the audience that the Cathedral was indebted to Dr. Nicholson for Stanley Bulley, whom he had sent out when Christ Church was seeking a new choirmaster. Some day the people would universally appreciate the fact that he had set a new standard for the Cathedral music.

HISTORIC BACKGROUND

Before taking up church music and choirs as they are known today, Dr. Nicholson gave a picture of the historic background, beginning a thousand years ago, in order to trace the origin of traditions "that should be carried on." The earliest reference to a choir dated back to the time of St. Augustine, who landed in England in 957, bringing with him, from Rome, singers with whom he established a school at Canterbury, with the idea of teaching boys to sing.

Wherever cathedrals were established, similar song schools were established, and the early monasteries were the cradle of all church music. At that time the work of praising God was considered to be the highest duty of man, and in order to give this praise, music was important. Dr. Nicholson described the evolution of the early form (without harmony, without time, and purely melodic) to the beginning of the sixteenth century "when music as we now know it first came into existence," with the advent of the modern scale, strict time, key, and harmony. The recital introduced many fascinating little glimpses into the lives of the boys themselves, the severity of the discipline being hinted in the history of frequent floggings, record of one such being quoted from an amusing dialogue, between master and pupil, preserved in the British Museum. In the reign of Richard II, too, it was the custom of the principal choirs, as at St. Paul's, to impress boys for service, just as men were impressed for service in the "press gang," patents Royal giving authority for these seizures of boys with voices.

MANNERS TAUGHT

In the singing schools definite codes of manners were laid down. Dr. Nicholson read from the regulations of boys' behavior at Wells Cathedral, a number of amusing clauses, one of which forbade the pupils to clean their teeth with their knives, while other instructions suggested the distribution of the boys in their beds with a view to economizing bed space, where several slept in one bed.

The curious and interesting practice of electing boy bishops who were given complete authority from the Festival of St. Nicholas, December 6, to Innocents' Day, was also touched upon. During this time boys actually took complete control, the child bishop even preaching the sermon on occasion. At a later date the practice became secularized, and from this arose the mystery plays and the beginnings of the drama in England.

The traditions connecting St. Nicholas with children and his place as patron saint of children were recalled, this being the origin of the name chosen for the College of St. Nicholas, Chislehurst, Kent, which is the workshop and resident school of the School of English Church Music. One of the pictures of this showed Dr. Nicholson with some of the resident boys.

SIXTEENTH CENTURY

The sixteenth century saw a great and progressive change in church music, as in many other things. In 1549, the first English prayer book was published, and from that time everything had to be sung in English. Fortunately, great composers were ready to write the music for the English words, the greatest of them all being William Bird. It was at this point that the Cathedral Choir sang the "Ave Verum," a striking contrast to the previously heard music, which consisted of a record of the early "Plain Song," and a record of two little motets of early harmonic music by Nicholas d'Ammit.

The clash between Puritanism, which in itself was a reaction, in part, to abuses that had crept into church music through the participation of choir boys in theatrical performances and m[illegible]s, and the more elaborate pleasure loving represented in Charles II and his court, was also reflected in the changes in music. The result of a visit to Paris of one of the choirboys from the Chapel Royal during Charles II's time was that music in this choir became much lighter than it had been. A picture was shown of the Chapel Royal Choir about the time of the Restoration, when both men and boys wore full-bottom wigs, and just about the same time a picture of the modern Chapel Royal Choir in the dress which it wore at Westminster Abbey a few days ago at the royal wedding. An example of music by Purcell, "the first great choir master," was his anthem, "Rejoice in the Lord," a recording by the Westminster Abbey Choir, this following the singing by the Cathedr[illegible] Choir of John Blow's "Let Thy Hand Be Strengthened," written for the coronation of James II. Anoth[illegible] very beautifully sung number by the Cathedral Choir here was Stanford's "Glorious and Powerful God," illustrating modern chu[illegible] music.

WAS BURIED YESTERDAY

Many sympathizing friends attended the funeral of the late Miss Annie Jenkinson, held yesterday afternoon, Rev. A. de B. Owen conducting the service. The hymn sung was "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." The casket and hearse were covered with beautiful floral offerings. The following acted as pallbearers: F. Partridge, F. Holland, R. Clelland and R. Hayward, Jr. The remains were laid at rest in Royal Oak Burial Park.

Gyro Christmas Hamper Campaign Starts Soon

Series of Radio Concerts and Royal Victoria Theatre Entertainment by Home Gas Organizations Mediums Through Which Appeals Are Made

Preparations for the conducting of an intensive campaign to raise funds for the Gyro Christmas hamper campaign are drawing to a close, Archie Wills, member of the committee in charge of the arrangements, announced yesterday.

In keeping with the policy that every cent that is donated will be put into the hampers, the Gyro Club has been successful in securing a large-sized store, on the corner of Yates and Vancouver Streets, where contributions to the fund will be received and the hampers assembled.

Telephones will be installed to take subscriptions telephoned by those who wish to pledge themselves to specific amounts, while a series of radio concerts has been arranged so that a general appeal can be made to the public.

The radio concert series will start on December 11 and will continue for ten nights, various merchants and business firms in the city having sponsored one programme each.

THEATRE ENGAGED

In addition to these radio concerts, Mr. Wills announced that the Gyros had been fortunate in obtaining the Home Gas Orchestra, under the leadership of Calvin Winters, and the Optimists, who will put on a joint programme of entertainment, at the Royal Victoria Theatre, on the night of December 17, when appeals for the Christmas hamper fund will be made.

A staff of volunteer workers is now busily engaged making a list of the families that will need hampers this Christmas. For the first time a Christmas hamper exchange will be established by the club, so that there will be no duplication of hampers.

Arrangements also have been made to put out standard hampers for families of two, three, five, and also for larger numbers. The hampers will contain everything that will contribute toward a cheerful Christmas.

However, if the campaign is to be made a success, generous support will be necessary from the public. It is estimated that 1,500 hampers will be needed. Each hamper will average forty-five pounds, so that fifteen tons, or 363,000 pounds of food supplies will have to be raised. To meet this requirement, subscriptions amounting to $3,000 are necessary.

The Gyros are anxious to reach this objective as quickly as possible, so anyone having donations to make may do so now by getting in touch with headquarters, at the corner of Vancouver and Yates Streets.

USE T.B. SEALS

When you are making out your list of Christmas gifts, don't forget to include Christmas Seals. They not only help the unfortunate, but they pay for community health, which benefits the giver, too.

Jubilee Alumnae Planning Party

The Jubilee Hospital Alumnae will hold a card party, when both auction and contract bridge will be played, on Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock at the Nurses' Home. For the past fifteen years the alumnae has been carrying on its work for the hospital patients and has also been instrumental in establishing a bursary fund for graduates of the hospital.

The motto chosen by the late Dr. E. S. Hasell, "Non sibi sed toti" (not for ourselves, but for others), has been truly exemplified by the society, and a special effort is made at this time of the year to provide Christmas cheer for the patients in the alumnae ward.

Players are requested to bring cards, scores and table covers to the party on Wednesday, and reservations may be made with Mrs. J. H. Russell, Garden 5119, or Miss J. Moore, Garden 5110.

Children's Ball Will Take Place On December 27

With the approach of Christmas, Victoria children are looking forward to their Christmas festivities, chief among which is the children's fancy dress ball at the Empress Hotel, organized by Mrs. Mortimer Appleby annually since 1917, under the patronage of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Fordham Johnson and Commander and Mrs. G. C. Jones.

The dance will be held this year on the evening of Thursday, December 27, in the Crystal Ballroom. Prizes will be presented to the best dressed girl and boy under six years of age, the best dressed boy and girl from six to twelve years, and the best comic boy and girl.

The proceeds will be devoted to the patriotic and charitable work of the Navy League Chapter, I.O.D.E. Tickets may be obtained at the Owl Drug Stare, Campbell Building; the Empress Hotel and Diggon-Hibben, Ltd., Government Street. Further particulars may be had by telephoning Empire 9520.

Miss Violet Powkes is arranging a delightful ballet dance for the occasion, and this promises to be of special interest.

"Jackson and Williams had a terrific row last night at the club. Shocking affair altogether," said Wilson.

His companion looked surprised.

"That's very strange," he said. "Why, I thought those two were inseparable."

"They were," said Wilson. "It took six of us to drag them apart."

Answer to Question No. 40

King of clubs.

The best chance of beating the contract looks like finding some length in clubs in your partner's hand, with a possible re-entry. This is a better chance than trying to set up a long diamond in your own hand and in the process sacrificing possible honor holdings in that suit in your partner's hand.

Mr. R. E. Webb, 324 Stannard Avenue, wins the November prize for his answers, with 84 per cent correct. While the winner's percentage is not as good as last month's winner, the series of problems was more difficult.

Writer of World's Most Popular Book Choked and Burnt

William Tindale Was First to Translate Greek New Testament Into English, a Book Which Standardized Subsequent Revisions—This Great Englishman Died in Exile

By REV. DR. J. K. UNSWORTH

IT is an arresting fact that the writer of the most popular book in the world, a book whose circulation now for many years has run into the millions, was driven from his native land and kept in exile for twelve years, an exile that ended by his being strangled and burned at the stake. The writer was an Englishman, William Tindale, and the book is the English New Testament. Tindale was the first to translate the New Testament from the Greek original into English. His translation, too, was the first copy of the Holy Scriptures to be printed in English. The final revision of this English New Testament was made in 1534, just 400 years ago. The present year is the quater-centenary of one of the most notable events in English history or, for the matter of that, in the life of humanity.

The English Bible was born in exile. Now for these many years the land of the Bible, England at one time would not have it within her borders. The open Bible was a pestilential book. "I need not advertize Your Grace what infection and danger may issue." Thus in 1525, one Edward Lee, who was later to be Archbishop of Canterbury, warns his superior against the expected return of Tindale to his native land with his new English Bible under his cloak. The zealot backs up his warning: "All our forefathers, Governors of the Church of England, hath with all diligence, forbid and eschewed publication of English Bibles, as appeareth in Constitutions Provincial of the Church of England."

CHARGED WITH HERESY

When Tindale was ordained to the priesthood about the close of 1521, he became chaplain and domestic tutor in the house of Sir John Walsh, in his native county of Gloucestershire. Brought up for heresy because of his preaching in the neighboring villages, his eyes were opened to the ignorance and corruption of the clergy. The cure seemed to his patriotic eye to lie in bringing the people into contact with the Scriptures in the vernacular. This he made the supreme ambition of his life. He approached the Bishop of London for his patronage, but unsuccessfully. Henry Monmouth, a wool merchant, housed him until his friendship for Tindale sent him to the Tower. England did not want the Bible for the people, and sent her patriotic and scholarly son into exile. This was in 1524.

At Hamburg he found friends but no printing press; he went to Cologne, where there were both presses and enemies. When the printer, working secretly, had got as far as the first ten sheets of the New Testament, Cochlaeus, Dean of Frankfurt, having ferreted the secret from one of the workmen in his cups, stopped the press. Gathering his sheets, Tindale fled to Worms. Here he found a sympathetic printer, P. Schoeffer—let his name be remembered—who printed 6,000 copies. Friendly merchants smuggled them into England and a skilful system of colportage carried them over the whole country. At last, later by many years than the Continental people, Englishmen had the printed word of God in their own tongue.

BIBLE UNDER A BAN

The books were under the ban of the church. The Archbishop of Canterbury even bought up copies on the Continent to destroy them. In England ecclesiastical authorities instituted a search so bitterly persistent that of these 6,000 copies only two or three survive. But the Continental press poured new editions over the North Sea, 15,000 copies in all, and thousands of English homes found comfort and hope in the open book.

Of Tindale's translation, Rev. Dr. W. D. Cooper has written in his interesting little biography: "The translation as Tindale made it, is in substance and in form the English New Testament as we have it today." Notwithstanding the numberless revisions that have taken place, the Bible of Coverdale, Matthews, the Bishops, the Geneva Version, the Authorized Version and the Revised Version of 1881, is substantially Tindale's translation still. The mark of this courageous Christian cultured scholar and peerless Englishman is upon every chapter and verse of the greatest literary treasure of our race.

Back of William Tindale was John Wiclif, who gave England a Bible in the vernacular of 1384. Good as it was, Wiclif's book was only the translation of a translation, and was to be found only in manuscripts. Here enters Erasmus, who brought out the New Testament in the original Greek in 1516, another landmark in modern history. Tindale went to Cambridge to learn from this mighty scholar and merciless critic in order to equip himself for his own great work.

BIBLE FOR PLOUGHBOY

From Erasmus he caught the vision of a Bible for the people. We recall Tindale's famous manifesto: "If God spare my life, ere many years I will cause the boy that driveth the plough to know more of the Scripture than thou doest." This was an echo of Erasmus when he wrote: "I would that the husbandman may sing them (the Gospels and Paul's Epistles) at his plough, that the weaver may with them keep time with his shuttle, and that the traveler may with their narration beguile the weariness of the journey."

The end came in 1536 at the age of about forty-three years—the date of his death is not known—at Vilvorde Castle, the state prison near Brussels, where he was kept under condemnation of heresy. Too late, England, in the person of Thomas Cromwell, sought his release. Too long England had despised her noble son. On October 6, 1536, William Tindale was led to the stake, where he was first strangled and then burned.

"Open the King of England's eyes," was his cry. His prayer was answered. Almost before his ashes were cold his Bible was published in England. At last the scholar, the evangelist, the patriot, the Christian had come to his own.

Of him nothing is, perhaps, more appropriate than his version of part of the Psalm of Love, First Corinthians, chapter 13. "For oure knowledge is vnparfect, and oure prophesyinge is vnparfect. But when that which is parfect is come, than that which is vnparfect shall be done awaye. When I was a chylde, I spake as a chylde, I vnderstode as a chylde I ymagened as a chylde. But assone as I was a man, I put awaye childesshness. Now we se in a glasse even in a darke speakynge: but then shall we se face to face. Now I knowe unparfectly: but then shall I knowe even as I am knowen. Now abideth fayth, hope, and love, even these thre: but the chief of these is love."

That Body of Yours

(By James W. Barton, M.D.)

RINGWORM OF FEET MAY BE DUE TO LACK OF EVAPORATION OF PERSPIRATION

Physicians are of the opinion that there are more cases of ringworm of the feet the past few years than was formerly the case.

Notwithstanding that the standard of cleanliness of the feet is higher than in previous times, yet it is agreed that only frequent washings of the feet and socks can prevent the attack or help to cure it once it occurs.

Dr. R. L. Gilman examined the feet of 500 male students and 285 female university students in Philadelphia and found that about sixty per cent in both sexes had evidence of ringworm between the toes. He does not believe that there is any remedy that will cure all cases of ringworm; proper foot hygiene—that is the frequent changing of the shoes and socks and the thorough drying of the toes after washing—is the first consideration. There are many individuals bathing not less than once a day who never think to dry the skin between the toes.

A rather interesting point is brought out by Drs. O. L. Levin and G. H. Silvers in the "Archives of Skin Diseases." They thought that the reaction of the perspiration in the space between the fourth and the little toe might have some bearing on the frequency with which this space was infected with the little vegetable organism or fungus that causes ringworm. They found that the perspiration of the skin between the toes was neutral or nearly alkaline while the perspiration of the skin on the rest of the body (except armpits) was acid.

They believe that because the air can't get to the spaces between the toes the perspiration remains so long that it becomes less acid and so the fungi or organisms get a better chance to increase in number and cause the irritation known as ringworm of the feet.

They believe that these observations show the importance of frequent washing and change of socks. They recommend the use of talc powder containing one to two per cent salicylic acid to prevent the growth of the fungus.

Among other remedies are boric acid solution, solution potassium permanganate (1-4,000), five per cent ammoniated mercury ointment, six per cent crude tar ointment.

APARTMENT BUILDING MANAGEMENT CHANGED

The premises formerly known as the Humboldt Apartments have recently changed hands, J. E. Hammond purchasing the property, which has been leased to Mrs. V. A. Hemming. Complete renovation has been carried out, the name being changed to "Glen Court" Apartments."

Every suite will be completely redecorated, several of these having been already completed. The old wooden sidewalk fronting the building has been replaced by cement, the stores on the ground floors having been done over. The building is now distinguished by a neon sign, which adds much to the appearance.

Johnny—Did you ever feel that the whole world was against you?

Tommy—Yes! This morning when I slipped on the pavement.

Social Activities and Notes of Personal Interest

Miss Anna McBride Is Married to Mr. B. Hood

Quiet Wedding at Home of Bride's Mother Unites Pioneer British Columbia Families — Couple to Make Their Home Here

The marriage was solemnized, yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the old family home, 830 Quadra Street, of Catherine Anna, fifth daughter of the late Sir Richard McBride and of Lady McBride, and Mr. Francis Basil Hood, only son of Colonel the Honorable F. G. Hood and Mrs. Hood, 809 Linden Avenue. Owing to the unavoidable absence of Lady McBride, only relatives and a few close friends were present at the ceremony and reception which followed

Masses of chrysanthemums in gorgeous hues adorned the rooms, and during the service, which was conducted by Rev. H. C. Fraser, the bride and groom stood in a bower of large shaggy yellow and white chrysanthemums and greenery.

The bride was given away by her brother-in-law, Dr. J. H. Moore, and looked lovely in her simply-fashioned gown of white moire, closely moulded to her figure, and graduating to a slight train of frills, which were shirred on the back of the skirt above the hem-line. The sleeveless bodice fastened at the back had a round neck, and was finished with a cascade of frills over the shoulders to the waist. Her veil of finest net formed a long, full train, and was worn beneath a halo of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses, carnations and lily of the valley, her only jewelry being a diamond brooch, the gift of the groom.

ONLY ATTENDANT

Miss Alice Cotton was a charming bridesmaid, in a frock of brown chiffon velvet, trimmed with gold, and a most becoming head-dress of braided cloth-of-gold and velvet, brown suede shoes with gold buckles. She carried a sheaf of golden chrysanthemums. Captain H. L. Leverin was best man.

The guests were welcomed by the bride's sisters, Mrs. J. H. Moore, in a lovely gown of bois de rose crepe and lace, and hat en suite, and Mrs. M. F. Macintosh, in navy blue, and receiving with them was the groom's mother, who wore a gown of cafe au lait lace and silk, and a matching hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Hood left later amid a shower of confetti and the felicitations of their friends, for Seattle, the bride travelling in a smart tunic frock of dark brown, with gazelle fur collar and cuffs and a cossack hat of brown felt, worn jauntily tilted to one side. On their return they will reside at 1260 Fort Street.

PIONEER FAMILY

Unusual interest was centred in the wedding as both the bride and groom are members of pioneer British Columbia families. On her father's side, the bride is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hill McBride, of New Westminster, and the groom on his maternal side is a grandson of the late Colonel the Honorable and Mrs. E. G. Prior.

Among the presents was a handsome gift of cutlery from the groom's associates on the staff of McLennan, McFeely & Prior, Ltd., and a Sheffield silver entree dish from the Board of Health Department, Parliament Buildings, of which staff the bride had been a member for a number of years.

Former Victorian Wed in Honolulu

A quiet wedding ceremony, lovely in its simplicity, took place at the Parke Memorial Chapel, St. Andrew's Cathedral, Honolulu, at 5 p.m., Thursday, November 15, when Miss Isabel Claire MacDermid, second daughter of Mrs. Alexander MacDermid, became the bride of Dr. William Winter, son of Mrs. Winter Ferguson, of Victoria. Very Rev. William Ault officiated.

The bride, who is tall and fair, was beautifully gowned in a trained wedding dress of white duchess satin, made very high at the neckline and with low back and trimmed with brilliant buttons. It had a three-quarter coat, of which the full sleeves were gathered into long, deep cuffs. A close-fitting turban of Hawaii's pikake blossoms was worn, and orchid corsage and leis of the same fragrant flowers. Brocaded satin slippers completed the costume.

ONLY ATTENDANT

Miss Kaye MacDermid, sister of the bride, and her only attendant, wore a Colonial gown of blue silk figured with pink rosebuds. A large blue picture hat and blue brocaded slippers. Her leis were of deep pink carnations.

Mrs. MacDermid wore a gown of royal blue crepe, made with slashed sleeves and skirt and trimmed with white. Her black mohair hat had white satin flowers and her carnation leis were white. Mrs. Ferguson wore a pale pink lace gown with a large pink felt and mohair hat, silver slippers and pink carnation leis.

Dr. S. J. Ashby, of San Francisco, was best man.

RECEPTION AT HOTEL

Mrs. MacDermid was hostess at an informal reception at the "House Without a Key," Halekulani Hotel, immediately following the ceremony. In addition to members of the wedding party, other guests were Miss Ruth MacDermid, William Ellsworth Fisher, Frank Nichols and Mrs. Shirley Ashby, wife of Dr. Ashby. The latter, the oldest friends of the Winter family in California, are guests at the hotel.

Dr. and Mrs. Winter received the guests on the outdoor lanai, where white chrysanthemums, white amaryllis, coconut blossoms and white gladioli were arranged. The wedding cake was served from a lace-covered table set with long white tapers.

The bride left in a shower of rose petals and rice, wearing a smart navy blue sports costume, trimmed in emerald green.

TO LIVE IN HONOLULU

Dr. and Mrs. Winter are spending their honeymoon on windward Oahu, and, on their return, will make their home in Honolulu.

Mrs. Winter was born in Nova Scotia, was educated there and later in Boston, Mass. She has lived in Honolulu for two years.

Dr. Winter, a Californian, was educated at St. Michael's, Victoria, B.C., and graduated in medicine from McGill University, Montreal. He is on the staff of the Queen's Hospital, Honolulu.

"THE CHILD"

By REGINALD H. WIGGINS, M.D., C.M., L.M.C.C.

NOTHING WRONG—NO?

A mother who brought her child to the clinic the other day was asked for what purpose she had brought him. "For a routine examination, doctor" (a modern mother, who had the welfare of her child at heart and intended to do something about it). You know, there's nothing wrong with him." She meant that he had no obvious symptoms or signs of disease, that he was not ill. True, the boy did not look desperately ill, but on casual inspection he was obviously not robust and not healthy. We must remember that to be robust and healthy is the physical birthright of our children. He was "below par" and neither mentally alert nor physically capable.

The routine physical examination, usually undertaken for the detection of defect in the organs, revealed nothing. As a result the boy might have erroneously been pronounced "physically perfect."

In this and the succeeding article we will enumerate some of the physical defects and faults in his care and training which were found. The detailed history, after repeated questioning, brought forth the unfortunate incident that when he was two (the time when most tuberculosis is contracted), the house being crowded, he slept with an aunt who they found out afterwards, had tuberculosis, had always been looked upon as "sickly."

This disease was naturally suspected. It accounted for his delicate appearance, for the facts that the history further elicited—becoming easily tired, lacking pep and vitality, being slightly feverish in the afternoon, etc.

A simple test was done, which proved the presence of active tubercular trouble in the body, and measures were immediately advised which, if carried out, in all probability, would save his life.

Tomorrow's article: "What Else Was Found."

CHINESE UNITED

The Chinese United Young People's Society held its regular bi-weekly meeting on Friday evening. The president, John Bong, was in charge. "How to Study the Bible," was the topic of the devotional period, which was in the hands of David Gung, Helen Eng and Mun Hope. Another feature of interest was a demonstration of "Parliament Proceedings," given by the intellectual team consisting of Mary Eng, Wilson Lee, Josephine Wong and Jung Hope. The purpose of this demonstration was to show the members the right method of carrying out the business programme. It has been decided that the plan of this demonstration be kept for future reference.

The main item on the business period was preparations for the annual Christmas concert. The young people will present a play entitled "The Other Wise Man," written in Chinese and directed by Rev. Crow Ling. Physical exercises and a series of "fun for all" games, led by Matthew Bong and Margaret Wong, brought the meeting to a close.

Weddings

DOWLING—HALL

The wedding took place quietly in St. Luke's Church, Cedar Hill, last evening at 8 o'clock, of Clodagh Margaret, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Hall, Gordon Head, and Mr. Clifford Harris Dowling, only son of the late Mr. Harris Dowling, and of Mrs. Dowling, West Point Grey, Vancouver, Rev. S. Ryall officiating. The organist was in attendance and played the incidental music and Mendelssohn's "Wedding Marche" as the bridal party left the church.

The charming bride, who was given away by her father, wore a most becoming sheath tunic gown of green and gold tissue, with a matching turban and veil, and carried a sheaf of bronze chrysanthemums. Supporting her was Miss Betty Jennings in a frock of old gold silk crepe and hat en suite, who carried a sheaf of chrysanthemums in a deeper shade of bronze, and the best man was Mr. Richard Pullen, of Vancouver.

After the service a small reception was held in the quarters of the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club, which were beautifully decorated with masses of bronze and gold chrysanthemums. Mr. and Mrs. Hall were assisted in receiving the guests by Mrs. Harris Dowling. Mr. and Mrs. Dowling are spending their honeymoon on the American Mainland, and will later make their home in Vancouver. The bride went away in a smart suit of French blue tweed with a silver fox fur, and navy blue accessories.

JOHNSTON—BARNETT

The marriage took place yesterday afternoon, at the Metropolitan United Church, when, in the presence of relatives only, Rev. E. P. Church united in matrimony Lillian Ethel (Blossom), only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Barnett, 1646 Dallas Road, and Mr. William Alexander Allandale Johnston, of Mrs. H. L. Johnston, "Cherrybank," and the late Mr. Johnston. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was unattended and wore an ensemble of navy blue silk, a hat to match, a muskrat coat, and a corsage of rosebuds. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Johnston left on the 4:30 o'clock boat for Seattle to spend a short honeymoon in Washington State, and on their return to Victoria will make their home on Dallas Road.

BROWN—HOLLINS

A quiet wedding took place yesterday afternoon, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hollins, 118 Hampton Road, when their younger daughter, Delia Frances, was united in marriage to Mr. James Henry Brown, of this city, by Rev. C. G. MacKenzie. The bride was given away by her father, and was attended by her niece, Miss Kathleen Foxgord, as bridesmaid. In the absence of the bride's mother, who is visiting in California, her sister, Mrs. L. D. Foxgord, was hostess. Mr. and Mrs. Brown will make their home in Victoria.

ENGAGEMENTS

WRIGHT—GRIMSHAW

The engagement is announced of Dorothy Elsie, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Grimshaw, 61 Hampton Road, to Mr. Alan Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. V. Wright, 905 Esquimalt Road. The wedding will take place in December.

PERFECT—CLARKE

Mr. and Mrs. John Clarke, of Cadboro Bay, announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Kathleen Nora, to Mr. Henry ("Pete") Perfect, only son of Mrs. Henry Perfect, of Victoria. The marriage will take place this month.

MacLEOD—TAIT

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Tait, 3,000 Douglas Street, announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Emily Ellen "Nellie," to Mr. Hugh William MacLeod, of Ottawa, Ontario.

McMURTRIE—LOCKE

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Locke, 554 Rithet Street, announced the engagement of their daughter, Marjorie Phyllis, to Mr. Cecil Herbert McMurtrie, of Cowichan Lake, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McMurtrie, Fredericton, N.B. The wedding will take place quietly at St. Barnabas' Church early in January.

Anglican Young People

ST. JOHN'S

A successful tournament night was held by St. John's young people recently. The programme, named "1934 O-Limp-icks," was well arranged. Ping-pong, at which Misses P. Malcolm and L. Trickett and Messrs. S. Cooper and R. Freethy were triumphant in gaining the majority of points for low score; croquinole, blow-football and rings gave honors to Misses K. Smith, N. Creelman, H. Forsyth and I. Smith for exceptionally poor play. J. Hooper, J. White and Miss S. Schofield vainly attempted to shoot a bull's-eye. Billiards and several other amusing games had J. Merton, H. Parrott, A. Paver and J. Vesey on the honor list. Refreshments served by Misses V. Dodds and E. Howcroft, brought the entertainment to a close. Three visitors were welcomed. There will be the regular corporate Communion and breakfast on Sunday morning.

Travel Talk Will Be of Interest

The travel talk to be given by Mrs. A. W. Mackenzie, regent of H.M.S. Resolution Chapter, I.O.D.E., on Wednesday evening, in the Municipal I.O.D.E. headquarters, View Street, at 8:15 o'clock, promises to be of particular interest.

Through the courtesy of the Dollar Line, motion pictures of Mrs. Mackenzie's recent trip around the world will be shown, thus enabling the audience to share in the delights of a journey of this kind. The raconteur has made a complete and most interesting continuity from her diary, and as she saw rather more of the native life and customs than the usual short-time visitor, her account of her travels is of more than ordinary interest.

Proceeds will be used to further the chapter's work in the more sparsely settled sections of the Province, particularly in the Peace River, and for secondary education work.

Quintuplets Refuse To Take Visit With Reporter Seriously

Interviewer Finds Babies Enjoying Life in Their Hospital Home — Says All Are Quite Pretty and Bright as Any Child

CALLANDER, Ont., Dec. 1 (AP).—The Dionne quintuplets had a "press conference" today, but refused to take it seriously.

William Dunsday, of The North Bay Nuggett, first newspaperman to witness a day's routine at the Dionnes' hospital-home here, found instead that Yvonne, the heaviest of the five, would rather play than eat and that her sisters already have invented a sweater-pulling game.

"All five were quite capable of handling their own bottles," said Dunsday, in describing meal time at the Dafoe Hospital, "but like all the feminine sex, craved attention. So at times the nurses had to hold one bottle in each hand, with the doctor attending to the baby in the centre row, Cecile.

"It was Cecile who was first through with her bottle. Dr. A. R. Dafoe brought her over to the window where I stood. Her big brown eyes glistened with delight and she smiled and reached for Dr. Dafoe's spectacles.

FOND OF THE DOCTOR

"All five babies seemed magnetically attracted to Dr. Dafoe, and although they all would take an odd glance through the window, they soon turned their becoming little faces back to him. He would shake his head or make a face and invariably they would follow suit—as cute an act as you could wish to see.

After luncheon the babies were bundled up for their siesta in the cool air of the hospital veranda, and tucked in peaked sleeping bags that "made the mites appear as little clowns as they were placed in their carriages," said Dunsday.

It was during this process that a nurse "noticed how frisky Yvonne was and recalled that the heavyweight champion of the group had not taken her full measure of nourishment.

PREFERS TO PLAY

"So out came Miss Yvonne from her comfortable resting place," Dunsday related, "and Nurse Mullins offered her the remainder of the bottle. The little one seemed aware she was being watched and chose to play with the bottle instead of taking the milk.

"Nurse Mullins was not to be fooled and so over Yvonne's eyes went a covering. She didn't appear to like it, but soon she was taking the nourishment in great style.

"In the meantime, Emilie and Cecile decided to have a sweater-pulling match and Emilie delighted in grabbing her sister's fingers. Finally, Cecile became too tired to bother and slowly her little eyelids grew heavy and closed."

All five babies—Yvonne, Marie, Emilie, Annette and Cecile—were fast asleep "as soon as they started to breathe the cool, fresh air of the veranda."

Dunsday noted also the precautions taken to prevent a mixup of quintuplets. Each baby's new perambulator bears her name as well as a ribbon which corresponds to the main blanket over the child, he reported.

The facial features of Marie and Emilie "are not quite as fully developed as their sisters," he added, but the lightest of the infants are "as sharp, bright and pretty babies as ever were formed."

HIGH SOVIET OFFICER VICTIM OF ASSASSIN

BURIAL WITH HONORS

Tonight the Soviet was preparing to bury the slain leader with all honors. A committee was immediately appointed to make the arrangements for his funeral, which will be held in famed Red Square, December 6.

The assassination, the Government here announced, occurred at 4:30 p.m., Russian time (5:30 a.m., P.S.T.), today, in the Leningrad committee headquarters, the former Smolney Institute in which girls of the aristocracy were educated during the czarist regime. In that historic building, too, the constituent assembly met in 1918, to be dissolved by the Bolsheviks.

KIROFF ROSE RAPIDLY

Kiroff rose to power in the ranks of the Communist party from humble beginnings. Born in Viatka Province forty-six years ago, he early became an orphan and spent his childhood in an orphan's home. He joined the Bolshevik movement in 1904, was appointed to the Tomsk committee and arrested that same year for revolutionary activities in connection with an illegal printing plant he operated.

IMPRISONED IN SIBERIA

After serving five years' imprisonment in Siberia he returned to become active again in party work. He participated in the Bolshevist Revolution, was named to the Supreme War Council of the 11th Army and fought through the Civil Wars of 1918-1920.

In 1923 he was made secretary of the Axerbijan central committee of Communist party, and in 1926, secretary of the Leningrad committee and the Northwestern Bureau of the central committee, thus holding place as the most influential party members in Leningrad Province.

SWEEPING INVESTIGATION

LONDON, Dec. 1 (AP).—A sweeping Soviet investigation of "enemies of the working class" was heralded, tonight, in Moscow dispatches disclosing the assassination of Leningrad, today, of Sergei Mironovich Kiroff, powerful Communist leader.

The official communique announcing the assassination—the first major political killing since 1918—asserted that the assassin, yet unidentified, was sent by "enemies of the working class."

This was taken to portend thorough investigation of counter revolutionary activities and the rooting out of all still active against the dictatorship of the Proletariat.

CALLS ON CITIZENS TO AID TOURISTS

ities and study the fancies of buyers of the commodity to be produced, so the Mayor evaluated the necessity for making a complete and detailed review of the situation, and of planning to meet the requirements of the travelling public.

STRONG COMMITTEES

The ratepayers' meeting appointed a committee to work with His Worship in the putting of the tourist trade on a firm foundation. This executive committee is composed of Harold Husband, R. H. B. Ker, W. T. Straith and E. W. McMullen, and has already created the mechanism of the complete organization. The general advisory committee comprises one hundred and forty citizens, fully representative of all interests and classes in the community.

Mayor Leeming and the committee left nothing to chance, but obtained the most expert advice in laying out a plan of development covering the next five years, in the manner that a big business concern would secure architectural and engineering assistance before embarking on a large project. As a result, a co-ordinated scheme is being drawn up, and this will be followed. That it is necessary to have a well-defined course, rather than trust to results from a hit and miss policy, was made evident by His Worship in announcing the meeting of the general advisory committee for Wednesday morning.

KEEP OBJECTIVES

"I know that we need more roads and better roads, we need new buildings, promenades, a concert hall, a stadium—lots of such things will come to every interested mind, but don't let us get side-tracked by side issues. Let us first develop our tourist possibilities and all these needs will be provided very quickly," he declared.

"We expect to make our five-year plan self-supporting by the end of the second year, and from then on it will provide a very welcome revenue for all civic purposes," he added.

In further elaboration of the possibilities of tourist trade as a result of "enjoyment engineering," the mayor said:

"We shall all reap an immediate benefit in 1935, and progress year by year to the five-year goal of $20,000,000 tourist revenue annually. This goal can be attained, but only if we are all prepared to work together to one end, to the common good.

"The movement, if to be altogether democratic, undenominational and free from any suggestion of sectionalism—there is room in the ranks for every citizen who feels that we can best end the depression by helping ourselves.

"'Help yourself by helping the tourist' must be our watchword, and in this way we can create a great industry that no one can ever take away from us."

Girl Guide Notes

COWICHAN RANGERS

The first Cowichan Rangers held their fifth annual masquerade at the Guide Hall. It proved a very jolly dance, although there were very few of the young people in costume. Prizes were awarded to Alice Colk and Betty King for the best comic costumes; to Annie Boyd and Inez Woodward, milkmaids, as the best pair, and to Miss Hazel Castley and Mr. J. B. Creighton for the spot waltz. Mrs. F. G. Aldersey, Mrs. O. T. Smythe and Mr. Hugh Savage, M.P.P., acted as judges. Ranger Miss Dorothy Lamb was in charge of advertising and financial arrangements; Miss Eliza Potts was responsible for the decorations, and Miss Bernice Thorpe headed the refreshment committee.

Christmas Bazaar Held By Daughters of Pity

As result of the very successful Christmas bazaar, held yesterday, at the Jubilee Hospital Nurses' Home, the sum of $134 was realized. The reception room looked delightfully gay with its Yuletide decorations of tinsel, holly and greenery, and the tea table, which had been arranged by Miss Lovell, was charmingly appointed, a centre bowl filled with red carnations and fern and illuminated by red candles in silver holders.

Mrs. Hermann Robertson, in a gracious speech, wished the society every success and paid a tribute to the splendid work which is being done by the Daughters of Pity for the children's ward of the hospital. She then declared the bazaar open and was presented with a corsage bouquet of violets by the president, Miss Kathleen Roberts.

THE CONVENERS

Assisting Miss Roberts in welcoming the guests were Miss Lovell, Miss Bannerman, Miss Maude Worthington and Miss Couves. The tea table was presided over by Mrs. George Jay, Mrs. J. Phethean, Mrs. M. L. Thomas, Mrs. F. M. Bryant and Miss Lena Mitchell, while the tea conveners, Miss M. Tait, Miss Lovell and Miss Conyers, were assisted by Miss Evelyn Tait, Miss Chrow, Miss M. Stevenson and Miss V. Stevenson.

An attractive candy stall, on which a tiny decorated Christmas tree formed the chief decoration, was in charge of Miss Hill, Miss Irene Edwards and Miss Gladys Hoyt, the home-made sweets being sold in particularly pretty little boxes. Another stall of beautiful dolls and novelties was in charge of Miss Smethurst, Miss Croft and Miss I. Rich, while Miss Moss had charge of the doll and luncheon set contest.

MUSIC ENJOYED

A musical programme, arranged by Miss Roberts, delighted the guests, Mrs. W. A. Jameson singing "Kerry Dance" and "The Cloth of Heaven"; Mrs. Styles Sehl sang "Sacrament" and "Kitty of Coulraine"; Mrs. Madge Shrimpton sang "Slave Song," "Little Brown Owl," "My Dear Soul" and "At Dawning." Mrs. C. C. Warn played the accompaniments for all the vocalists. The Warncliff Trio played three very pleasing numbers, "Sylvia," "Morning" and "Angels' Serenade."

Pupils of Miss Violet Fowkes appeared in several delightful dance numbers, Shirley Anderson, in a Mexican dance; Dorothy Graham, tap dance; Betty Fawcett, in a Russian dance, and June Gibson, tap dance. Master Gerald Elliott, a pupil of Miss Adeline Grant, did the sword dance, to bagpipe accompaniment by Miss Lillian Grant. Miss Fowkes played the piano accompaniments for the other little dancers.

The large box of chocolates, donated by Alderman J. A. Worthington, was won by Miss Lovell.

F. Nightingale Chapter Holds Sale of Work

The bazaar held yesterday afternoon by the Florence Nightingale Chapter, I.O.D.E., was most popular, and was arranged under the general convenership of the regent, Mrs. Kyrle Symons.

J. Sheppard and the candy by Mrs. T. Booker and Mrs. L. A. Lucas. The home-cooking stall was under the convenership of Mrs. G. Mellor and Mrs. F. Baylis. The cushion contest was in the hands of Mrs. J. R. Clark.

Both luncheon and afternoon tea were served and the committee in charge consisted of Mesdames Harry Catterall, R. W. Marsh, McKie, W. Hyslop, Lenfesty, James Baker and Miss Laura Catterall.

SMALL BOY MISSING

STUDENT AVIATOR KILLED

SCOTS DEFEAT NORTH SHORE

St. Andrews Emerge With 2-1 Victory—St. Saviours Beat Royals

VANCOUVER, Dec. 1 (CP).—St. Andrews displayed their old form today and won their first game of this season's Inter-City Soccer League schedule, defeating North Shore United, 2-1.

North Shore had their share of the play, but their forwards were poor in front of the goal. McNicol missed many good chances to score in the first half, and Spencer and Russell also made their share of fumbles.

Nestman was responsible for the Scots' first goal, tricking Hannah and Harrison at wing and crossing the ball to Stephens, who drove it into the net.

North Shore equalized shortly afterwards. Spencer passed to Ashton and the latter hooked the ball for McManus to score with a well-taken shot.

NESTMAN TALLIES

Just before half-time, Graham White passed to Nestman, who fooled the United's defence, and closed in to score from a few yards from the goal.

The last half was scoreless. Both goals had many narrow escapes, especially St. Andrews, and only the brilliant tending of Rabbit kept North Shore from scoring the tying goal.

St. Saviours defeated Westminster Royals, 2-1, in a local schedule game, played at Queen's Park, New Westminster.

STILL HOPING FOR RESULTS

Compromise Possible Before Denunciation by Japan of Naval Treaty

LONDON, Dec. 1 (AP).—A final showdown on the possibility of a new naval treaty to replace the 1933 Washington Agreement is expected to come next week.

While United States, Japanese and British delegations, engaged in preliminary conversations here, continued hopeful of ultimate compromise, there was little hopefulness apparent that the deadlock over Japan's insistence on naval parity could be broken, unless one of the three made some new move.

It was regarded as possible that Japan's denunciation of the Washington Treaty, long expected, might be formally made next week.

OUTLOOK NO BRIGHTER

The outlook for compromise appeared no brighter despite the Japanese delegation's newest overture for an agreement on the basis of the British compromise suggestions previously rejected by Tokio. Ambassador Matsudaira, while expressing willingness to proceed on that basis, nevertheless reiterated Japan's demand for equality.

The British still are seeking ways to reconcile the divergent views and hoped next week to find some new and satisfactory approach to the problem.

DECLINES THE LEAD

TOKIO, Dec. 1 (AP).—France, today, declined to follow Japan's lead in denouncing the Washington Naval Treaty.

A note handed Foreign Minister Koki Hirota stated that the French Government would be willing to join in the abrogation of the treaty if all five of its signatories acted unanimously to that end, but, failing such unanimity, the Paris Government must decline Japan's invitation to join her.

Italy, which also was requested by Japan to act with her, has not yet replied. Whatever be Rome's answer, however, the Tokio Government will denounce the treaty by December 31.

BEAN GROWERS OF CANADA WIN

Take First Six Places in One Division at Chicago Exposition

CHICAGO, Dec. 1 (CP).—Canadian growers were the bean kings of the world today, as the first results of the thirty-fifth annual International Livestock Exposition and Hay and Grain Show, which opened this morning, was announced.

In one division—that of the field navy beans—Canadian swept the first six places, and produced many other winners.

H. Graham, of Ironsprings, Alta., emerged today as the first grand champion of the 1934 show—having won that title with his entry of navy beans. The reserve championship in the same class also went to a Canadian, A. Griffin, of Brooks, Alta.

CANADIAN WINNERS

Graham headed a list of Dominion growers who swept the first six places of the contest for best navy beans. Other Canadian winners in that event included:

George Bathgate, Diamond City, Alta., second; Nic Christ, of Barona, Alta., third; A. Griffin, of Brooks, Alta., fourth. Reg Towell, of Saltcoats, Sask., was the only Canadian winner in the contest for Great Northern beans.

A. Griffin, of Brooks, Alta., first; Tony Beroerich, of Mildmay, Ont., second.

Hon. Robert Weir, Canadian Minister of Agriculture, will arrive in Chicago on Sunday to spend several days at the exposition.

Passes Through City En Route South

JOHN QUEEN, M.P.P.

Scotch Plays Coming Back In Holidays

The Scottish Musical Players, whose appearance in Victoria a year ago attracted such interest, will return for a five days' engagement during Christmas week. They will give two entirely new plays, in addition to repeating such international favorites as "The Bonnie Brier Bush," and "Cotter's Saturday Night."

The company will open with a matinee on Boxing Day, with "Bonnie Prince Charlie," the story of the young chevalier who came to regain the throne of the Stuarts, and the comely Highland lass, Flora Macdonald, who assisted him in his escape after defeat.

"A Highland Romance" will be given at the Saturday matinee. Mary McMahon, dramatic soprano, will be seen in her usual parts, and will play the role of the beautiful Flora Macdonald in "Bonnie Prince Charlie."

Bailiff Shot at Farm in Ontario

VAUGHAN STATION, Ont., Dec. 1 (CP).—W. M. Tremblay, Smithville bailiff, and a sixteen-year-old boy, named Vaughan, were shot and wounded today, when the bailiff sought to make a seizure at the farm of Nicholas Turner.

Turner was arrested by Provincial Police from Grimsby and taken to jail at St. Catharine's. The injured man and boy were given first aid treatment at a neighbor's, and Tremblay was later taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, in Hamilton.

HAS NARROW ESCAPE WHEN CAR TOPPLES

NANAIMO, Dec. 1 (CP).—Andy Hunter, well-known brakeman on a Western Fuel Company bunker train, today recounted his narrow escape from death when the car on which he was standing toppled over the waterfront bunker and fell thirty feet. He leaped on to the car behind, which hung on to the rails only by two end wheels.

DOES NOT DUMP HER TOMATOES

Quebec's Minister of Agriculture Comments on Unfair Competition

QUEBEC, Dec. 1 (CP).—Commenting on reports from the Pacific Coast that tomato growers in British Columbia are protesting against competition from the province of Quebec, because it is alleged this province can dump canned tomatoes into the British Columbia market at less than the cost of the production there, Hon. A. Godbout, Quebec Minister of Agriculture, remarked in a statement, today, that if there has been any decrease in production of canned tomatoes in British Columbia, Quebec is not responsible.

"We are ignorant as to what caused the decrease in production of canned tomatoes in British Columbia," said Mr. Godbout, "but we can and do affirm the province of Quebec is not responsible.

NOT BIG ENOUGH

"Our industry does not yet suffice to completely provide our home market, notwithstanding the fact that it has greatly increased. So what could be the sense to export thousands of cases of canned goods to British Columbia and then be obliged to import more expensive products than our own in order to make up the deficit?

"Even though we should ship canned goods to British Columbia, why condemn us if our products are of good quality? Are we to understand that our canners no longer have the right to trade with the sister provinces because we can manufacture more economically? Do we complain when other provinces overrun our market with their canned goods, both fruits and vegetables? We accept their competition and do not raise a cry of alarm, but rather we fight them, endeavoring to lower the cost price and improve the quality and packing of our canned foods."

Mr. Godbout's statement also dealt with criticisms he claimed had been made in the West to the effect that low wages were being paid workers in the canning industry in Quebec.

"Would they have us interpret these statements as meaning our laborers are treated as slaves, to receive slaves' pay?

CONTENTED WORKERS

"If contrary to British Columbia, we have no minimum wage law in connection with our canning industry, it is because our workers are satisfied with the way in which they are being treated. Our proof of this is shown by the fact that the workers make application in advance for jobs for next canning season.

"As to the men doing piecework, they are paid the same wages as in Ontario and British Columbia.

"The wages paid by the farmers who can a certain quantity of their products for commercial use, cannot be taken into consideration, as generally the work is done by members of the family.

"To summarize, we can state that our canning industry progresses from year to year, and we foresee the day when it will totally supply our local market.

BUT AND IF——

"But, should we ever have an exportable surplus in this line, we do not see why we should abstain from trying our luck like others, on every Canadian market, and why we should not profit by local conditions if these allow us to manufacture first quality canned goods at a lower price than other provinces."

FOR years doctors have advised mothers to keep children regular with Quaker Oats. Now experts have discovered why Quaker Oats does this. They have found that most food lacks a certain regulatory vitamin Quaker Oats gives.

Children deprived of this vitamin lose appetite, become irritable—constipated. But when Quaker Oats containing this regulatory vitamin is added to their diet, they eat heartily and constipation and irritability disappear.

This vitamin is commonly called the "yeast vitamin" —and it has been found that a dish of Quaker Oats contains more of this element than 3 cakes of fresh yeast. And remember, Quaker Oats are also irradiated with Sunshine Vitamin "D".

Whole Army Carried By Fleet of Thirty Huge Soviet Planes

1,500 Men Parachute to Earth in Manoeuvres, Each Machine Holding 150 — Women Are Trained Pilots—Carry Presses for Printing

By CORALIE VAN PAASSEN
Central Press Canadian Writer

MOSCOW.—Recently I flew over Moscow and environs in what is the biggest, but also the strangest, airplane in the world. We had sixty passengers on board, all of them visitors attending the great theatrical festival, furthermore, seven of a crew besides the pilot, and five girl parachute jumpers who dived overboard when we were up around a five thousand meters altitude. When we left the airdrome, we had also with us in the plane; two cows, four pigs and half a dozen Alsatian police dogs. These animals left us by the parachute way, and we saw them descend safely through army binoculars, except one of the pigs who landed squarely in a motor lorry proceeding along one of the roads and of which, the evening papers informed us later, nothing has been seen or heard of since. The driver of that truck must have looked upon that pig as a godsend. Nobody is worried about the pig, but the army would like its parachute back, please!

That airplane, called the Maxim Gorky, is the flagship of a fleet of thirty similar giants. We saw them in their hangars on the flying field. Later they executed a formation-manoeuvre all together, our 'plane standing by with the commander on board to direct the flight. The thing flew right about, beneath and above us. It sounded like a dozen thunderstorms wrapped in one. If my eardrums survived at all, it is because I took the precaution, as everybody else, of stuffing my ears with cotton before arising from the field.

PILOTED BY WOMAN

It may be of interest to know that this immense 'plane was piloted by a woman and that ten of the other pilots in the thirty-one machines in this squadron were also girls. None of these 'planes carried the slightest armament. They are used in an entirely different service. The Maxim Gorky, for instance, carries a complete printing establishment and a radio broadcasting station. The regular crew consists of 130 men and women, engineers, typesetters, editors, wireless experts and printers.

They print a four-page paper in two hours time and scatter 12,000 copies over the earth. The length of the electric cables on board is fully twelve kilometers, something like ten miles.

There are seventeen different rooms on board the airplane and the loudspeakers can cover an area of two square miles from a height of 1,000 meters. The other thirty ships are equipped in the same way. Together they form the greatest modern technical propaganda apparatus in the world. This singular air flotilla is the gift of the Society of Soviet Writers to the Government. Every one of the thirty-one boats has spent 300 hours in the air without the slightest mishap.

PROPAGANDA IN WAR TIME

For the moment they are used to carry news and enlightenment to distant regions. In war time, I was told, they would accompany the army to keep the troops informed of the situation at home and abroad. But also to fly over enemy territory, for the purpose of spreading propaganda by means of newspapers and the radio.

Bismarck said once: "One newspaper in Paris on my side would be worth more to me than a whole army corps on the other side of the Rhine." In the light of this saying of the Iron Chancellor, the value of the Soviet's aerial newspaper squadron may be imagined. It should be added that the presses are equipped to print several different languages and that among the editors and printers aboard are Germans, Japanese, Moldavians, Turks, Greeks, Chinese, Finns, Poles and Lithuanians, all Soviet citizens from parts of the Union where these languages are spoken and, of course, several experts in French and English, Italian and Spanish.

When the other planes roared by our sides, we saw suddenly their doors swing inwards. Out jumped the soldiers, who had been taken up for parachute practice. Each plane dropped fifty men, fifteen hundred men in all, a small army. It was the strangest sight I have ever witnessed, all those men dropping to earth. I was afraid some of them would get their parachutes tangled up, but everything passed off perfectly.

At the same time it gave me an idea of one of the things that is liable to happen in an eventual war of the future. The French also have some of these giant airplanes, although not quite so big. They carry 100 men each, machine-gunners. But the French certainly won't let any stranger have a look at them.

Figure it out for yourself—thirty planes dropped 1,500 men. Their carrying capacity is 150 in a pinch. They could, therefore, have dropped thrice that number, or 4,500 men. Let a hundred of such planes fly over the enemy's line to an ammunition depot or to a big industrial centre, deposit 10,000 men in its neighborhood and have them launch an attack in a perfectly unexpected place and they will certainly play havoc with the opposite country's defences. Formerly all the fighting took place at the front; in the next war the front will be everywhere, hundreds of miles back of the frontier. Every city will have to be guarded against such surprise attacks, but not every country will have sufficient manpower, even if women are pushed into the armies, to guard every city, town and hamlet in the realm. No wonder M. Pierre Cot, France's former Air Minister, who made a special study of Societ aviation, said recently: "The U.S.S.R.'s air equipment is a marvel. The world has to reckon with a tremendous development there!"

MAKES DARING LEAP

The dropping of the cows and pigs by parachute which took place from the Maxim Gorki, on which I was a passenger, was in the nature of an experiment to furnish supplies to an isolated region. Naturally this can also be made to apply to troops in an advanced or cut-off position, or to a body of men which has made a sudden landing well inside the enemy's territory.

One of the girl parachutists in our plane, who jumped when we had reached a height of 5,000 meters, did not open her parachute till she was 300 meters above terra firma. For four thousand seven hundred meters she whizzed through the ether like a stone, slowly counting to nineteen. When she reached nineteen she had to open, else she would have been crushed to death. Before nineteen she was forbidden to open.

As a final show we saw the thirty giant planes swoop down to pick up the men and the animals who had been dropped with the parachutes. All were on board within a quarter of an hour, while we circled above observing the manoeuvre through our spy-glasses. Then the whole squadron, the Maxim Gorki leading, roared back to Moscow.

Ancient Spinning Wheel Is Still in Use

OAK BAY KEEPS UP ITS RECORD

Building Operations This Year Continue Very Similar to 1933 Activity

Building operations in the municipality of Oak Bay have been strikingly similar so far this year to what they were in the same period of 1933. For the month of November, this year, the permits taken out in Oak Bay amounted to $18,170, which is less than a thousand dollars below what they were in November 1933, when the month's total reached $19,120.

The value of permits covering the present year up to the end of November are ahead of what they were for the same eleven months in 1933. The total figures are, for 1934, $188,151, while in 1933 they were $182,371.

There were, during the first eleven months of this year, sixty-three houses, for which permits were taken out representing an estimated cost of construction of $175,079. In the same period of 1933 there were fifty-seven houses for which permits were issued, while the estimated values of these totaled $172,731.

During the past week three permits were issued in the Municipal Hall for new homes. Hume & Son will construct a residence of five rooms at 1713 Newport Avenue, estimated to cost $3,500. W. W. Bey is to erect a home of five rooms at 2624 Estevan Road, which will cost, it is estimated, $2,550. Fairhurst Bros. will build a dwelling of five rooms at 1027 Hampshire Road. It will cost $2,500.

"Catch anything, old boy?" he eagerly asked.

"Yes, two," said his neighbor, but in surprisingly doleful tones.

"Good!" said the suburbanite. "What were they?"

"The seven-thirty there and the five-fifteen back," came the unhappy angler's reply.

Celebrity—"Now, miss, do you want anything else besides my autograph?"

Dazzling Spectacle Seen In Current Capitol Film

Gay Viennese music, Continental joyousness, Parisian revels and charming old world romance blend with massive spectacle and glamorous locales in "The Merry Widow," Ernst Lubitsch's production of the Franz Lehar masterpiece, which opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

Reuniting the triumvirate of Lubitsch, Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture is staged on a spectacular scale, its whimsical comedy, gay humor and charming romance being backgrounded by gorgeous settings and hundreds of beautifully-costumed players. The world-beloved music is presented on a scale never possible on the stage.

Chevalier, who has always been at home in a uniform, has never been better than as the dashing, rollicking, fun-loving, romantically-inspired Danilo, whose madcap frolics almost bring a nation to ruin but who fixes everything up again with a grin and a sly wink. Miss MacDonald, stunningly photographed and wearing an array of Adrian-designed costumes which will make every girl in the audience catch her breath, was a brilliant selection for the enchanting Sonia, who proves that a widow can have her moments.

Together the romantic pair sing such famous Lehar hits as "Girls, Girls, Girls," "Tonight Will Teach Me to Forget," "Vilia," "Widows Are Gay" and "Melody of Laughter," and their rendition of the famous "Merry Widow Waltz" gives a new conception of this form of the dance.

Will Play at Empire

Mary Keith, violin soloist and leader of Keith Sisters' "Melodears," all-girl band, featured with Harry Berry's Sunkist Vanities, stage attraction coming to the Empire Theatre on Friday, Saturday and Monday, with a special midnight show Sunday.

INTENSE DRAMA IS AT THE PLAYHOUSE

"Sadie McKee" Stars Joan Crawford—Plot Is Story of the Life of Ordinary Girl

One of the outstanding screen productions of the year will be on view when "Sadie McKee," new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film starring Joan Crawford at the head of a brilliant cast, opens tomorrow at the Playhouse Theatre. "Sadie McKee" is a vivid dramatization of the average girl. She is the girl who lives next door or just around the corner. She is seen everywhere—in the street cars, subways, buses, theatres and shops. Like many a modern girl, she elopes and tries her luck in a great city, in this case New York.

Hardship and struggle await her. Her young man deserted her for a glamorous vaudeville torch-singer. She takes what jobs she can get and never despairs. She is catapulted into the luxury of $17,000,000 when in desperation she marries a drunken millionaire.

AMUSEMENTS

On the Screen

Capitol—Maurice Chevalier in "The Merry Widow."

Columbia—"Wonder Bar," starring Al Jolson.

Playhouse—Joan Crawford in "Sadie McKee."

Messiah to Be Given Tuesday

Next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah," will be rendered in the First United Church by the combined choirs of the First United Church and the Orpheus Choral Group, numbering over 120 voices, under the baton of W. C. Fyfe. Since last September the rehearsals have been well attended and the singers have all been most enthusiastic over the work, Alfred Gurney giving able assistance at the pianoforte.

Some outstanding soloists have been engaged for this occasion, including a number of Vancouver's best talent.

Mrs. W. H. Wilson, of this city, will be the soprano soloist. Mrs. Wilson's work is well known on concert platforms. She recently sang at the Arion Club concert and received a great ovation.

Mrs. F. X. Hodgson, the contralto, is in frequent demand as an oratorio soloist in Vancouver and throughout the province. She has appeared with much success in Seattle and Bellingham.

This will be the first visit of Leonard Hayman, who is regarded as Vancouver's outstanding tenor. Mr. Hayman is soloist at Canadian Memorial Chapel and was formerly soloist at Wesley United Church.

John E. Pacey, who is always a favorite, will be the bass soloist. Mr. Pacey is in constant demand in Vancouver and has been heard here on two previous occasions. His voice is particularly well suited to the dramatic solos "Why Do the Nations?" also "But Who May Abide." The organist will be Frederick J. Chubb, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., organist of Christ Church, Vancouver.

Thrills and Laughter In Dominion Offering

Joe E. Brown's latest First National comedy, "Six-Day Bike Rider," which is now at the Dominion Theatre, is greeted not only with gales of side-splitting laughter but with breath-taking starts.

The picture is not only uproariously funny, but presents some of the biggest thrills ever shown on the screen. The situations are most unusual and hilarious enough to shake the children and grown-ups alike with laughter. There are also numerous gags and stunts that added to the merriment of the show.

The thrills come in the big climax of the picture, an actual bicycle race in which there are spills aplenty. In one sequence alone, sixteen of the twenty-four professional riders who take part in the race pile up in a crash that takes one's breath. No actual contest could be more thrilling to watch than this race, which was staged especially for the Joe E. Brown comedy.

Joe E. never had a role that was more adaptable to his particular line of fun making than this one, and he makes the most of it. He works a smile or a hearty laugh into practically every scene.

Maxine Doyle, a comparatively new comer to the screen, has the romantic lead opposite Joe, and gives a splendid account of herself. She is not only beautiful to look at but possesses real talent that should take her far in the movies.

COLUMBIA OFFERS SPARKLING REVUE

Al Jolson Plays Leading Role in "Wonder Bar"—Dick Powell Also in Cast

No makeup specialist has ever been able to put blackface makeup on Al Jolson to the actor's satisfaction. When it comes time for the comedian to don burnt cork and a wool wig he shuts himself up in his dressing-room and does it himself.

After more than twenty years of practice, Jolson can put on or take off the black makeup at a record-breaking speed. He dislikes to do it, but has become resigned to the public's demand that he appear at least once in every stage and screen production in blackface.

In "Wonder Bar," his latest First National picture, now showing at the Columbia Theatre, in which he appears with Dolores Del Rio, Kay Francis, Dick Powell, Ricardo Cortez and Hal LeRoy, he sings one song and works through one sequence in what he calls "the dark." He demonstrated his old-time speed with the cork while working on this sequence, a speed which enabled him when playing blackface roles on the stage, to appear in the finale in whiteface and normal clothes.

He was a believer in the uplifting effect of the drama, and was never weary of telling all that Shakespeare meant to him. "The Bard," he would say, "is at once an inspiration and a tonic." Now that he had met his twin soul, what could be more natural than that he should take her to "Othello" to be similarly inspired? And she was. The scene of Desdemona's death beneath the pillow moved her profoundly, as he had expected.

"That reminds me," she exclaimed. "I must get some loose covers for the cushions in my sitting-room."

"Messiah" to Be Sung Here December 19

Dr. Prout's edition of "The Messiah" will be used at the Cathedral performance of this oratorio on December 19 by combined choirs and orchestra, under the direction of Stanley Bulley. It is the only edition which is claimed to be correct as regards musical text, as well as a restoration as far as possible of Handel's original score and method of performance.

Dr. Prout places seven numbers in an appendix, and makes their use optional, pointing out that the continuity or flow of the work is not interfered with by their omission. These will not be sung on December 19, so that the performance will not be of undue length. An artistically-arranged programme, with full words of the oratorio, has been prepared for the occasion and is now on sale at Fletcher's Music Store. The holder of a programme is assured of a seat.

EMPIRE SCREENS ENGLISH PICTURE

"The Blarney Stone" Is Lively Drama of Adventurous Young Irishman in London

Tom Walls has quite a "different" type of role in this film and he plays it with vivid charm, exploiting to the full the famous Wallsian wit and spicy sophisticated humor.

Drama is also incorporated in the story of Tim Fitzgerald (Tom Walls), an impecunious Irishman with a delicious sense of humor, who is threatened with death by Sinn Feiners. His "blarney" saves his skin, but lands him penniless on the Thames Embankment.

With the help of a friend he gains financial success in the city, but trickery on the part of this same friend gets Fitzgerald arrested and sentenced to seven years' penal servitude for embezzlement.

There are several unexpected twists in this entertaining story that holds the onlookers' interest from start to finish. Tom Walls directed the picture himself, and he proves once again that as an actor he is in a class by himself, and as a film producer he is rapidly making a great name for himself.

MUSICAL ART SOCIETY TO MEET WEDNESDAY

The December meeting of the Victoria Musical Art Society will be held at the Empress Hotel next Wednesday December 5, and will take the form of a reception, programme and dance. Past and present presidents of the senior and junior branches will act as hostesses. The programme will be arranged by the junior branch and will be rendered exclusively by its own members.

At the conclusion of the music, dancing will commence in another room, special orchestra music to be provided. Fancy dress may be worn, although this is purely optional.

MARKET PLAN IS FRUITLESS

New Federal and Provincial Rules Needed to Avert Collapse of System

"We passed the Natural Products Marketing (B.C.) Act, with every intention of supporting the Dominion Government in the regulation and control of natural products, and there can be no going back now," Hon. K. C. MacDonald declared yesterday, as the Government approached the week-end with the new impasse in marketing regulation unsettled.

The Minister of Agriculture reiterated his view that every marketing scheme passed by the Province, and those under consideration for passage, would be useless without additional regulation under Federal or provincial authority, or both combined.

COULD WRECK CONTROL

"Any interested party who desired to do so could bring products into a regulated area and sell them there at a price that would break up any marketing scheme," Dr. MacDonald said. "It makes very little difference whether such entries were made from other points in British Columbia, or from outside the province, the effect would be the same.

The Minister of Agriculture said he planned to take up the immediate issue with the Cabinet early this week, with a view to deciding the Province's course one way or the other.

MAY SEEK HELP

Meanwhile, it was indicated that the probable outcome may be that the Province will ask Ottawa to make extra-provincial commodities subject to control regulation in Federally-originated scheme, while the Province amends its own regulations to confer like powers in respect to internal shipments wholly within British Columbia.

Settling a minor issue, Dr. MacDonald rejected the British Columbia sheep marketing scheme yesterday, advising producers he could not assent to the plan in its present form, on account of stated levies, failure to provide for a poll of producers, and on other grounds. Sheep breeders are expected here on Tuesday to discuss the issue.

What Today Means

"SAGITTARIUS"

If December 2 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p.m., and from 7:15 to 9:15 p.m. The danger periods are from 6:15 to 8:15 a.m., from 12:15 to 2:15 p.m., and from 9:15 to 11:15 p.m.

It might be advisable to ascertain if friends have made plans that might be interfered with if you absorb too much of their time unknowingly today. It may prove good policy to abide by the wishes of the majority of the household or group of friends in any matter pertaining to some form of entertainment for the day, as a contrary spirit might be productive of a sense of general dissatisfaction. Unselfishness is very essential to make this Sunday enjoyable, so if you are wise you will practice it. News of a love affair is likely to be found predicated more on the teller's imagination than actuality. If invited to a social gathering there is every reason to believe you will thoroughly enjoy every minute spent there, as this day is favorable for all forms of festive activities. Married and engaged couples, as well as those within whose bosoms the spark of love is glowing, should be very cautious regarding their manners, if they would avoid caustic criticism.

If a woman, and December 2 is your birthday, your loyalty is probably recognized by both family and friends, inspiring confidence that may react most favorably where your interests are involved. Wealth either directly or indirectly will possibly play a very important part in your future, being responsible for a great deal of happiness. Usually if you have a premonition about a person or important matter, there is a likelihood it will be correct, so sometimes it might be well to be guided by it. Office, shop and educational work might be best for one of your temperament. Married life will have many advantages to offer and may probably be the best means to secure happiness.

The child born on December 2, usually by the time it arrives at high school age, has definite ideas as to what profession or career it wishes to follow. It might be a great mistake to try to interest this child in something else. Encouragement will be all that is needed to help it make life a success.

If a man, and December 2 is your natal day, your self-assurance and progressive nature should enable you to successfully cope with the problems of the day. Mercantile lines, electrical engineering, journalism and politics are fields of activity in any of which you may find the chance for rapid advancement. You should find marriage a very satisfactory state of existence.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 3

"SAGITTARIUS"

If December 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m., and from 8:30 to 10:30 p.m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., and from 10:30 until midnight.

On this December 3 price may influence to a great extent commercial buying, probably making the market slightly sluggish. It will be advisable not to let any action on your part create the impression that you are grasping, or seeking to take an unfair advantage of a situation which is apt to arise. Unexpected sources might possibly be responsible for a monetary condition developing that may be beneficial to your personal interests. It will be well to remember "free speech" is susceptible of becoming very costly if incautiously used, so be guarded in your comments, especially if they apply to individuals. Social activities are likely to absorb some of your time, so be careful not to offend your host or hostess by neglecting to show them the proper amount of attention. Married and engaged couples, as well as those engaged in courtship, should exercise a great deal of tact in their dealings with each other's relatives, for any charge of discourtesy is likely to lead to complications.

If a woman, and December 3 is your birthday, you may be inclined to take life too seriously. It might be best if you make it a habit to divert your mind by taking an interest in some light and amusing form of entertainment two or three times a weke. Your natural inclination to devote yourself to very serious subjects is likely to keep you from a great deal of wholesome pleasure. Remember, "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" is also now-a-days applicable to girls as well. Scientific research or laboratory work, writing, certain branches of teaching or lecturing offer careers for one of your disposition. You can be very happily married, providing you do not regard your married life in the light of a scientific experiment.

The child born on December 3, generally when it reaches its teens, evinces unusual interest in things of either an artistic or mechanical nature. This should be encouraged, for it may deeply resent being forced to take up some business or profession which is distasteful.

If a man, and December 3 is your natal day, it might be well for you to bear in mind that philosophy is a pleasant process of reasoning from an individual standpoint, but liable to create considerable irritation if indulged in at someone else's expense. Your success and popularity will grow in proportion to the amount of practicability you apply in business and social contacts.

CULBERTSON on CONTRACT

By Ely Culbertson

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

A TRUMP END-PLAY

How often have I heard that remark made by a declarer to the dummy, who has not watched the butchery which has gone on.

It is undoubtedly true that bad divisions in either a plain suit or the trump suit bring about the defeat of many otherwise makable contracts. However, many times these bad divisions can be counteracted by careful play, at the conclusion of which a seemingly sure trump trick of the declarer's left-hand opponent vanishes into thin air.

On the hand below, Mr. Benedict Jarmel, of New York City, fulfilled a four-heart contract despite the bad trump division by the use of a trump end play.

West, dealer.

	♠ 10 6 ♥ K 5 4 ♦ A Q 10 7 ♣ A J 8 6
♠ A 9 5 ♥ Q 10 8 7 ♦ J 6 ♣ Q 9 5 2	N W E S	♠ K Q 7 4 3 ♥ 6 ♦ K 9 5 4 3 ♣ 7 4
	♠ J 8 2 ♥ A J 9 3 2 ♦ 8 2 ♣ K 10 3

The bidding:

North	East	Sauth	West
1 ♦	1 ♠	2 ♥	Pass
4 ♥	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

In response to his partner's bid, West opened the spade ace, and when his partner continued an intermediate card, continued with the suit, although a diamond shift might have been better. East won the second spade trick with the queen and, not realizing that his partner held two probable trump tricks, decided a club shift was necessary. Frankly, I believe East's return of the seven of clubs was a very bad play, and I doubt whether the contract would have been filled without it.

Mr. Jarmel covered the lead of the club seven with the ten, and West's queen was covered by dummy's ace. The king of hearts was now played from dummy to test out the trump division, and after both players followed, Mr. Jarmel quite correctly decided to abandon the suit, reasoning that West was almost certainly marked by the double with the three remaining trumps. Mr. Jarmel further decided, because of East's overcall, that the diamond king was probably wrong. He therefore proceeded to run his club suit, returning to his own hand with the king and then taking the indicated finesse against West's nine. On the fourth club South's losing diamond was discarded and West had to helplessly follow suit.

The ace of diamonds was now led from dummy and a second diamond trumped in South's hand. South now led his last spade, trumped with one of dummy's small hearts, and led another diamond, trumping with the heart nine in his own hand. West, of course, overtrumped, but now could do nothing but lead away from his heart queen into the declarer's tenace.

The doubled contract was thus fulfilled, despite the bad division, by careful play, which reduced West's two apparent trump tricks to one.

TUESDAY'S HAND

West, dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

This hand will be discussed in Tuesday's article.

Brilliant Winger Skates Through for Winning Marker, Just Before Bell, to Give Toronto Decision Over St. Louis—New York Trimmed, 5-2 — Bruins Blank Canadiens

TORONTO, Dec. 1 (AP).—With only thirteen seconds to play, a perfect shot from Charlie Connacher's potent stick won the Toronto Leafs a 4-3 National Hockey League game from the St. Louis Eagles, here, tonight. With the score tied 3-3 and the crowd sitting back for overtime, Conacher, parked inside the blue line, took a pass-out from Harold Cotton, from a gangling play, and blazed a knee-high shot past Billy Beveridge. It was a picture shot, fast, well-placed and driven through a maze of players.

CHARLIE CONACHER

The win was the Leafs' eighth this season, without a loss, and further consolidated their position as section leaders.

Toronto had gone into a 2-1 lead in the first period, through goals by Conacher and Busher Jackson, while Syd Howe scored for the Eagles. Howe got another in the second to balance Red Horner's, and Earl Roche tied it up seven minutes after the third started, when George Hainsworth was out of his net.

RANGERS BEATEN

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP).—The fast-stepping Montreal Maroons made their hold on second place, in the National Hockey League Canadian Section, more secure, tonight, as they walloped the Rangers, 5-2, for their second victory in as many appearances here this season. The defeat left the Rangers at the bottom of the American Section.

Playing a faster and more open game than they did on their previous visit, the Maroons rolled up a 3-0 lead before New York managed to score late in the second period, and added two more tallies while the blueshirts were making desperate efforts to score. In addition, their defence, led by Lionel Conacher and Goalie Alex Connell, was almost airtight.

The first Montreal goal came as a gift from Alex Levinsky, who knocked the puck into his own net. The Rangers had one tally disallowed by the referees.

LUXTON SCORES TWO CAGE WINS

SHAWNIGAN LAKE, Dec. 1.—In a triple-header, played in the S.L.A.A. Hall, on Friday evening, Luxton balltossers took two in exhibition games, while Shawnigan won from the Canadian Scottish five in a league fixture, 47 to 30.

In a closely-contested battle, Malahat lost to Luxton, 51 to 41. The visitors started at a fast clip to pile up an early lead, but the hill boys found their stride and kept the Luxton five from increasing their advantage in the first stanza. The Lower Islanders again took charge in the opening minutes of the second half, and the local quintette, although staging a strong rally, could not overcome the early lead.

The local girls played their initial game of the season, when they met the Luxton girls. The end of the second quarter showed the visitors leading, 6 to 5, a lead which they increased by four points, to finish 22 to 17. E. Oakley and E. Gibson handled the games.

Teams and individual scores follow:

Luxton—P. Heath (10), M. McKay (7), G. Robinson (1), A. Heath, E. Hutchinson (4) and J. Sterling. Total, 22.

Shawnigan—I. Hunt, A. Gibson (4), J. Yates (6), B. Woodruff, R. Cronk (4), L. Yates (2), C. Twist and I. Orr (1). Total, 17.

Ruth Gets Back Safely

Babe Ruth isn't sliding home here. The Yankee slugger is far from it, in fact thousands of miles from it, in Tokio, Japan. The Babe is just trying to get back to first base after nearly being caught napping by a quick throw from the Japanese pitcher.

Canadian Athletes Demonstrate Skill At Wellington Meet

Flash Fine Form in Exhibition Track Meeting in New Zealand—Howard McPhee Captures Both Sprint Events—Are on Way Home

WELLINGTON, N.Z., Dec. 1 (CP).—En route home after a successful invasion of Australia, Canada's schoolboy athletes stopped off here long enough to demonstrate their track and field prowess today, and made practically a clean sweep in an exhibition track meet with the crack young athletes of New Zealand.

Howard McPhee and Marshall Limon, of Vancouver, B.C., headed the contingent from the Maple Leaf Dominion as they repeated their successes of the Australian meet and captured the sprints and quarter mile events.

The meet, held at the Basin Reserve Athletic Field was slightly marred by an accident to Andy Zizis, crack Canadian sprinter from Toronto, Ont. Zizis, deserting for once the cinder paths in favor of the jumping pits, spiked his right leg while competing in the pole vault. Dr. A. S. Lamb, of Montreal, who is in charge of the Canadian party, took several stitches in the wound, which he later said was not serious.

Slim Sam Richardson, of Toronto, Canadian and Empire broad jump champion and youngest member of the team, made the most impressive victory of the meet when he hurtled twenty-three feet one-half inch, just eight and one-quarter inches short of the Empire record he made at London, England, several months ago.

CAPTURES CENTURY

McPhee captured the first Canadian victory when he sprinted to the tape ahead of his field in the 100 yards with Zizis at his heels. Bill Savage, of Hamilton, Ont., ranked next to Zizis as Canada's ace sprinter, was a close third.

Johnny Loaring, of Windsor, Ont., Canadian schoolboy hurdles champion, hung up the second Maple Leaf victory in the 120 yards hurdles, winning handily from a trio of crack New Zealand timber toppers.

McPhee came back to win the 220 yards after giving his opponents a ten-yard handicap. His clubmate, Limon, duplicated in the quarter mile with Lyle Fleming, of Blenheim, Ont., a half stride behind in second place.

Canada captured both top places in the half-mile invitation run. Bob Mitchell, slender fair-haired star from North Toronto Collegiate, whose style reminded the New Zealanders of their great runner, Jack Lovelock, had no trouble in breasting the tape first. Tom Ferris, of London, Ont., was second, a few yards back.

FINISHES SECOND

Jansen returned to the field to tie with Zizis in the pole vault.

The Canadians wound up their impressive showing with victories in the challenge and club relays. As all the track events were invitation affairs, no official times were announced.

Famous Hockey Team Disbands

The familiar blue and white of the Regina Pats hockey livery that carried the famous club through two world's championships, may never be seen again. Reports indicate that the club is through, for this season at least.

Some of the players who were to line up with the Pats, found it to their advantage to play with the senior clubs and deserted the ranks of the juniors. Others were disappointed because the proposed trip to the United States failed to materialize and gave their notice of their intention to play for the other clubs.

TIME SUPPLY IN FINE WIN

Driving Finish Gives Mrs. Carreaud's Horse Victory in Handicap

BAY MEADOWS, SAN MATEO, Cal., Dec. 1 (AP).—Time Supply, Mrs. F. A. Carreaud's candidate for the $25,000 Bay Meadows Handicap, December 16, came from behind in a driving finish to win the $2,500 Sacramento Handicap, here, today. His time, 1:10 1-5, set a new record for the track for six furlongs, 3-5 better than the record held jointly by Bonny Grafton and Sharp Thoughts, and only 3-5 slower than the world record.

More than 20,000 fans, one of the largest crowds of the season, watched the big time maker's colt score his smashing victory. Ima Count and Marooned set a dazzling pace in the early running and Marooned took a short lead coming down the stretch, but Time Supply overtook him a few yards from the finish and won by a full length.

A record mutuel play for a single race also was set on the feature race, with $26,400 being wagered. Time Supply, as favorite, paid $4.40, $3.40 and $3.40. Marooned paid $4.60 and $3.80, and Ima Count, finishing third, paid $6.80.

Maccabees football team will hold a work-out at Heywood Avenue, this morning, at 10:30 o'clock. All players and any others interested are asked to turn out.

SAANICH DEFEATS WESTS AS DOCKERS WIN AGAINST CITY

Suburban Eleven Rallies in Second Half to Register 5-2 Victory Over Greenshirts to Remain Unbeaten—Esquimalt Shows Improvement and Registers 4-2 Decision

HOW THEY STAND

	W.	L.	D.	F.	A.	P.
Saanich Thistles	6	0	1	18	6	13
Victoria West	3	2	3	15	14	9
Esquimalt	2	5	1	13	18	5
Victoria City	0	4	3	6	14	3

Racing through for a trio of markers in the last twenty-five minutes, Saanich Thistles continued their unbeaten march towards the Victoria and District Football League championship, yesterday afternoon, at the Royal Athletic Park; by defeating Victoria West, by a 5 to 2 score. The win strengthened the suburban lads' hold on top position, putting them two full games ahead of the second place greenshirts. Out at Heywood Avenue grounds, Esquimalt came to life and registered a neat 4 to 2 decision over Victoria City. The result lifts the dockers out of the cellar position for the first time this season.

Saanich Thistles played their usual hustling type of game, and kept plugging away until they found holes in the Wests' defence and then ran through for three goals in the final half, after tying the count. Roy Barnes, who has been out of commission for a long time, returned to the losers' line-up in the second half, and looked just as good as ever. Ill feeling crept into the game late in the struggle when Barnes and Sage came to blows, and Peers talked it over with Crowe, but fists were out of the question in the latter incident.

DOCKERS IMPROVE

Esquimalt appeared much better McConnell at left fullback filled a much needed spot on the dockers' back division. The rest of the squad clicked in fine style, as a matter of faet it looks as if Esquimalt has finally hit their stride, and should be right in there for the remainder of the campaign.

Opening on the attack, the Thistles-Wests game was soon halted when Gordie Chalmers, suburban goalie, was badly winded on a charge by Lambie. Play was stopped for fully five minutes. Ten minutes after the opening whistle, Noel Morgan went through to check in with the initial tally, after Alex Speller had sent the front line away on a fast attack. After several up-and-down the field plays, most of which were ragged, the greenshirts equalized. Bell crossed over from the wing to Lambie, who slipped the ball to Peers in front of the net. The latter hit the upright, but Thompson caught the rebound and scored easily.

Fred Gibbons narrowly missed scoring on two occasions with first time drives which just skimmed the framework. The Wests were playing better as the half closed with the score deadlocked.

WESTS CHANGE TEAM

Barnes came on at centre-half for the Wests as the final canto opened. Robinson went to left wing and Lorandini shifted to the pivot position, Lambie was left off. After Peers had skied a good attempt over, Lorandini broke the tie by scoring from close in on a play which saw Bell, Thompson and Robinson figure in. Bell scored minutes later, but Lorandini was whistled offside on the play.

Twenty-one minutes after the change over, Viggers rushed in to knot the count again, a goal which came as a result of a foul given against Laird for bowling over Viggers. Then Campbell put the Thistles in front, taking a neat pass from Gibbons, and the same player registered again ten minutes from time, after the ball had hit the crossbar. Two minutes later, Morgan widened the gap on a cross from Viggers.

At this stage ill feeling crept into the game and it looked as if something exciting might develop. Campbell was sent off the field for kicking the ball against the referee after the whistle had blown. During the remaining minutes the Wests were trying hard but failed to add to their total.

Robb refereed and teams follow:

Victoria West — Restall; Roper, Laird; Storey, Lorandini, Stewart; Bell, Thompson, Peers, Robinson, Lambie and Barnes.

ESQUIMALT WINS, 4-2

Turning in a much improved performance, Esquimalt defeated Victoria City, 4-2, at Heywood Avenue, and served notice that from now on they will have to be considered in league competition. The match was productive of some fine soccer, with the work of Jimmie Hay, veteran half-back for the Dockers, being outstanding. Hay broke up many dangerous attacks, and when on the offensive literally placed the ball at the feet of his forwards. The diminutive Eddie Gibson, left half-back for the City, shared the honors with the veteran Hay, as he turned in another sparkling performance on the City's intermediate rank.

The only score of the first half came twenty-five minutes after the match got under way. Carrying the play to the City end of the field, Esquimalt netted this lone marker when Mail beat Halkett to the ball, after Noble had crossed, and scored as Wally Rowe, City net custodian, came out to meet him.

NETS EQUALIZER

Facing a one-goal deficit, Victoria City took up the offensive as the second half opened and after J. Payne tested DeCosta with a weak low shot, Earl Barnswell tricked his way through the Esquimalt defence, and scored with a high shot just under the crossbar. Returning the offensive from the centre, Victoria City took the lead for the first time when George Payne beat Watt and scored with a well placed low shot in the corner of the net.

Five minutes later the teams were all square again. Esquimalt was awarded a free kick against Robbins for hands just outside the penalty area, and Jimmie Hay booted the ball into the waiting arms of Wally Rowe, City net custodian. The Dockers' forwards crowded Rowe and he lost possession of the ball immediately in front of the goal. "Scotty" Stewart, took advantage of the opportunity and tapped the leather into the far corner of the net.

Keeping up the pressure Esquimalt made it 3-2 when "Scotty" Stewart beat Rowe with a chest high shot to the corner of the goal. The City goalie made a great attempt to save but the ball hit the tips of his fingers and landed in the net.

"Scotty" Dowds handled the whistle and the teams follow:

EXPLANATION FOR YESTERDAY'S RIPLEY CARTOON

The Parentless Baby—A baby born without either parent sounds incredible, but it happened recently in the case of little "Baby Nicky," born at the King's Mountain Memorial Hospital, Bristol, Va., October 24, 1934.

Little Nicky's father, Robert Nicholson, was drowned at Miami last Summer. His mother died in the hospital, but the staff doctors, Delaney and Bowers, succeeded in saving the life of the child by a hurried Caesarian operation, about ten minutes after Mrs. Nicholson's death.

Rev. and Mrs. M. S. Kincheloe, of Emory, Va., adopted the child and have christened him John Wesley Kincheloe.

Wanderers	0	2	0	0	63	0

Fifth Regiment and Navy senior Rugby fifteens remained deadlocked in top berth in the second half standings today, by virtue of their victories over the J.B.A.A. and the Wanderers, respectively. The Gunners trounced the Oarsmen, 14-0, at Admirals Road, while the Sailors snowed the Oak Bay Wanderers under a 32-0 defeat at Oak Bay Park. Garrison made sure of second place when they meted out an 8-3 setback to the Canadian Scottish at Macdonald Park.

Yesterday's fixture at Oak Bay, where the Navy played the Wanderers, marked the final appearance of the season of Charlie "Chuck" McDonald, clever sailor three-quarter. McDonald leaves on Monday for England where he will be stationed for the next six months. One of the shining lights of the Navy fifteen and a former "rep" player, McDonald will be sadly missed by his sailor colleagues and local Rugby generally.

GARRISON WINS

The black and gold Garrison Rugby fifteen surged its way to an 8-3 victory over a fighting Canadian Scottish team in a lively game played on Macdonald Park. Scottish played for some time with but twelve men.

Garrison scrum was entirely too heavy for the militiamen, the kilties heeling the ball out of the scrum, but twice during the entire fracas. However, there was absolutely no comparison in the backfields. While the Scottish presented on one side a smoothly-working three-quarter line, the Garrison backfield was ragged. Its passes were thrown wildly and its tackling was mediocre.

Bankes was a big factor in keeping the Garrison from scoring further, but plenty of credit is due Ted Colgate for his great exhibition at fullback. Tom Doswell, Scottish, played with a broken finger.

TOMMIES SCORE

The Garrison opened the scoring early in the first half, when a forward rush ended in a scrum twenty-five yards out from the Scottish goal line. Stewart secured and flipped to Polinski for the first tally. Lee's kick was not converted. Play veered toward the army end of the field in the dying moments of the first frame, and after a scrum had been called a few yards from the Garrison line, the kilties were awarded a free kick for "feet-up." Colgate made no mistake with the easy kick.

The second half was scoreless until near the end, when a determined forward thrust, engineered from midfield, wound up in Lee carrying the ball over from a five-yard scrum. He converted.

Percy Derbyshire officiated.

OARSMEN BLANKED

By following the ball closely, dribbling well and checking hard, the Fifth Regiment Rugby squad charged to a 14-0 victory over the J.B.A.A. team at Admiral's Road grounds.

The Bays suffered a considerable handicap in the first half, as they were short one man, and for a time lost the services of John Beck, who disputed the decision of the first try. In the second half, Beck returned to the game along with McKay to swell the oarsmen's number to fifteen.

Both teams played below their standard set in other matches. The first score came after some seventeen minutes of play, when Stipe fought his way across the Bays' line. It was on this try that Beck entered into an argument with Referee Ley. He was supported by a number of spectators in his contention that it was not a true score as they claimed Stipe did not put the ball on the ground. The kick failed.

In the second half, Haines, for the Fifth, passed up a sure chance to score, when he elected to try a drop-kick instead of streaking his way through a wide open field to the line. The Bays drove themselves in repeated plunges up the field, but they were repulsed at centre and the Fifth again took control of the battle.

In the last ten minutes, Scott took the ball and after two attempts crashed through the oarsmen to score, and Peden added two points with the kick. Soon after Doswell scored, but the attempt to convert failed as the whistle blew.

The teams follow:

Fifth Regiment—McInnis, Phillipsen, Gaunt, Peden, Haines, Scott, Stipe, Engleson, Gray, deBlaquiere, Doswell, Eastham, Deacon, Stewart and Rogerson.

J.B.A.A.—Robinson, Addison, Beck, Shepherd, Winsby, Brown, Lowe, Peard, Myles, Siddal, Petticrew, Croft, McMillan, McKay and Martello.

NAVY SWAMP WANDERERS

A well-trained and smooth-working Navy fifteen ran roughshod over the Oak Bay Wanderers and chalked up a 32-0 victory at Oak Bay Park. The sailors led 11-0 at the rest interval.

Dick Caldwell, sailor forward, sustained a broken nose in the last five minutes of play, while Donaldson, Wanderers' fullback, had to retire from the field with a slight head injury. In the final stages of the initial half, Corbin, of the Navy, and Gann, of the Oak Bay fifteen, left the field on account of minor injuries, but were able to return as the second half opened.

Tries by Briggs, Barker and Stagg, the last of which was converted by Charlie McDonald, gave the Navy their eleven-point lead in the first half.

Sweet, Briggs, Swetman, Caldwell and Banfield crossed the Oak Bay line in the second canto, and Barker converted three of the five tries, giving the Navy a 32-0 victory.

Superior ball handling and a heavier scrum were the factors that paved the way to victory for the strong sailor fifteen.

Another Trio of Leaf Sharpshooters

What with Conachers, Jacksons, Cottons, Holletts and Clancys cluttering up the news lanes, lest you forget some of the other Leafs, here's a trio of ultra-smart puck-chasers who had plenty to do with the success of the Toronto Maple Leafs' adventurings in the N.H.L. (1) Bill Thoms, still showing the effects of the stick in the eye from Seibert and that was the "puck" that started the Leafs on their present winning streak. (2) Buzz Boll, left wing of the Boll, Thoms, Kilrea line. (3) "Kareening Ken" Doraty, the little utility forward, who is very frequenty the buzz-fly in any rival hockey ointment. Doraty is the supreme breaker-upper of tight games in which the Leafs engage and he'll probably be with Conn Smythe until he has that patriarchal look and a flowing white beard.

GOLF FACTS
NOT THEORIES!

By ALEX J. MORRISON

Worthwhile knowledge of the correct swing comes from a better understanding of the hitting position. Most of the action pictures show players from the front.

You'll find that this closeness exists only when the player stands fairly erect. When he bends over the arms are bound to get away from the body.

This separation means lack of co-ordination between the body and the arms and hands.

Over 200 Players to Compete in City Badminton Championships Which Open Tomorrow Evening at the Willows—Draw Announced—Defending Titleholders to Be on Hand

Drennan Hincks and Jean Campbell, experts at the shuttle game, will start out in defence of their city singles badminton championships this week on the courts of the Willows Club against one of the largest and strongest fields in local history. Over two hundred players have entered. Tomorrow evening, at 7:30, the opening matches of a lengthy list will open the annual classic, and play will continue each evening until Friday, when the titleholders for the year will be crowned. Exceptionally keen competition will hold sway throughout the week, there is no doubt about that, for the entry list contains more quality than in previous years.

Hincks won the title last year by defeating Harry Webb, Willows Club, in the final, while Jean Campbell took the women's laurels by her victory over Doreen Swayne. Strong contenders for the men's honors are R. A. Phillips, Cam Logan, Des and Harry Bleasdale and Ross "Bud" Hocking, recent winner of the Garrison Club tournament. In the women's singles there is Miss Audrey Tremaine, Miss McCall, Florence Oates, winner of the Garrison Club crown last Wednesday, Doreen Swayne and Margery Hughes.

The men's doubles will see a new set of champions. Harry Webb and Reg Corfield, last year's winners, have broken partnership, the former having left since the last tourney to reside in Kelowna. However, Corfield has paired up with Drennan Hincks this year, and is confident of retaining his crown. Peter and Paul Phillips, Cam Logan and George Phillips, Des and Harry Bleasdale, and Ralph Bagley and Pat Colclough are other formidable combinations in the race for the honors.

The mixed doubles competition should be extremely keen with such well-known couples entered as the following: Drennan Hincks and Audrey Tremaine, Harry Bleasdale and Mrs. Heywood, Des Bleasdale and Miss McCall, R. A. Phillips and Miss Hughes, Reg Corfield and Jean Campbell, and Pat Colclough and Mary Campbell. Another strong couple is Hugo Rayment and Florence Oates.

Kent's Music Store Has Well Developed Service For Radio

Department Is Under Management of J. H. Allison, Who Has Given Extensive Study to Radio Engineering—K. O. Winkler Handles Repairs

Recognizing the demand for up-to-date radio service in Victoria, Kent's Music Store, 643 Yates Street, has, in the past few years, built up a service department which is second to none, harmonizing with the reputation for quality which is held throughout the store. This department is under the management of J. H. Allison, who has studied radio engineering intensively, being actively engaged in service work for eight years.

Mr. Allison carries first-rate qualifications, being a graduate of the National Institute of Radio and a member of the Radio Television Institute. Under his direction the department has shown steady expansion. In the shop, located in the same premises as the store, the most up-to-date and modern equipment for repair and service is to be found.

K. O Winkler handles all work that is brought in, being an acknowledged expert with radio experience that dates back to the early days of radio experiment and research. A specialty is made of rewinding transformers, meters, etc.

DELIVERY SERVICE

Typical of the test equipment is the latest type Stark-Knudsen slide selector acremeter, the only one of its type in the city. With this instrument tubes are able to be tested absolutely accurately, all elements of the new type tubes being thoroughly proved. This is done before the customer's eyes, the reaction of the tube being registered plainly by a systm of colored lights.

In conjunction with the service department there are two cars operated, one a truck designed for the delivery and servicing of new sets, the installation of aerials, etc. A special feature of this latter service is made, Mr. Allison having made a thorough study of the short wave noiseless attenna system. Installations are made with the particular individual problems of each location in mind. Another part of this service, which has proved of inestimable value to many radio owners, is the balancing and aligning of sets. Very often, after a long period of operation a set will lose efficiency through no apparent cause. Then the testing equipment is brought into play and adjustments made, which bring back the full selectivity and tonal beauty. Every new set which comes into the store for sale is checked for every default before it is placed on the floor.

With such modern equipment, expert knowledge and painstaking care over every individual problem, it is small wonder that the radio service department has grown to be a salient factor in Kent's Music Store.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"TO HAVE ONE'S HAIR STAND ON END"

The expression "to have one's hair stand on end" is faithful to its origin, in its connotation of that eerie feeling produced in humans through the intervention of a supernatural phenomenon.

As is the case with so many others, we owe this common line to Shakespeare. Its earliest recorded use is in Hamlet, in the verse:

"I am thy father's spirit,
Doomed for a certain term to walk the night,
And for the day confin'd to fast in fires,
Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature
Are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am forbid
To tell the secrets of my prison-house,
I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood,
Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,
Thy knotted and combined locks to part

THREE CLUBS TIED IN ENGLISH SOCCER LEAGUE

Sunderland, Stoke City and Arsenal Share First Place

Former Eleven Held to Draw by Sheffield Wednesday — Gunners Trim Wolves and Stoke Beats Preston North End — Scottish Leaders Held to Ties — Celtic Advances

LONDON, Dec 1 (CP).—A three-cornered deadlock for leadership of the English Football League resulted this afternoon when Sunderland, previously alone at the top, was held to a tie while the Arsenal and Stoke City won their matches at home. Sunderland and Sheffield Wednesday battled to a 2-2 draw, but Arsenal overwhelmed the Wolves 7-0 and Stoke defeated Preston North End by 3-1.

The championship race was knotted up tighter than any time previously this season as Manchester City beat Grimsby Town to gain the second bracket, just a game behind the leaders. West Bromwich beat Leicester 4-1 and Liverpool triumphed over Aston Villa 3-1, to go into a tie for the third bracket. At the end of the afternoon the first eight teams were separated by only two games.

In the feature match of the second division, Brentford beat Manchester United by 3-1, but Bolton remained just a half-game ahead of Brentford by virtue of a 3-2 victory in a close struggle at Norwich City.

As the third division resumed league warfare following participation in the cup, Reading ousted Charlton Athletic from the top of the Southern section, beating Luton Town 1-0 to gain a half - game margin over the Athletic, who lost 2-0 at Watford.

Tranmere Rovers and Halifax Town continue to dispute leadership of the Northern section, as once again both teams won their matches — Tranmere beating Hartlepools and Halifax winning a tough match with Stockport County.

SCOTTISH LEAGUE

GLASGOW, Dec. 1 (CP).—Leaders in the Scottish Soccer League remained "as you were" today after the first four ranking teams, drawn against each other, figured in close draws. Rangers and Hamilton tied 1-1 at Ibrox Park, while St. Johnstone and Hearts tied 2-2 on the latter's ground.

The champion Rangers remained a game ahead of St. Johnstone, but while the front teams were struggling against each other, Celtic and Aberdeen won their matches to make it a four-cornered deadlock for third place with Hamilton and Hearts. The Celts trounced St. Mirren 4-2, and Aberdeen at home won over Queen's Park 5-0. Only three points separate the first six.

Motherwell scored the biggest win of the day. The slipping fir packers returned to their old form to overwhelm the lowly Dunfermline outfit by 9-3.

King's Park coasted along at the top of the second division with an easy 5-1 victory over East Fife. Battling for undisputed possession of second place, Third Lanark beat St Bernards 2-1, to keep just a game behind the leaders.

Max Advising Brother

CARNERA GETS VERDICT OVER VIC CAMPOLO

Former Heavyweight Champion Pounds Out Decision in Tame Affair

BUENOS AYRES, Dec. 1 (AP).—Primo Carnera, giant Italian, who ormerly held the world' heavyweight championship, outpointed Victorio Campolo, the Argentina fighter, who is only one size smaller, in a twelve-round bout here today.

Carnera, making his first appearance in Buenos Ayres, had little trouble earning the decision after twelve rather tame rounds, but Campolo, out of the ring for two years, put up a much better fight than had been expected.

Carnera had knocked out Campolo in two rounds at New York three years ago in their first meeting, but today he could not even knock the tall South American off his feet. Campolo used his long arms to tremendous advantage in holding Primo off and at the finish neither fighter was marked.

30,000 ATTEND

A crowd of 30,000 failed by a long way to fill Independiente Football Stadium, perhaps because word got around that Campolo was far over his former fighting weight. The Argentine, with a decided paunch, scaled 259 pounds, compared with Carnera's 266.

Campolo used to weigh around 225 in his best fighting form and the excess baggage he carried today slowed him up to a walk.

Campolo thus got through the first four rounds nicely, although the Argentine meat market proprietor was being outpointed by a wide margin.

CAMPOLO TIRES

Starting with the fifth round, however, Campolo visibly was tiring and the match slowed up with the Argentine clinching whenever he had a chance. From then on the match followed in the same groove with Carnera, much the fresher and stronger of the two, attacking constantly, looking for a knockout opening that never came.

Remember When

(Twenty-Five Years Ago)

It will be Victoria vs. Vancouver on Tuesday. The best amateur fistic artists of the Mainland and Island then will take place within the roped arena at Vancouver to satisfy themselves and spectators of their comparative skill. The statement has been made that this city's boxers were lethargic, lacking ginger and enterprise. Recent happenings prove that they were quiet because no definite proposition has been laid before them for months. Physical Director W. P. Bradley, of the Vancouver Athletic Club, visited the city and called on the mitt handlers with respect to a tournament he has fixed for the date indicated.

Chief among the clever Victoria mitt wielders who will take part in the tourney is Charles Cohen, ex-champion lightweight of Ireland. He is a clever boxer—clever enough to win a decision from Pat Raferty in the British Columbia championships here last year—so his class may be judged from that fact. In the 125-pound, or special weight class, there will be Joe Bailey and Bill Hill. The latter may be able to make the 115-pound class, but both are conceded to be the fastest pair at their weight in the amateur ranks on Vancouver Island.

* * *

The Victoria and District Association Football League will hold a meeting in the Y.M.C.A. this evening. Players will be graded, among those directly interested being Hall, Winkle, J. Miller and F. Miller. Protests from the Empress and Esquimalt teams, both of which allege the playing of unregistered men, also will be decided.

McKay Giants to Oppose Ribbons Saturday Night

PLAYING under the name of the Italian Athletic Club this season, but better known to Victoria basketball fans as the McKay Giants, this clever Seattle cage squad will be seen in action at the Victoria High School gymnasium, Saturday evening, against the Victoria Blue Ribbons, undefeated men's senior "A" quintette. The visitors have a number of new players added to their squad, and according to reports received here, are much stronger than last year. League officials announced last night that a local preliminary game will be staged before the big inter-city attraction.

Badminton Squads Play to 8-8 Draw

Deep Cove and Hillcrest, fourth division badminton squads, played to an 8-8 draw in a Lower Vancouver Island Badminton League fixture, played on the former's courts.

NAVY BLANKS ARMY 3-0 IN GRID TUSSLE

First Victory in Thirteen Years — Huskies Trim Southern California

By HERBERT W. BARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Navy's gallant football midshipmen whipped the Army for the first time in thirteen years, yesterday, as Rice and Tulane reached the championship heights in the Southwest and South.

A crowd of 80,000, braving a heavy rain, jammed Franklin Field in Philadelphia to see Navy gain a 3-0 victory over the Army on Slade Cutter's field goal from the seventeen-yard line in the first period. It was the first time since 1921 that the sailors had beaten their traditional rivals.

Rice's Owls, coming back strongly after their upset at the hands of Texas Christian a week ago, buried Baylor under a 32-0 count to clinch the Southwest conference title. Tulane's Green Wave, meantime, gained a share of the Southeastern conference crown along with Alabama, by nipping Louisiana State, 13-12, before 30,000 spectators. Monk Simons took a lateral from Bucky Brian and ran forty yards for the winning touchdown in the last four minutes of play.

BOOSTS SCORING

Bill Shepherd, Western Maryland's star halfback, gained clear claim to the national individual scoring championship as he scored seven of his team's points in a 13-0 triumph over Georgetown. He wound up the season with 133 points. Boston College, pushing forty-eight yards to a touchdown in the final quarter, beat its traditional Jesuit rival, Boston College, 7-2.

A fifty-six-yard drive in the final period carried Georgia to a 7-0 triumph over Georgia Tech, while Mississippi topped Mississippi State, 6-3, in another Southeastern conference duel. Duke buried North Carolina State, 32-0, in the last game of the Southern conference schedule.

Detroit's Titans struck quickly in the first period and then held off Washington State's Cougars to win, 6-0, in a distinct upset. Southern Methodist walloped Texas Christian, 19-0, in the Southwest.

Concentrating their scoring in the second period, Washington's Huskies defeated Southern California, 14-7, for the first time in many years. It was the Trojans' fifth defeat in ten games and closed the most disastrous Pacific Coast conference campaign they have known since Howard Jones took over the coaching reins.

Queensland Takes Big Cricket Lead

BRISBANE, Australia, Dec. 1 (CP).—The home eleven took a long lead over South Australia as the Sheffield Shield cricket match between Queensland and South Australia continued, today.

Scores at the close of play: South Australia 281 (Nitschke 86, Waite 51, Wyeth 6 for 33 and Oxenham 4 for 68); Queensland 374 for seven (Benated 59, Hansen 147, Oxenham 60, not out).

"Come back for something you have forgotten, as usual," sneered the husband.

"No," replied the wife sweetly, "I have come back for something I've remembered."

FIRST BANK STATEMENT OF THE YEAR

IMPERIAL BANK OF CANADA

President and General Manager Address Shareholders

The Annual Meeting of Shareholders was held at the Head Office, Toronto, on 28th November. The chair was taken at noon by Mr. Frank A. Rolph, President, who said in part:

President's Address

You will notice by the Balance Sheet before you that the net profits for the year are slightly higher than for the previous year, and that we carry forward a slightly larger amount to the credit of Profit and Loss Account. Throughout the year we have maintained the dividend rate of ten per cent (10%), and the results obtained have justified our doing so.

FOREIGN SITUATION

The political situation in Europe is causing a great deal of uncertainty throughout the business world, and the disturbances which have been taking place, together with the rumors of further troubles to come, are retarding business development along International lines. For a considerable period of time, and especially within the past twenty years, changes have taken place throughout the World, gradually evolving better conditions for the underprivileged classes. A most drastic form of change took place in Russia by means of revolution and the ultimate result is still in doubt. Italy, accepting a powerful Dictator, is far better off than she was but how long she can continue along present lines is still to be determined. Germany is trying a different method, so drastic it may bring disastrous results. In the United States President Roosevelt's policy is working a readjustment which we hope is going to be beneficial, but the situation is so involved at the present time that we cannot foresee the final outcome. We are hoping for the best. In Great Britain the same process is under way but along democratic lines with the co-operation of the people, and under sound legislation. This is bringing the best results of any of the European countries. All these readjustments aim at betterment, especially for the working and underprivileged classes.

What we appear to suffer from throughout the World at the present time is not over-production of any one product, but lack of methods of distribution. Here again readjustment is necessary, not a redistribution of gold and silver, but a redistribution of the products of the World so that the surplus products of one country are made available for the needs of the others. It is a complex problem—a problem of first magnitude, but one which is in process of being solved. While this process may be slow we will have to exercise patience and do our part toward that readjustment and redistribution which is essential for the world's welfare.

CANADIAN CONDITIONS

A few weeks ago I made a trip through to the Pacific Coast with our General Manager, our Winnipeg Directors and our Western Superintendent. We visited most of our important branches from Winnipeg to Victoria, and interviewed many of our Managers from smaller branches who met us at central points. We found conditions generally much better than expected and notwithstanding the trying periods through which our Western farmers have passed they are still of good heart, and carrying on with a desire to meet their financial obligations and to maintain their farms. Even in districts as hard hit as South Saskatchewan was they still keep up courage and express their desire to pay their debts. We admire our Western people for the way in which they meet adversity and carry on under trying conditions. Notwithstanding the severe losses suffered through drought the country as a whole shows an improved condition over 1933.

In British Columbia there has been quite a revival in mining and in the lumbering industry. Great Britain and the overseas Dominions being the most important customers for B.C. lumber. Trade agreements, especially the Ottawa agreement, are responsible for the much larger export of lumber to Great Britain, Australia, South Africa and other Dominions, besides foreign markets. The loss of the United States market through tariff restrictions has been practically made up by the increased markets obtained from the sources I have mentioned.

Alberta—In this Province conditions on the whole are better than in 1933 and optimism is the keynote for the future. The crop of wheat in 1934 was larger than the crop of 1933 and with better prices the situation looks considerably improved.

Saskatchewan—Saskatchewan has been the greatest sufferer of all our Western provinces, having been more severely hit by the drought, but notwithstanding this, collections are slightly better than they were last year as better prices are obtainable. If they could get an average crop next year at present prices many of the financial difficulties would be solved for them.

Manitoba—The wheat crop was slightly higher in 1934 than in 1933 and with a greater diversity of interests than in some of the Western provinces they are looking forward with considerable optimism to the year ahead.

Ontario and Quebec have both made considerable recovery in manufacturing, with higher commodity prices, showing itself quite markedly throughout these two industrial Provinces. The bottom of the depression was touched about February, 1933, nearly two years ago, and the recovery has been going on ever since, slowly and somewhat irregularly, but substantial gains have been made. The outlook for the newsprint industry is greatly improved with the demand and the price advance which has recently been announced. This will have a beneficial effect on the lumber industry and, as a consequence, activities in the woods will undoubtedly increase this winter and will aid materially in the matter of employment. There has been greater activity in mining with a larger output of gold and silver as well as other metals, giving additional employment to many men. In light manufacturing there has been an increase in volume but it is not yet up to what might reasonably have been expected in view of the advance in other directions.

Maritime Provinces—We have no branches but statistics go to show that there has been a very marked improvement in conditions which is most encouraging.

GENERAL BUSINESS

Taking it all in all, there is a general growth in Canadian business as shown by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, reporting Exports up and Imports up. There is nothing to indicate a boom, for which we may be thankful, but the general improvement which has taken place throughout the year looks encouraging for the future. Commodity prices are up in most lines, and, generally speaking, there is a better feeling throughout the industrial and financial markets of Canada.

RAILWAY SITUATION

The operating deficits of approximately One Million Dollars ($1,000,000.00) per week which the taxpayers of Canada are paying to maintain the Canadian National Railways is still one of the most serious obstacles to the balancing of our Canadian Budget. It is very difficult to determine what is the best step to take to relieve ourselves of this burden. It seems absurd to maintain duplicate services where only one is required. Together with many others, I dislike the thought of a monopolization of our railway system, but from an economic standpoint I cannot help but feel that in Mr. Beatty's solution by unification lies the only measure which will bring the maximum of relief. Co-operation is accomplishing something but only a small part of what could be accomplished if we could do away with the great duplication of effort and expense which now prevails.

EXPENSES OF GOVERNMENT

A few moments ago I mentioned the cost to the taxpayers of Canada in connection with one item of Government expenditure, namely the maintenance of the Canadian National Railways. This is only one of the services for which we are paying too much. I am not a politician—never have been and hope never to be—but the truth of the matter is, we have altogether too much government in this Canada of ours. We need a Federal Government, but we do not need more than half of the Provincial Governments we have. We do need a certain amount of municipal administration, but we have four or five times what is required for the maintenance of law and order and the other essential services required for carrying on the necessary business of governing a people. I am not finding fault with any particular administration, Federal, Provincial or Municipal, at the present time. I merely throw out the very general remark that we have altogether too much of it. I hope somebody with more knowledge and ability than I have will devise some means of suggesting to the people of Canada a Government, or Governments, which will be adequate without having it as cumbersome, unwieldy and expensive as what we are labouring under, in its different forms, in Canada today.

NEW BUILDING

This present Head Office building has been occupied by the Bank since its inception in 1875. We have long had under contemplation a new Head Office building, but have postponed taking the step until we considered the time opportune. Many years ago we purchased the property on the northwest corner of King and Yonge Streets, which was later expropriated by the Dominion Government for the use of the Canadian National Railways. We then purchased the Union Bank of Canada building on the southeast corner of Bay and King Streets, together with additional property adjoining so as to give us a site of 100 Ft. frontage on King Street and 100 Ft. on Bay Street, to enable us to erect a Head Office building at the proper time. Very careful consideration has been given to this by the Executives and Directors of the Bank and we were all unanimous in the opinion that it was high time for us to erect our new Head Office building. Our present quarters here on Wellington Street are out of date and away from the financial centre of the city.

MR. A. E. PHIPPS
General Manager

I trust you will find the statements of Profit and Loss Account and the General Balance Sheet which are in your hands, satisfactory. As was the case last year, there has been very little change in the figures—but there has been a moderate further improvement in the position and a slight increase in the earnings and the totals of the major items in the Balance Sheet.

Those of you who are observant will note that the wording of the profit item has been changed. Whereas formerly we declared that the profits for the year were so much, "after paying all expenses and providing for all bad and doubtful debts," the relative statement this year is "after making provision to contingency accounts, out of which full provision for bad and doubtful debts has been made." We have been asked to adopt this new phraseology for the sake of uniformity, but it means exactly what our former statements did, that the profits for the year are after making full provision for all expenses and bad and doubtful debts out of the current year's earnings.

The profits at $1,231,992.97, compared with $1,204,038.70 for 1933, show an increase of nearly $28,000 and have been sufficient to provide for the dividends at the rate of 10% per annum and enable us to write to contingencies the sum of $300,000, as against $250,000 last year, and to carry forward $595,775.18, which is about $15,000 more than last year.

GENERAL STATEMENT

There has been an increase of $475,420 in circulation, which now stands at $8,375,638. Deposits are up $2,312,893.26 and now stand at $106,761,943.11—the increase being altogether in deposits by the public bearing interest, the figures being $85,600,000 compared with $83,300,000 in 1933. The Bank's total deposits in the 1932 statement were 99½ million dollars.

The other liabilities are advances under the Finance Act, which, as formerly explained, is the Bank's share of the loan of $35,000,000 to the Dominion Government financed in this way in November, 1932. Deposits by other banks in Canada and elsewhere and Letters of Credit outstanding are about $1,000,000 less. This has no significance as these accounts fluctuate from day to day. Total liabilities to the public stand at $120,500,424.79 compared with $118,733,282.52 in October, 1933, an increase of $1,767,142.27 and reflects an improvement all along the line. The expansion in circulation and deposits indicates increased activity in business.

ASSETS

The position of the assets is almost unchanged from last year—the actual cash is $9,800,000 odd compared with $9,900,000 odd a year ago. The cash and cash items together total $22,717,000 odd compared with $22,366,000 last year. The securities made up of Dominion and Provincial Government Bonds $23,700,000 odd, municipal securities $5,400,000 odd, and other good bonds $154,000 total $29,357,282.94 compared with $29,224,564.24. There has been an increase of a little over $1,000,000 in the Call Loans, which stand at $7,012,892.97 caused by increased activity in loans to brokers. Advances to Provincial Governments have increased some $320,000 and stand at $3,200,013.53, while the loans to Cities and Municipalities of $7,550,297.73 are down $1,000,000, which we hope is a sign of not such free borrowing by municipal authorities.

The total of the amounts mentioned above comprises what we call the quick assets of the Bank and equal 58.4% of the Bank's liabilities to the public compared with 58% last year—the proportion of actual cash and cash assets being 18.85%.

The current loans are nearly $59,000,000 against $57,500,000 in 1933 and 1932. The bank premises remain at $6,000,000.

The other minor items making up the Assets remain in much the same or slightly improved position.

BRANCHES

The Branches of the Bank now number 197—a reduction of 2 during the year. The largest number of Branches the Bank ever had in operation was 227 at the end of 1931. It is interesting to note that the greatest number of Branches operated by all the Canadian Banks was 4,876 in 1920, of which 200 were outside of Canada—the figures are now 3,762 Branches, of which 155 are outside of Canada.

SHAREHOLDERS

The shareholders of the Bank total 2,652 compared with 2,645 a year ago. The shares held by residents of the United States number 8,765 divided amongst 343 shareholders, compared with 8,568 shares with the same number of shareholders a year ago.

STAFF

The Staff at present numbers 1,351 compared with 1,380 a year ago. The Staff have worked very loyally and well during the year and it is to their devotion to duty that the satisfactory statement you have before you is principally due.

GENERAL

This concludes the explanations I have to make of the Bank's business and so on, and really brings to a close the duty imposed upon me by the President who has dealt with the present condition of business and the future outlook very well indeed. With Mr. Rolph's remarks I thoroughly agree and have little to add to them.

One of the matters talked about by him which must be of interest to every shareholder is the erection of the Bank's new Head Office building at the corner of King and Bay Streets, Toronto, which is now definitely under way. Doubtless you have seen and read enough in the newspapers to give you a very good idea of the size and proportions of the building. It will be a simple but handsome structure devoted entirely to the purposes of the Bank, although at the beginning there may be a moderate amount of space included to take care of future expansion from which we may in the meantime derive some revenue. The banking-room, which will be 22 feet high and which will occupy the whole of the ground floor, should be sufficient for our needs for many years. The structure when completed we are satisfied will meet with your approval and will be a real acquisition to the business section of Toronto. Its cost has been stated to be something under $1,000,000, but we expect to complete it for some $750,000, so that we are not being unduly extravagant. We expect to move into the new building in about a year's time. Of course, thereafter we will maintain a Branch, complete in all respects, on the site of the present Head Office for the convenience of our old friends and customers located in this vicinity. We have taken a long time to make up our minds to build a new Head Office, and I think your Directors have done wisely in waiting. We have been able to profit by the experience of others and are getting our building during a period of low-cost construction and moreover we are building it at a time when leadership, particularly in construction, is urgently required, and when the implied expression of confidence in going on with the work just now should be helpful.

INTEREST RATES

Toward the end of our fiscal year through the co-operation of the Dominion Government with the Chartered Banks and other institutions accepting deposits an arrangement was arrived at whereby the rate of interest on deposits was again reduced the rate upon saving deposits being 2% from the 1st November. This reduction was inevitable owing to the advancing price of Dominion Government and giltedge securities, which, of course, means a substantial cut in income from such investments, of which the Banks are holding increasing quantities—the holdings by all the Chartered Banks of Dominion and Provincial securities alone at the end of September, 1934, being over $710,000,000. The comparable figures for the two past decades being $361,000,000 in 1924 with only 11½ millions in 1914. It is quite evident that a reduction in the rate of return of from ½ of 1% to 2% and even more on such a large proportion of the investments of the Banks meant that the Banks could no longer afford to be so generous to their depositors. The reduction in interest on deposits has also enabled us in some instances to reduce the rate of interest to important commercial accounts and thereby we hope stimulate business to some extent.

BANK OF CANADA

The President has alluded to the establishment of the Bank of Canada and I fully concur in all he has said. Now that the Government in its wisdom has gone about the establishment of the Bank of Canada, we are glad to know that the provisions of the Act of Incorporation are moderate and generally satisfactory I believe to the Chartered Banks. I also would like to associate myself with the President's remarks regarding the selection of a Governor in the person of Mr. Graham F. Towers, whom I have known for a number of years. I believe the appointment to be an excellent one and Mr. Towers assures me that the choice of Mr. J. A. C. Osborne as Deputy Governor is entirely satisfactory to him. Mr. Osborne's experience in the Bank of England should render him a most valuable assistant to Mr. Towers in getting the Bank of Canada working to the satisfaction of everybody. As far as we are concerned, we promise full co-operation and we trust that the Bank of Canada will prove a real corner-stone for Canadian finance.

SERVICE TO ALL

In 1932 I told the Meeting that the policy of the Imperial Bank of Canada was to continue to give the very highest service to all, assisting to the fullest extent consistent with safety those of our customers who were struggling honestly with adversity and extending the utmost leniency to our friends and customers for whom the going was hard, with the endeavor always before us to keep business on its feet and the farmer on the land. I repeat this is our policy today, and while it may for some time to come entail some rebate of interest and even in some cases a partial rebate of principal to those who are struggling I am satisfied that policy is a sound one and will be found the best in the long run. As a matter of fact we have already adopted it in some instances with satisfactory results.

BETTER TIMES COMING

Last year I ventured the opinion that we were slowly emerging from the condition in which we found ourselves two years ago and I think that all of you will agree that the prediction was a happy one and proved to be correct. It is true that business slows up a little from time to time, but it goes forward again and each time the wave comes a little higher up the shore and while the time of waiting is wearying and tries our patience I still am confident that barring any major disturbances in the world's affairs we are really on our way to better times.

Directors were re-elected as follows: Frank A. Rolph, Lieut.-Col. J. F. Michie, R. S. Waldie, George C. Heintzman, J. W. Hobbs, Walter C. Laidlaw, John A. Northway, A. E. Phipps, Henry E. Sellers, Winnipeg, George H. Aikens, K.C., Winnipeg, R. O. McCulloch, Galt, and W. B. Woods. Subsequently a meeting of Directors re-elected Frank A. Rolph President, Col. J. F. Michie and Mr. R. S. Waldie Vice-Presidents.

ORLEANS LOVES OLD ROMANTICS

NEW ORLEANS.—Old New Orleans is muttering against its twentieth-century government's plan to remodel its eighteenth - century French market.

Spanish soldiers trod through it in the 1790's. Andrew Jackson knew it. Lafayette lived on the corner. McKinley spoke from nearby galleries. Quadroons sipped coffee there, elbow to elbow with gay cavaliers. Duels began under its spreading roof. Negro mammies sing in it. French is still its language. There is bartering, trading and haggling there, and debutantes frequent it with stiff-shirted escorts.

But the practical government wants to alter the line of the levees nearby and the market must go. A new one will be built. It will be modern and sanitary, and probably well frequently by thrifty housewives. But the romance will be gone.

ACTRESS INJURED BY FLYING BLADE

Veteran Marie Tempest Pierced in Arm by Thrown Rapier During Theatre Play

LONDON.—Marie Tempest, famous English actress, seventy years of age, playing the lead in "Theatre Royal" at the Lyric Theatre, narrowly escaped serious injury while performing on the stage.

Miss Tempest's arm was cut when she was struck by a rapier thrown in the air after a fencing bout between Laurence Olivier and Patrick Susands. She said afterward that she was none the worse for the accident.

Mr. Olivier, in the part of her son, had to chase his physical training instructor down a staircase in the middle of the stage and disarm him. It was then that the rapier whirled from the swordsman's grasp, pierced her forearm and cut her fingers. As soon as she had finished the scene Miss Tempest's arm and fingers were bound.

Pat — "Sure, it means that you won't be admitted if you don't go yourself."

SILVER SLIPPERS By Temple Bailey

CHAPTER XLIX

In two weeks Joan would marry Drew Hallam. If it had not been for Amelie and Scripps, Giles would have returned at once to his island. Among his books he felt he might find surcease from the agony which tore him. Deep in his heart he was aware that Joan would never be happy. There was that within her which Drew could never satisfy. She was heading straight for disaster.

There were things, too, he had to think about, which made him uncertain as to the course he should pursue. Many of the men he had met in Paris knew Drew Hallam, and from them he had heard the gossip which linked the name of Joan's future husband with a past which was indiscreet, if not stained with dishonor. If Joan had had a brother or a father, Giles would have laid the whole story before them. Yet to go to Joan herself? How could he do it? She would not believe him, and he would seem only a despairing lover trying to force an issue for his own sake.

As he sat by the quiet pool, in the purple dusk, he wondered why he should care what he seemed to others. The thing was to save the woman he love. He had thought of an appeal to Hallam. Of a challenge to Drew's own sense of the enormity of linking his smirched life with the life of a girl like Joan.

Whatever he did, must be done at once. He rose and stood with his face uplifted to the sky. Above him was a serene world—yet his heart was torn.

And now Amelie and Scripps came from the blossoming arbor, hand in hand. As they approached, Amelie was singing a little French song she had often chanted long ago for Scripps—her voice was like a bird's, sweet and clear in the silent night.

When they reached him Scripps spoke: "Amelie wants to come back here . . ."

"You mean . . .?" Giles looked from one to the other.

"Yes," Scripps said, and his voice was deep with emotion, "she wants to come with me, Giles, alone . . ."

Sitting by the pool the three of them made their plans. They would return to Paris, and as soon as possible Scripps and Amelie would settle down for a time in this lovely spot. Amelie was radiant. The dark clouds had lifted. She was like herself. Simple, sweet. Giles felt, however, that they must not go too fast; there must be no mistake before Amelie entered upon this new life which was to be an ecstatic echo of the old.

As they drove home, Giles knew that freedom had come to him at last. Amelie and Scripps would soon not need him. Yet he knew, too, that his release had arrived too late. He would be alone with neither friendship nor love to fill his life. The days intervening between Joan's marriage would soon pass. She would be Drew's wife. Lost to him forever.

That night, as he sat late in the grill room of his hotel, he was approached by an English officer whom he had known intimately during the Great War. They talked over old times, of Amelie and Scripps, and Giles voiced with some vehemence his sense of restlessness and indecision. "I am not sure what I want to do with my life."

"Why not travel?"

Giles tapped the table thoughtfully. "It was what I wanted—but now that the opportunity is mine, I find myself eager to go back to my island—to bury myself."

His friend demanded, "What has happened?"

Giles tried to laugh it off, "Perhaps I am growing old."

"Perhaps—you are in love."

"What make you think that?"

"Oh, a man like you should be ready for adventure, for life, for experience."

Giles flung up his head. "I am in love. With a woman who marries another man next week, and he is not worthy of her."

"How do you know?"

"You remember him—Drew Hallam."

The Englishman gave a short exclamation, "Remember! He is a cad and a coward."

Giles' tone was eager, "You're sure of that?"

"Sure of it," the Englishman settled himself in his chair, "listen to this."

The story that he told was not a pleasant one. "There was Rose Carter. He would have married her in a minute if she had had money. He is always hard up. If you care anything for the girl that he is going to marry, why don't you lay the case before her?"

"But how can I, loving her, do that?"

"It is because you love her that you should do it."

"I'd rather go to Hallam himself."

"Well, why not? Tell him what you know. In the old days you could have had the thing out with pistols. As it is, you may knock each other down, but what's the difference?"

They said little after that, and the next morning Giles left for Barcelona. He took the same route that Joan had followed, coming at night to the dusky inn where Rose and Joan had met. He was aware of the charm of it all and of the atmosphere which seemed to belong to mediaeval days. He was aware, too, of that sense of romantic adventure which had impressed Joan. He wondered if by any chance he might some day travel this road with the woman he loved. If she did not marry Drew? Might there not come a time . . .?

As he sat at breakfast he saw opposite him a sailor in a vivid blue kerchief about his head. He was showing to a companion, as picturesque of himself, the model of a little painted ship. It was a tiny, perfect thing, carved from wood, brilliantly colored and gilded, with its pennants and flags perfect. Giles' eyes rested on it eagerly. He leaned forward and asked in his imperfect Spanish, "Will you sell?"

The sailor nodded and named a price, and presently Giles found himself in possession of the tiny bark. He had a feeling that he would like to give it to Joan. Its spreading sails held the promise of some voyage of happy adventure. If only she did not marry Drew!

When he came that night to Barcelona, he went to the hotel and asked for Drew. He was told that the Hallams and Miss Dudley were spending the week-end in the mountains, a half-day's journey by motor. They had gone away, the clerk informed him, that Miss Dudley might rest.

Giles asked, "May I have the address? I am an old friend."

The clerk gave it, and an hour later Giles was on his way. He would see Drew Hallam and have the thing out. And failing Drew, Joan.

The retreat to which Joan and the Hallams had gone was an old monastery, which offered hospitality to those who sought rest and quiet. Joan would have loved it if she could have been there alone with Drew.

"It is a perfect place for a honeymoon," she said, "but why should Rose and her mother have followed us?" Her voice had a note of sharpness, her nerves were on edge. It had seemed incredible to her that Rose and Mrs. Carter should intrude at such a time. "What make her think she could come, Drew?" she insisted.

"But—surely you didn't invite her?"

"No—but she adores this place—and asked if I cared if she joined us. What could I say?"

"Will she be following us like this after we are married?"

He laughed and put a finger under her chin, lifting her face so that he could look into her eyes, "Jealous?"

A deep flush stained her cheeks. "You know I'm not. But the thing is so utterly absurd. Rose ought to know she is not wanted."

"Oh well, in a week you and I will leave her behind forever." He laid his cheek against hers, "My sweet . . ."

Joan wandered that afternoon into the garden of the monastery and sat on the rim of an old fountain and watched the doves flying down to the water. One of the brown-clad brothers came out to feed the doves.

Joan said to him: "I love this peace. The world seems so far away."

The brother said quietly: "Yet there is peace in the world daughter, if we have it in our hearts."

"I know."

There were no further words between them, and when he had fed the birds the brother went away, but Joan thought of what he had said: "There is peace in the world if we have it in our hearts."

She knew there was no peace in her world. When she was with Drew she was conscious of a sort of tumultuous happiness—he was a marvelous lover and knew how to play on the strings of her emotions. Yet always at the back of her mind was a disturbed sense that some day the glamor would disappear and she would face Drew's faults and be afraid of them.

Cold Feet

COLD FEET

When Winter comes, cold feet are in our midst again. Cold feet are the subject of many funny stories, but, like most other afflictions, they are anything but a joke to the person who has to bear the affliction.

The feet become cold when the circulation of the blood in the feet is poor, or, in other words, when warm blood does not flow through the bloodvessels of the feet sufficiently quickly to keep these extremities warm.

It is obvious that anything which interferes with the circulation gives rise to cold feet and hands, noticed chiefly in Winter, when the most rapid radiation of body heat takes place. Those whose hearts are so damaged as to cause poor circulation, which is most evident in the parts that are farthest from the heart, will complain of cold feet.

As we grow older, the bloodvessels tend to lose some of their natural elasticity. The effects of this are seen in poorer circulation. As we advance in years and our arteries become hardened, we are more apt to experience the discomfort of cold extremities.

Young persons are not immune to this complaint. In their case, the fact that they suffer from cold feet is most often due to their own actions. Tight shoes, which, to the eye of the owner, may be beautiful, are not appreciated by the feet which they encase. For one thing, they interfere with the blood supply and, as we have said already, that means cold, uncomfortable feet.

The blood keeps the feet warm, and it can do this quite readily unless the loss of heat is so rapid that heat cannot be supplied quickly enough to meet the demand. Thin soles, on a day when the temperature is well down the scale, are more than the heating apparatus of the body can take care of, and so the thin soles have cold feet above them as well as a cold sidewalk below them.

"He has cold feet" is a phrase used to describe those who apparently lack courage. There is some truth in the description, because fear causes the arteries to contract, and then follow, in natural sequence, poor circulation and chilling of the skin, including the feet.

Those who suffer from cold feet should seek the cause of the trouble. It may be a symptom of anaemia or other abnormal condition of the body. In all cases, loose shoes and stockings, of a weight that is suited to the weather, will help. A dip in cool water, followed by a brisk rub with a rough towel, helps to maintain a good circulation in the parts. This should be practised at bedtime by those whose feet are cold at nights.

"... So that Our Visitors will be Sorry to Leave"

"If we are going to invite people to this country, we must be honest with them . . . Courtesy costs nothing and is one of our greatest tourist assets . . . Let us so treat strangers within our gates that it will be easy for them to come, pleasant for them to stay, and difficult for them to leave."

Rt. Hon. R. B. BENNETT, Prime Minister of Canada, to the Canadian Association of Tourist and Publicity Bureaus, November 6, 1934.

Canada's tourist activities represent more than a great industry from which everybody benefits. They provide an opportunity to create what the Prime Minister has described as "that feeling of neighbourliness" which is such a vital factor in building up cordial relations within the family of nations.

For both these reasons, may I urge upon the people of Canada the importance of showing consideration, courtesy and honesty to guests of our country? Let us all do those little acts of kindness which count for so much when one travels in a strange land.

We have a beautiful country. We must keep it so. We want our visitors to travel highways free from disfigurement, walk the streets of cities that are orderly and clean, and find at the end of every day's travel an inviting spot to rest. Canadians should turn their attention now to the important work of preparing for next year's tourist season.

As a nation, we are advertising abroad the attractions of Canada as a holiday land. We must see to it that our guests return home with only the happiest recollections—and the determination to come back again and again.

Nor should we forget, in planning our own vacations, that there are beauties to discover and friendships to be made in our neighbouring provinces. We live in one of the world's most glorious playgrounds—let us learn to know better the rich variety of its travel attractions.

MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS

CANADIAN TRAVEL BUREAU

Presents Review of Findings of Harper Municipal Inquiry

Herbert Anscomb, M.P.P., Member of Board, Gives Outline of Important Points Brought Out During Sittings of Commission

The following is the full text of an address given to members of the Victoria Real Estate Board at a luncheon on Friday, November 23, by Herbert Anscomb, M.P.P., on some of the important features of the Harper Municipal Commission, of which Mr. Anscomb was a member:

May I first of all express my appreciation to your board for your kind invitation to address you today. I am a little afraid that the subject matter of the address may be somewhat threadworn but I will endeavour to only give you some details dealing with the more important points of the subject under review.

Contrary to general impressions the Commission did not travel all over the province in the execution of its duty, but confined its travels to the principal points or centres, and to those sittings representatives of the adjoining districts came to place their views before the Commission.

OBJECT OF ENQUIRY

The object of the commission was to enquire into the financial and administrative conditions of the various municipalities in the province in respect of, and in connection with the duties and powers given in the past to the municipalities by the respective legislatures—and more especially the financial relationship between the province on the one hand, and the municipalities on the other.

The chairman, His Honor Judge Harper, was very pointed in his request at each and every sitting that the fullest possible expression of views be given whether they were those of an elected body or of the individual, and I can truly say that the Biblical reference "Ask and Ye Shall Receive," was more than fully carried out.

Whatever may be asked or said—of this we can be quite confident that the conflicting opinions of all the people would require a Moses to consolidate them into something satisfactory to all—unless, and until—the ideal situation of all services and no taxes is propounded by some genius.

CONCURS IN FINDINGS

I am sorry that the circumstances of the time made it necessary that I resign the work of the Commission just prior to the close of the hearing and in consequence of it I was not a party to the final conclusions of the Commission on its recommendations. This much, however, can be said, whether there is or is not, the result would have been the same as the two remaining Commissioners must have agreed upon the points at issue or they would not have been made part of the report, and had I disagreed with some features of it there would still have been a majority of the Commission. As a matter of fact other than a few minor cases of principal—not of very great moment in themselves—I concur very generally in the findings.

I think it can at once be said that throughout the province there was a feeling represented, not only by members of official bodies, but by the public generally who appeared before the Commission of—shall I use the term—resentment and antagonism against the then Government, due to their having, in one case, withdrawn what was then considered their rightful grants or special field of taxation through the Government route, and secondly by the Government having placed a still greater charge on the municipalities for what are now so generally referred to as social charges.

In only one case was I able to notice a ready recognition of the extravagance and incompetence of past municipal administrators for their own sins, and a considerable part of their present grief is chargeable to that cause.

CALL ON GOVERNMENT

In almost every case there was an insistent demand that the Government must do this or that—but in practically no case do I remember anybody taking the view that a great deal of the present cost of things, whether they be provincial or municipal, must be cut down or eliminated so that relief could be secured from that angle—or that the individual who receives directly the benefit of many of these modern ideas should contribute directly to the cost for his own particular case.

There was, as a matter of fact, as, of course, was to be expected, some remarkable recommendations placed before the board. I remember, at one sitting, a suggestion mas made that if a man became delinquent with his taxes on his home it should not be sold, but he should be allowed to work out the equity on a basis of taxes.

Now, it is hardly necessary for me to point out to such a body as yours what position your city would be in in such a case. Only one example seems necessary: Assume a $2,500 house with $200 arrears to taxes, and the owner to be allowed to work out his supposed equity of some $2,300 at say $100 per year tax basis. For the next twenty years or so the city would receive no cash taxes, and at the end of that time it would secure title to the house—needless to say it would be in very poor shape and hopeless from a sale viewpoint.

It does not take much imagination to realize what would happen to the city itself if that idea was adopted.

TAX EXEMPTIONS

The question of relief by taxation or otherwise to municipalities of presently exempted Dominion or provincial lands and Soldier Settlement properties was continually before us. I refer particularly to those properties covered by exemption from taxation under Section 125 of the B. N. A. Act, which reads:

"No land or property belonging to Canada or any province shall be liable to taxation."

It was very strongly urged that the protection of the Crown was being invoked to the prejudice of the municipalities under conditions which were not contemplated by the Fathers of Confederation when the Act was framed.

In addition to those of such a flagrant nature as our own in Victoria—those of the adjoining district of Esquimalt, and the City of New Westminster, perhaps the most notable one is that of North Vancouver, where fifty-two acres with 1,800 feet of waterfront, on Burrard Inlet, was purchased by the P. G. E., subsequently taken over by the province, and consequently tax exempt. I do not think that the district would have minded so much had the railway there continued to operate—but it was closed down in that section, and the loss in taxation over the period has been approximately $100,000.

EVADING TAXATION

In the Surrey Municipality the Harbor Commissioners built an elevator and promptly had title transferred to the Crown, thus avoiding taxation.

In Prince Rupert the land comprising the townsite was originally owned by the Grand Trunk Development Co. and the Provincial Government. Many lots sold by the Government, under agreements of sale, reverted to the Crown after local improvements had been made and levied against these lots. The City Solicitor stated that some $81,626.00 of these taxes remained unpaid, and the city was unable to collect, as the Government claimed its right of exemption.

The Commission was pretty generally of the opinion that taxation should be allowed to municipalities in cases of that kind and expressed it that "occupiers of Crown lands using them for private gain should be taxed as though they were the owners."

The Commission did feel, however, that real property in use by the Harbor Board for provincial purposes was something in the nature of a national issue, and should not be subject to municipal taxation.

ASSESSMENT VALUES

One of what I consider the most important points always before municipal bodies was repeatedly brought to our attention. I refer particularly to the statutory requirement under Section 212, Subsection 1, of the Municipal Act, which requires a municipality to assess land at its actual value. We had several suggestions on this count that are remarkable in themselves.

One was made to us that the clause should be changed to read: "It should be a fair or equitable value."

Asked what he meant by that the speaker could not define it. I remember particularly stressing the question as there had been no recorded sales for years in the district and I was anxious to get the party's real view:

In a second case it was suggested: "It should be based as far as can be ascertained on the question of equity, that is, the intrinsic value."

Here again we were unable to get a clear definition of what was really meant.

Then again there was a suggestion that had, I think, a good deal of merit, viz., that whatever the assessment might be on any piece of property there should be no increase or decrease over say 8 or 10 per cent in any one year. The idea of this was to get away as far as possible from any boom periods. (I suppose most of you here would like to have one of those again for even say twenty-four hours.)

BASIS RECOMMENDED

Finally the Commission, in their wisdom, settled their own idea and recommended the clause should be changed to read; or that definition should be given to the clause:

"Actual value shall mean actual value of rateable property or any interest therein as it would be appraised in payment of a just debt from a solvent debtor."

While I sincerely hope that it works and helps the various assessors I still have my doubts.

"The question of taxation or otherwise of improvements by compulsion was before us everywhere, but at no point could you secure unanimity of opinion. In the case of West Cummerland, for instance, they took the view that the district was 100 per cent rural and that the only improvements that could be taxed were the fruit trees of the growers, so that they were against it.

Prince Rupert, Burnaby, West Vancouver and others were always against it, but they are gradually coming to it not from a love viewpoint but from sheer necessity.

In one particular case I well remember a certain organization—not a municipal council—recommend up to 35 per cent of the value be taxed. Asked why or how they arrived at that figure when they already had the power to tax up to 75 per cent, they admitted the figure was purely a compromise among the members of their association as they could not agree on a figure, but were definitely satisfied that 50 per cent was excessive and 75 per cent out of the question as pure confiscation.

It seems a little dififcult to some of us that it is so hard to make others see things that otherwise appear clear to us. It can surely only be logical that to the user of a service belongs the cost, and therefore improvements to which all services apply should be properly taxed, and far from being confiscatory, that is the only method, at the moment, that we can adopt that will allow us to remain solvent.

IMPROVEMENT TAX

It is interesting to note the general growth of the improvement tax idea in the Province.

In 1918, in fourteen cities and eighteen districts improvements were exempt. In 1923, in eleven cities and sixteen districts improvements were exempt. In 1928, in eleven cities and twelve districts improvements were exempt. In 1933, in four cities and nine districts improvements were exempt.

So you readily see the change that has taken place over a fifteen year period.

It is interesting to note, also, that the situation of those districts now in the hands of receivers:

Prince Rupert first imposed improvement tax in 1932, 20 per cent.

North Vancouver City first imposed improvement tax in 1930, 10 per cent; 1931, 15 per cent; 1932, 25 per cent; 1933, 35 per cent;

Burnaby first imposed improvement tax in 1932, 20 per cent; 1933 50 per cent;

Merritt first imposed improvement tax in 1932, 20 per cent; 1933 20 per cent;

District of North Vancouver first imposed improvement tax in 1931, 25 per cent; 1932, 35 per cent; 1933 35 per cent; —showing pretty clearly that the tendency to delay charging on improvements and leaving everything on land was left until financial difficulties embarrassed them.

"There is only one town in the Province, viz, Duncan, which has taken full advantage of the power to tax up to 75 per cent. Victoria comes next with 60 per cent.

"The Commission finally recommended that up to 50 per cent it should be mandatory and between 50 and 75 optional.

VICTORIA'S CASE

"Now there were some points of very great moment that apply generally, but especially to your own city, and in this connection I should like to be permitted to say that the case presented by the present Mayor on behalf of the City of Victoria was excellent in every way—clear, concise, to the point, and on time.

The points that I particularly refer to are the so-called social services: Mother's pensions, mental hospitals, Tranquille, hospitals, unemployment, and in addition those grants, some of which were originally given to the cities and then taken away from them: Liquor, pari-mutual, schools, amusement tax, etc.

The complaint was made at every session of the Commission that the imposition of additional obligations on the municipalities, combined with the reductions in the grants, had created an impossible situation, especially on the land owner.

The Commission felt strongly that these so-called social services fall into the category of "onerous" rather than "beneficial" taxes and should be distributed in some way that they will fall or be equally divided on all forms of wealth. In recent years, at any rate, "wealth" has assumed many new forms, and there seemed to be no equitable reason why a good deal of it should seemingly go free of these charges and that they be placed upon land.

SOURCES OF REVENUE

After a survey of the three main sources of revenue: land tax, income tax, luxury taxes, liquor, amusement, etc., the increase in the income tax would appear to be the most equitable and productive. While the income tax levied in proportion to the "ability to pay" is today everywhere recognized as the most scientific of all taxes, it should not be forgotten that these so-called "onerous" taxes, like the so-called "beneficial taxes" of municipalities, are for the express purpose of providing certain social relief for certain classes of the population, and I have a doubt in my own mind whether the so-called "ability to pay" is, after all, the true and honest method. There is a good deal to be said against it from the viewpoint of personal initative and a good deal to be said in favor of direct taxes from those who are to benefit.

Let us take the case of Mothers' Pensions, half of which cost in 1932 was placed on the municipalities. Several delegates were honest enough to say that as previously the whole cost had been assumed by the Government (Provincial), there had been some municipalities too ready to recommend mothers for pensions, but despite that statement it was felt by the Commission that the entire cost should be borne by the Government and that they could well guard against imposition if they used effectively the Workmen's Compensation Board staff of doctors or others to pass on each case.

PROVINCIAL CARES

The same can be said of the cost of Tranquille and the mental hospitals, viz., that they should be a provincial responsibility. As far as Tranquille is concerned, one has but to take the picture of the Okanagan to realize how unfair it is to charge part of that cost to the municipality. Here you have a district that is splendidly situated from a climatic viewpoint to the relief of tuberculosis. So much so that patents were unanimous, of course, that it was a cost not properly chargeable to land.

MOTOR LICENCES; GASOLINE

The Commission was of the opinion that some portion of the motor licences and gasoline tax should be given to the municipalities, despite the fact that formerly the gas tax never was given to them. It seemed to us that a very large percentage of these charges originated in the centres of population, but that whatever was done it was suggested the amount so allocated should be earmarked for road expenditure; but the Commission made no recommendation as to what proportion of the tax should be so handled.

My own view is that while we have these so-called ear-marked revenues it does not amount to much, as the city, or whoever it is, simply has to adjust their other revenues to fit their individual cases.

And in dealing with all these very contentious matters of revenue it was the considered opinion of the Commission that until such time as the Government was prepared to implement the suggestions with legislation, that grants on the basis paid in 1929 should be restored to the municipalities and that the former responsibility of social service charges should be reassumed by the Province.

MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONS

There is one case in which I think I should disagree with the Commission, and that was in their recommendation regarding the Commissioners appointed to take over the defaulting municipalities. They felt and suggested that more power should be given to these gentlemen to deal with three things:

1. Consolidation of the debenture debt and debentures generally or any portion thereof of the municipality;

2. Issue of debentures in payment of whole or any portion of the other debts;

3. Power to ratify and confirm any agreement that he might make with creditors or any section representing its debenture debt.

Now I do not think that there is a great deal to complain of in that, other than I think there should be no power to compel any debenture holder to accept any particular agreement that the receiver desires to make.

The weakness that I see in the recommendation of the Commission was dealing with the appointment of the receiver himself. It was felt that it would be better to follow the Ontario system rather than as at present, which provides, as you know, for the appointment of one man, generally an outsider. The Ontario system allows the council to function, although the control and management is vested in five supervisors. The Commission thought that number might with safety be reduced to three:

1. One appointed by the council;

2. One appointed by the Bureau of Municipal Affairs to represent the creditors;

3. One appointed by the Bureau of Municipal Affairs, an independent person, to be chairman.

They took the ground that local autonomy would be preserved, and that possibly voluntary applications for administration under such a board would be made by districts in distress, and, further, that in adjoining districts, one board could function.

My own view is that the appointment of a man who has never been connected with the district at all in supreme charge is far better. There would be no wire-pulling by members of the council, as the council under our system ceases to exist. He is not interested in local jealousies and is much more likely to conduct the business on the same basis as he would his own. The argument used that two districts could be consolidated under one board holds, I think, no special water, as that could be done in the present case, and was so done in North Vancouver and with the district.

KEEP OF PRISONERS

With reference to the administration of justice and keep of prisoners, from several points in the Province we received the same complaint, namely, that it was unfair to place on them the various costs of prosecution, sending to Oakalla, and keeping the prisoners. We had cases from the Interior where criminals had only recently arrived in their district, committed some major crime, and the entire cost fell on the municipality. In addition, if he was a married man with a family, one-half of an allowance to the family under the Mothers' Pension Act might legally be added to the cost of the municipality.

It was very apparent in some cases that, rather than be responsible for assuming the proper cost of carrying out the law, some districts were in the habit of reducing or changing the charges on certain counts against the prisoner, so that under the statute a fine could be imposed in lieu of a sentence if found guilty. It must be pretty obvious that if the law is to be fixed on that basis you are eventually going to have a general breakdown in the respect for all authority.

The Commission felt that if the law is to be enforced as is proper, it should be done at the expense of the state, and that the state should receive the revenue from it—fines.

CHANGING GROUND

Now I am going to close, Mr. President, with just a word on the question of the much-abused landowner and his relation with the now much-abused bondholder. While for a long time we have said Mr. Landowner must have relief, we are now veering round—without saying it very loud in a good many cases—and transferring the costs that have up until now been largely on the landowner to the bondholder. You are doing that in two ways: First, in some cases by defaulting; second, in some cases, by refusing to set aside the required sinking funds.

Let me remind you that there is a vast difference between the two classes of investors. Mr. Landowner had his day so long as all was well—he secured his rent, and if there was any appreciation in the value of the land he secured it.

Mr. Bondholder, on the other hand, lent you his money in order to make Mr. Landowner's property worth something in the first place. He asked for no say as to how his money was to be spent, only asking in return a very moderate rate of interest, plus an assurance that during the period of his loan you would not be extravagant and that you would save something each year to pay him off.

He had no opportunity of any appreciation in the value of his bond other than the very slight rise and fall reflected in the value of money.

You are now beginning to tell him in some cases that you cannot pay, in others that you will not save something each year to pay him off, and you use the argument that the Government has placed on you so-called social services that you cannot provide for as well as carry out your obligation to him.

When you say that, gentlemen, you simply mean that, having succeeded in breaking Mr. Landowner, you now have decided to do the same with Mr. Bondholder, the man who, in the first place, made your investment possible and, in most cases, worth while.

Now, in using that illustration I am not saying that the holder of that type of security should not pay his just share, I am simply trying to show that, having succeeded in ruining one type of investor, changing the method and ruining another will not solve the problem.

If these heavy social service costs are to go on, and it is considered that they cannot be a direct charge against those who are obviously to benefit from them, then, to my mind, the cost must be borne equitably by every class of the community.

HELPING HEALTH

How much do you pay for your Christmas seals? Why not increase your contribution to your local tuberculosis association? The money will be returned to you within the next few years through savings in taxes and in community wealth.

Why do Doctors Test Kidneys First?

Because they know that healthy Kidneys remove from the blood the waste matter formed by the ever-changing human body as it decays and rebuilds itself. But if the Kidneys fail—the system is poisoned and illness surely follows. As a health safeguard—as a wise precaution—flush your kidneys regularly every three weeks with Dodd's Kidney Pills—for over three generations the favorite Kidney tonic and remedy—non-habit forming—free from drugs. 33 flies through the air with the greatest of ease

... a dangerous and difficult feat; one calling for speed, daring, clear vision and sureness of a very exceptional order. Day after day he brings a new thrill to thousands of eager onlookers—people of all ages, sex and variety.

Possibly our comparison may seem a little far-fetched but where could be found a more appropriate analogy for the daily newspaper? Difficult obstacles must be and are overcome daily.

SPEED? ... Where else could you find another medium so gripping, so intense, so alive, that is published almost hourly? Where else is daring so ably exemplified as here where statements are published, upon which the continued existence of the paper itself depends?

... THE thoughts and ambitions of our people rely greatly upon the clear vision, foresight and keen judgment of men who formulate the policies of newspapers. In no other medium is the same inherent surety—giving to its advertisers and readers alike that spirit of confidence which marks the most powerful and influential advertising medium of modern life—THE DAILY NEWSPAPER.

Retired Shipmaster Tells About Yellow Fever Days at Rio

Crews of Sailing Vessels Waiting to Discharge Were Decimated by Disease—Heroism of English Doctor Recalled

After we had been lying in Rio Harbor for about a month," Captain Davies, continuing his story from last Sunday, said, "yellow fever broke out, and many ship's crews were decimated, our ship losing eight out of a crew of twenty-six—four seamen, three apprentices and the carpenter. On it first breaking out, I saw a Norwegian ship near me with flag at halfmast, and later learned the captain had died of the plague. Daily after that more flags were at halfmast, until practically every ship had had its flag halfmasted, but we shipmasters agreed not to halfmast our ensign any more, as it had a most depressing effect on the men. So ensigns were kept fully hoisted.

"In a short time the hospitals were full and no doctor would go afloat, until a young English doctor named Alwyn, I think, took up his quarters on a four-masted ship, the Commonwealth, if I remember rightly. He attended to the ships in harbor and he had a busy time. He was so overworked that when I sent for him one morning to come and attend a couple of my men that were down with fever, he asked me to take him ashore to hospital, as he was unable to do any more. I took him ashore and they made up a temporary bed for him, as there was no vacant bed. The nurse told me he was very bad, and he knew himself his case was hopeless. He died next day, so the ships were left without a doctor again.

MAJORITY REMAINED

"The hospitals being full, the patients from the ships assembled at a certain place in the ships' boats twice and a tug towed them over to a hospital at the other side of the bay. The majority of them never came back. All my crew had the yellow fever except myself, and I went down with it the day after we left to round the Horn to Chile, and I am pleased to say after it ran its course, which is only five days, I wakened the fifth morning clear of fever. You are either dead or well in five days, so have not long to wait for results.

"At times during the day a tugboat with a machine-gun used to steam along the waterfront, full speed, with the machine-gun going as she steamed along. Her coming was the signal for everybody to get to shelter. The boats crews that were ashore with the captain usually took shelter behind a brick warehouse that was handy, but one day an apprentice of the Crown of India stayed too long securing the boat and was shot through the spine and killed. This was before the fever started, and four of the six aprentices that acted as pallbearers at his funeral died from the disease. The owners cabled the captain to send the other two home, which he did. The vessel lost most of her crew.

"We eventually got alongside the wharf to discharge and found the end of the jetty was barricaded with sandbags, with soldiers in charge. There was some arrangement and I think the foreign men-o'-war were there to see it carried out, that no heavy firing was to be made on the city unless given at least twenty-four hours warning, but firing between batteries ashore and forts on the islands used to commence at early morning, cease about 10 o'clock, and then start again about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Nothing doing during the heat of the day.

TOOK IT COOLY

"While lying at the wharf we got notice to leave and go to anchor in the bay, as the rebels were going to bombard the city. As I, with other shipmasters, could not get a tug to take the ship out, I, with two others, went to the British Consul for advice. He seemed to be taking things very cooly, lying back in his chair smoking. He stated that as far as he was concerned he would be in his office all day, and as the bombardment was to commence at noon and his office was in a building facing the waterfront, we thought he did not anticipate much danger.

"So we went aboard my ship to await developments, and about 1 o'clock in the afternoon we suddenly heard yelling and shouting and rifles firing on the wharf. On going to see the cause, we found the soldiers jumping around and firing in the air. They all seemed crazy. Presently several high army officers came down and told us that the men on the ships had deserted during the night and that the war was over."

Ends Long Term of Service

THOMAS SPARKS

Who had been in the employ of Rithet Consolidated, Ltd., for the past forty-three years, retired from the position of wharfinger of No. 2 Pier, on Friday. He has owned a home in the country, near Victoria, for some years, and will live there.

IS LEAVING WATERFRONT

"Tommy" Sparks Likes Country Life and the Growing of Flowers

After an association extending over an unbroken period of forty-three years, during which time only the most cordial relations existed between himself and his employers, Thomas Sparks, wharfinger at No. 2 Pier for Rithet Consolidated, Limited, retired on Friday evening to enjoy, if the well-wishes of his many friends are carried out to the full, many years of well-earned retirement.

Mr. Sparks, who was born in Taunton, Somersetshire, arrived in Victoria by way of the United States, in February, 1890, aboard the old sidewheeler Olympian. He entered the employ of R. P. Rithet in April of the next year, and had been continuously in the employ of the firm until last Friday evening. He has seen many changes on the local waterfront during that time.

SAILING SHIP DAYS

When Mr. Sparks joined the wharf staff of Rithet's, sailing ships outnumbered steam vessels loading and discharging cargoes, the local docks being the distributing point for a large section of the British Columbia Coast, as well as the chief assembly place on the Coast for export salmon freights. At one time, the capacity of the sheds would be taxed with cases of salmon, the little freighters bringing them in from the canneries up and down the Coast. He has seen the passing of the sailing ships and their replacement with steam craft, and the expansion of docking facilities here to take care of the wider variety and greater quantity of merchandise passing through the port at the present time.

During his term of service, Mr. Sparks has come in contact with a great number of travelers, and has made a host of friends among people having business to transact at No. 2 Pier. Transportation, customs, immigration officials, baggage, express and longshoremen, as well as newspapermen, have always found him a pleasant chap to meet, no matter how busy he might happen to be at the moment.

Consequently, all who have been privileged to do business with the retiring wharfinger in the past have been pleased to contribute to a general token of appreciation, which has been suitably inscribed, "from his waterfront friends," and will be presented to him at a gathering, which will be held tomorrow.

FOND OF FLOWERS

It is Mr. Spark's intention to retire to a little place just outside Victoria and spend his time cultivating flowers, for which he has a weakness, his desk at the dock never being without a bunch of blooms from the garden of his town home. Pleasant days, "Tommy."

Arthur Bradshaw, who has been Mr. Spark's assistant at No. 2 Pier, has succeeded to the duties of wharfinger, and commenced his duties yesterday.

Both Vessels Had Good Passenger Lists and Splendid Cargoes — Russia for Orient and Emma Alexander for California

With a fair list of passengers and a big general cargo aboard the Canadian Pacific Ss. Empress of Russia, Captain A. J. Hosken, R.N.R., commander, sailed from Rithet Piers, last evening, shortly before 6 o'clock, bound for the Philippine Islands by way of Japan and China ports.

Before returning here on February 2, 1935, the big ship will have undergone her annual overhaul at Hongkong, Captain A. J. Holland, port superintendent, and R. R. Bound for California ports, the Pacific Steamship Lines Ss. Emma Alexander sailed south from Rithet Piers at midnight, yesterday, with a large passenger list and considerable cargo aboard. The liner arrived at the local dock at 10 o'clock from Seattle and embarked Island and Mainland travelers for San Francisco and Wilmington, and loaded about twenty tons of Canadian whiskey for the California ports.

Among the passengers boarding the ship, here, were: Mrs. G. Savage and son, "Billy"; Glen F. Hinderer, Charles R. Thomas, Mrs. T. M. JAPAN COMING

Inbound from Far East ports via Hawaii, the Canadian Pacific Ss. Empress of Japan, Captain L. D. Douglas, R.N.R., is due here Tuesday morning early. She is bringing in passengers, mails and cargo.

For general overhaul, the Ss. Princess Mary, of the B.C. Coast Service, will be tied up during the week at Vancouver. The Ss. Princess Norah will take her place on the Vancouver-Powell River service.

For points on the West Coast of Vancouver Island, the Ss. Princess Maquinna left the Belleville Street docks of Canadian Pacific Steamships at 11 o'clock last evening. She will go as far as Port Alice, and took passengers and cargo for way points.

Two lumber ships are expected alongside Ogden Point Piers by King Brothers, shipping agents. They are the freighters Cipro, due sometime today, and the Filleigh, due in tomorrow.

DANCE CAUSED BIG HEADACHE

Manager of World's Fair Concessions Had Other Worries, Too

Turning his back on the greatest show the world has seen and five years of intensive work, Nathaniel A. Owings, director of concessions for the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago, sailed, with Mrs. Owings, on the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Russia, yesterday, on a world tour. The young Chicago couple will spend some time in Japan and visit Peking and other parts of China between now and the end of the year, and then push on through the Far East to Europe.

Thirty-one-year-old Nathaniel A. Owings, an architect, frankly believes he has earned this world cruise, after three years of planning for and two years of operation of the famous world's fair. "We worked on the average fourteen hours a day," he said. "They said we couldn't do it because of the depression, but Chicago did it."

Mr. Owings had charge of all concessions exhibiting at the fair, including the one which featured Sally Rand in her sensational and controversial fan dance, later changed to a "bubble" dance. The Rand incident, he confessed, contributed his biggest headache, but many other worries cropped up during the two-year show.

Mrs. Owings, socially prominent in the Illinois metropolis, resigned her position as president of the Junior League in Chicago to accompany her husband on the world tour.

FINANCE - COMMERCE - MARKETS

Stock and Bond Prices Firm at New York Mart

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP). — Speculation proceeded at the usual leisurely week-end pace in stock today and the market prolonged its stay in the narrow range it settled into early in the week.

Grains diverted attention from the share list as corn spurted for further net advances of 2 1-8 to 2 7-8 cents a bushel. Wheat closed 1 1-8 to 1 1-2 cents higher and gains in rye, oats and barley ranged up to about 3 cents a bushel.

After the sustained November advance, security markets were content to rest on their laurels while the Street waited for business to demonstrate its recovery stamina.

Demand for stocks continued selective. It flowed mainly into industrial specialties and preferred share offering attractive yields or dividend prospects. The customary leaders of the list drifted quickly.

Although December trade possibilities evoked cheerful comments from various quarters, brokers pointed out that many industrial shares had moved up substantially last month, inviting profit-taking by traders and more caution among outright buyers.

Steel shares yielded part of their previous gains. United States Steel preferred, dipped 2 points on a few transfers. American Rolling Mill, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Republic and United States Steel, common, eased.

Some preferred stocks with thin markets rose as much as 3 or 4 points, notably Remington Rand, first and second preferreds, Universal Pictures and Barker Brothers. Warner Brothers Pictures, preferred, a 10-share unit, jumped about 6 points.

Transfers totaled 469,190 shares, compared with 671,990 last Saturday. The Standard Statistics Company average for 90 stocks sagged 1-10 of 1 point to 75.7, having moved within a range of about 1 point all week.

Industrial issues continued to display quiet strength in the brief session of the bond market, but some irregularity persisted in some other sections of the list.

Transfers totaled $6,560,000, par value, about the same as last Saturday, and the Standard Statistics Company average for sixty domestic corporate loans held a net advance of 1-10 of 1 point at 85.2. The Industrial Composite recorded its fourth consecutive high for the year with a gain of 2-10 at 84.5.

Trading in the foreign division was quiet.

Improvement Is Reflected In Imperial Bank Report

Substantial Gains Toward Recovery Cited at Annual Meeting — Current Loans, Assets and Earnings All Show Increases

As the Imperial Bank of Canada is the first of our chartered banks to present a statement of its affairs for the preceding twelve months, the statement is reviewed with particular interest by Canadian businessmen.

The statement presented at the sixtieth annual meeting of the bank held in Toronto, last Wednesday, might properly be termed a record of progress as improvement is shown in many departments of the bank's activities compared with twelve months ago. The addresses from the president and the general manager are both informative and constructive.

A. E. Phipps, the general manager, in his address dealt very largely with the bank's figures, and stated that they reflected an improvement all along the line, while the president, F. A. Rolph, speaking of the progress made in Canada during the past twelve months, expressed the view that there had been substantial gains toward recovery and a general growth in Canadian business.

REVIEWS CONDITIONS

The president reviewed international conditions, both economic and social. In his view, the problem of first magnitude is the redistribution of products.

He dealt at some length with business conditions in Canada and the outlook for 1935. In his survey he covered each province from British Columbia to Quebec, the district served by the bank through its chain of branches. Particular reference was made to the Western farmer who, it was stated, was of good heart and carrying on with the desire to meet all his financial obligations.

In British Columbia, Mr. Rolph stated that there was a marked revival in mining and the lumber industry. In Alberta, optimism was the keynote. It was his belief that should Saskatchewan harvest an average crop in 1935, it would aid materially in meeting present financial difficulties. In Manitoba, there is considerable optimism toward the year ahead of us, while in Ontario and Quebec, there has been recovery in manufacturing and better commodity prices prevail.

INCREASE IN PROFITS

The general manager, in presenting the figures of the bank's statement, pointed out that the profits for the year were $1,231,992, or nearly $28,000 greater than in the previous twelve months. These profits allow the payment of dividends at the rate of 10 per cent per annum, the writing to contingencies of $300,000 as against $250,000 last year, and the carrying forward of $595,775, almost $15,000 more than the amount carried forward last year.

Deposits stand at $106,761,943, an improvement of $2,312,893. This increase is altogether in savings bank deposits, which are shown at $85,651,459.

The bank's investments in Dominion and Provincial Government bonds now total $23,738,000, or almost $1,000,000 more than twelve months ago. The fact that current loans are higher than in the past statement is an indication of the somewhat better conditions of business. Present figures are $58,926,933, compared with $57,465,120 last year. Cash assets and liquid assets are at slightly higher figures. Cash assets are $22,717,726, or 18.85 per cent of public liabilities, while liquid assets total $69,838,214, which is 58.4 per cent of liabilities to the public. The total assets of the bank now stand at $136,272,631.

In closing his address, Mr. Phipps said, "I am confident that, barring a major disturbance in world affairs, we are really on our way to better times."

TORONTO GOLD LEADERS FIRM

Other Stocks Turn Softer With Eldorado Leading Slump in Silvers

TORONTO, Dec. 1 (CP).—Wright-Hargreaves, down 5c to $8.00, was the only issue of the higher price gold group to record a change in today's short session, all the other big golds closing unchanged on trades mainly in less than board lots.

Eldorado broke through the dollar mark on the down side. Twenty thousand shares came out in the two-hour session and the close, at 96, was off 7c. Bear and White Eagle, the other Bear Lake stocks, closed lower in sympathy. Base Metals Corporation closed at a new new mark for the year at 62.

Bank Statement Shows Strong Liquid Position

Cash Holdings of Bank of Montreal at High Level —Liquid Assets Equal to 71.97 Per Cent of All Liabilities

The annual statement of the Bank of Montreal shows the bank in its usual strong liquid position. Of total assets of $759,108,178, quickly available resources are $491,247,207, equal to 71.97 per cent of all liabilities to the public.

A feature of the liquid assets is afforded by cash holdings of $87,210,888, up from $78,683,217 a year ago.

The principal holdings are in Government and other bonds and debentures, which now amount to $317,936,912, as compared with $316,967,375 at the end of the previous year. The excess of assets over liabilities to the public has increased to $76,538,810.

The report makes its appearance at a time when it is certain to be studied closely by all who are anxious to get a better understanding of the strong position in which the leading bank has maintained its resources.

Notwithstanding general evidence of more active manufacturing conditions, current loans are slightly down at $243,477,041, as compared with $251,885,262 at the end of the previous year. This would indicate that a number of Canadian companies still find it possible to finance business in its present volume without leaning heavily on banking accommodation.

DEPOSITS MAINTAINED

Deposits are well maintained, especially in view of recent large Government bond offerings. Total deposits, payable on demand and after notice, are $630,218,835, compared with $641,346,710. Notes of the bank in circulation are up to $35,255,876 from $33,819,807, doubtless reflecting a greater measure of general business activity.

Of special interest is the showing of total assets of $759,108,178 with which to meet payment of liabilities to the public of $682,569,368, leaving an excess of assets over liabilities to the public of $76,538,810.

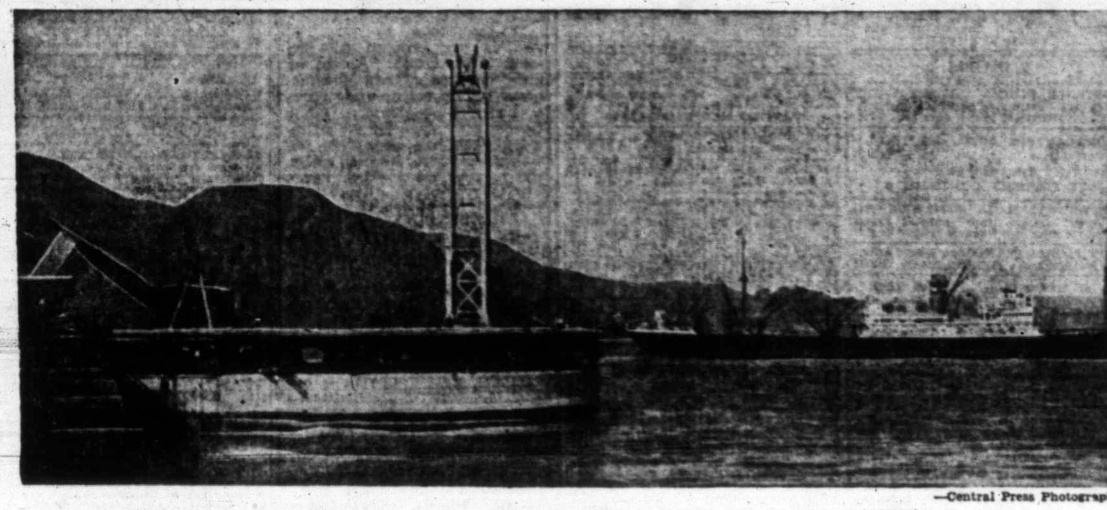
PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT

Profits for the year are reported at $4,105,024, from which are deducted Dominion and Provincial Government taxes totaling $900,654, leaving net profits at $3,204,369, equal to 4.23 per cent on the combined capital, rest and undivided profits. From this amount has been paid $2,880,000 in dividends to shareholders, as compared with $3,060,000 in the previous year. A further deduction of $100,000 as reservation for bank premises, the same as last year, leaves an amount of $224,369 to be applied to profit and loss account. With the addition, the total at credit of profit and loss carried forward is $1,809,820, up from $1,585,451 a year ago.

As has been the practice for the past few years, the bank has issued the statement for the public in an easily understandable form, with explanatory notes for each of the headings under which the figures are grouped.

The report will be submitted to shareholders at the annual general meeting, which will be held at the head office of the bank, in Montreal, on Monday.

Huge Gateway Bridge Rapidly Taking Form



—Central Press Photograph.

WHEAT PRICES GAIN SHARPLY

Futures Climb One Cent at Winnipeg—Outside Markets Show Strength

WINNIPEG, Dec. 1 (CP).—Winnipeg wheat futures prices kept in step as advances were scored in the world's leading grain markets today, closing an active grain exchange session 1 1-4 to 7-8c higher.

Strongly supported by good buying from many sources, including sales of 500,000 bushels of low-grade wheat to the United States, values closed near the day's high points, December at 78 1-4, May 83 and July 85 5-8c.

"Bull" forces had plenty of ammunition in their upward drive. Gains of 3-4d were scored at Liverpool, 1 1-2c at Chicago and an even cent at Buenos Aires. In addition, deliveries of new-crop Argentine wheat were being delayed.

Cash grains reflected the American sales, premiums holding firm in an active market. Coarse grains futures were fairly active, flax leading the upturn with a 2c advance.

STOCKS FINDING PRICE BOTTOM

By ALEX PRINGLE
Associated Press Financial Writer

TORONTO, Dec. 1 (CP). — The end of November found Canadian mining stocks still in the process of finding a price bottom, and the industrial share markets undergoing adjustment and endeavoring to hold part of the gains achieved in the recent rally. The New York market constituted a steadying influence, aided by mild improvement in the United States industrial situation and a growing feeling that the new Congress may have a more cheering message for business.

Features of the week were the erratic movement of Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, and the assault on the small fry of the mining list. The little fellows received some of the rough treatment that was administered in the early part of the month to the medium-priced group.

DISTURBING REPORTS

Announcement that Canada Mining Company needed money and probably have to reorganize, and that the Stadacona Company was also short of cash, helped those issues on their downward course. Along with these gloomy official messages were heard plenty of unofficial disturbing reports about other companies, and the results were partly as follows: Granada lost 13 3-4c to 11; Gunnar Gold, 10 to 48; McWatters, 7 to 31; Sullivan, 7 to 38; Columario, 6 3-4 to 15 1-4; Stadacona, 6 1-2 to 15 1-2; Greene Stabell, 5 to 25; McMillan, 4 to 36; St. Anthony, 3 3-4 to 26 1-4, and Roche, 2 1-8 to 7 3-8.

Senior and secondary gold stocks were only mildly disturbed by the depressed note in the low-priced share market. Bralorne lost 40c to $12.50, but part of that was the dividend, off November 29. Hollinger and McIntyre dropped 25c each, while Dome advanced $1.05, Lakeshore 25c and Wright-Hargreaves 5c. Pioneer was the weakest, losing 80c, 20c of which was dividend.

SILVER STOCKS STEADY

Silver stocks maintained a steady tone and base metals recorded few price changes. Reports that the European copper market is working towards a more promising price situation is apparently having a steadying effect on the base metal share market. The London price for standard spot copper rose two shillings, six pence in the week, or from 5.86c a pound in Canadian currency, to 5.88 1-2. Reports have been current that representatives of the big producers are striving for a production agreement and a price of about 8c a pound, to be achieved early in the new year.

In several sessions of the Toronto industrial share market this week, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams accounted for 25 to 35 per cent of the entire share turnover. The stock closed, yesterday, at $15.75, down $1.25 for the week, after selling close to the $18 mark, on Thursday, when the New York market was closed for the United States Thanksgiving holiday, the price dropped more than a point on renewal of bearish rumors already denied by the company.

DISPLAYS CONFIDENCE

Near the close of the session one brokerage house, with New York connections, bid the top price for the day for 25,000 shares, but despite this display of confidence the selling was more important than the buying on the following day, when the price dropped 75c. The company's annual statement will not be out for several weeks yet, but informed financial district opinion forecasts earnings close to the $3 mark.

Other dsitillery stocks had smaller swings, Walkers, common, gaining 50c, and Industrial Alcohol "A" losing $1. Both traded in comparatively small volume. Ford of Canada, a heavy trader, dropped an amount about equal to the dividend, off November 29, and small fractional recessions came out for International Nickel, Dominion Stores and Loblaw "A." C.P.R. was one of the week's bright spots, gaining $1.

SEARCH FOR OIL BEING PRESSED

Turney Valley Production Still Far Short of Alberta and Saskatchewan's Needs

Official figures prepared by the Provincial Oil and Gas Division of Alberta indicate that approximately 2,970,000 barrels of oil were imported into Alberta and Saskatchewan last year; the 1933-34 period showing that Alberta only produced 1,141,475 barrels from its various fields, leaving a balance of almost three-quarters of the total requirements of 4,112,707 barrels to be imported to meet the demands of these two Prairie Provinces. It would seem, therefore, that a great deal of further development must take place, and many years must elapse before the actual requirements of these two provinces can be taken care of by the domestic supply available in the Turner Valley and smaller oil fields of Alberta.

The present field price of clear naphtha is $2.55 per barrel, and the price of the best grade crude is $2.24. Low grade crude oil is imported to mix with this high grade local product in order to blend it down to the present-day grade of commercial gasoline and other petroleum products.

FROM TURNER VALLEY

For a number of years Turner Valley has supplied the bulk of the domestic production. The greatest development at present is in the south end of this field, due to the fact that the farther south development proceeds the larger the wells appear to be. The latest well to demonstrate the truth of this is the Highwood Sarcee, now the largest well in the field, earning over $20,000 a month. Other large producers are in the same locality and are giving highly satisfactory returns to their owners.

One of the latest and most southerly undertakings is the Consolidated Royalties Limited, who intend drilling on acreage approximately one mile south of Highwood Sarcee, with every indication of being even nearer to the crest of the structure than its famous neighbor. In order to finance this work, the company is offering units of its production in the form of royalties, in which the purchaser buys a specified percentage of the oil obtained, the revenue from the sale of which is paid by the refinery to a trust company appointed to act as trustee, and who then sends on the money to the royalty holder. These payments are made monthly and represent a high return on the money invested.

The quack was selling an elixir which he declared would make men live to a great age.

"Look at me," he shouted, "hale and hearty, I'm over 300 years old."

"Is he really as old as that?" asked a listener of the youthful assistant.

Victoria High School girls' swimming team, consisting of Helen Manning, Helen Unsworth, Rae Saunders and Doreen Dale-Johnson, returned from their invasion of Vancouver with the large silver Jantzen Trophy, symbolic of the girls' British Columbia relay supremacy. With the prize went a medal to each of the girls. The boys' team also raced in the Mainland city, but were defeated. They placed third. Much credit is due the girls, for preparatory to their trip they spent much time in training for the swimming event.

Beta Delta Society did not hold a meeting last week because of the school holiday on Thursday. F. Buck and all Beta Delta members have been given tickets for the debate, tomorrow evening, between a team from Oxford-Cambridge and John Gough and James Gibson, of Victoria. The tickets can be had from any of the members.

The school soccer team defeated the Rovers eleven, 4 to 1, on Monday, and on Wednesday dropped a 1-0 decision to a combined team from Marigold and Mount View.

In the game with the Rovers, D. Gent, L. Bridge and R. Okell all tallied, with the latter player scoring twice. A. Purss scored early in the first half for the visitors.

The local eleven will meet the Rovers again, on Thursday. The school team has played seven matches against the Rovers, and has taken two of them; two were tied, and the Rovers won three.

"Green" Rugby fifeen had everything their own way on Tuesday, when they registered a decisive 33-to-0 win over the "Blues." J. McGary accounted for twelve points in conversions, which boosted the "Greens'" score.

"Reds" and "Golds" will don their uniforms, tomorrow, to decide who will keep pace with the hustling "Greens," in top berth. "Golds" are strong favorites, but the "Reds'" victory over "Blues," two weeks ago, places them as an outstanding contender for first ranking.

Conducted by Alfred Prescott, the school orchestra graced the Wednesday morning assembly with a group of musical numbers which pleased.

The soccer players are wishing for good playing weather this week, as Coach Cumberbirch has announced there will be four league games and one exhibition match. Huddersfield and Leicester will face-off on Monday; on Tuesday, Glasgow and Manchester will step on the soccer pitch in what should prove a good tussle; Sheffield and Huddersfield will kick off on Wednesday, and to complete the week, Portsmouth will meet Cardiff, on Friday.

With three coaches helping in selecting and coaching this year, the boys eligible for the Howard Russell Cup Rugby series, staged between Victoria High School and Oak Bay High School, Victoria High School should furnish a formidable team worthy of merit. The two-out-of-three-game series between the two institutions will probably be played before Christmas this year, but no definite date has been set for the matches. There are more than thirty boys available for selection by the coaches. Sizing up of material has been made during the two practices held on Wednesday and Friday of last week and a good idea of the team will be available after the game with University School, on Wednesday. In a previous battle, the University team downed the local lads, 7-6.

W. E. Cook's mineralogy class is getting into close contact with all phases of natural geology and topography by its many visits around the lower-end of Vancouver Island. On November 24, Mr. Cook took a number of his students to the sand and gravel deposits in the Colwood district, and later visited an operating sand and gravel plant.

Christmas carols were sung by the students of the school, at the Friday morning assembly. Frank Tupman conducted the singing of the carols.

Fascinating dress costumes representing "Music," "Dancing," "Riding," "Cooking" and "Elocution," were shown by Betty Mulliner, Georgina Dowdall, Barbara Winslow, Ann-Marie Bjornsfelt and Margaret Goldsmith, at the Portia meeting, on Wednesday afternoon.

Three students took the platform in interesting addresses. Lavonne Purves spoke on "Gardening," "Bunty" Maynard gave a number of sidelights on raising canaries, while Eva Mason chose as her subject "Hobbies of Princess Marina." Later the various members of the society told of their own hobbies.

WAGNER AND McDONALD IN DRAWN BOUT

Main Event Ends in No Decision After Great Match Anderson Wins

Presenting many holds new to Victoria wrestling fans, Danny McDonald, Toronto, and Bob Wagner, Manchester, New Hampshire, grappled to a one-fall draw in the main event of yesterday evening's card at the Tillicum gymnasium. Wagner pinned McDonald in the fourth round, for the first fall of the match, with a reverse body slam and top body press, and the Canadian exponent of the mat game evened matters in the sixth frame with a short arm scissors and rolling slam.

Giving the fans one of the fastest and cleanest bouts seen here for many a long day, McDonald and Wagner drew a big hand at its conclusion. For the complete eight rounds there was not a dull moment, and the tricks that the pair uncovered more than delighted the hundreds of mat followers.

ANDERSON VICTOR

Des Anderson, Seattle, signalized his return to the local squared circle by defeating Bob Cummings, Sturgeon Bay, Wis., two falls to one, in another good match. Anderson was given a fall in the first round when Cummings continued to use the strangle hold, despite many warnings from the referee.

Cummings pinned Anderson's shoulders in the fourth with a succession of reverse chin locks and a body press. A cleverly executed flying body scissors meant curtains for Cummings early in the fifth session, and the way the fans howled their approval, displayed in no uncertain way that the Anderson victory was a popular one.

Judging by the increased attendance, the mat game is due for a comeback here in no uncertain way, and with the continuance of such shows as presented, the sport will soon be receiving the following it enjoyed here about three seasons ago.

Hand That Rocks Cradle Rules U.S. Turf

By BILL BRAUCHER
(Central Press Canadian Sports Writer)

That was the start of the Brookmeade stable which this year dominated the American turf in money winnings with a total of $253,500, and triumphs in such great races as the Kentucky Derby, Preakness, American Derby, American Classic, Detroit Derby and the Hopeful Stakes.

Now the announcement is made that she intends to send the mighty Cavalcade to California in January for the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap, which means that Equipoise and others being groomed tentatively for the rich event face plenty of racing.

For several years Mrs. Sloane visited the yearling sales at Saratoga with indifferent success. She bought some good bloodlines, but learned that bloodlines do not always pay off.

Her first stroke of luck was Brooms, which won the 1927 Hopeful as a juvenile, but went wrong after that. With the engagement of Bob Smith as trainer several years ago, the luck began to change for the better. Cavalcade was picked up for $1,200, and this year won $112,305, including the Kentucky Derby. The great colt, named after Noel Coward's play, ran second to its stablemate, High Quest, in the Preakness.

With Okapi, Psychic Bid and others, Cavalcade has been sent to the Brookmeade stable's Winter quarters at Columbia, S.C. There the thoroughbreds which campaigned so successfully under the Detroit woman's colors lead the life of kings, many of them remaining until Spring brings flags, peanuts and tipsters back to the northern tracks.

Trainer Smith says Cavalcade has recovered from a hoof injury suffered last Summer and will be in top form in time for the Santa Anita.

BLUES BEAT COLLEGE IN HARD MATCH

Scores 3-0 Victory in Intermediate Rugby Fixture—Wanderers Whites Win

Nosing out Coach Rowland's vastly improved Victoria College ruggers, 3-0, yesterday afternoon, at the Victoria High School grounds, Wanderers' Blues, undefeated leaders of the intermediate league, continued their successful drive to the loop title. At the Oak Bay Park, an improved Wanderers' Whites fifteen defeated the Canadian Scottish, 10-3.

The Blues-College match was keenly contested all of the way. The only try of the game was scored in the first half, when J. Fisher fell on the greasy ball behind the Collegians' line, after it had slipped out of the hands of a College player as he attempted to touch it down. Ronnie McConnan, captain of the winners, failed to add the extra points with his kick.

College came close to scoring when Painter's attempted drop-kick for a penalty against the Wanderers hit the inside of the post and bounced back into play.

In the second half, the clubs battled hard and fast, with first one side attacking and then the other, but failing to add to the lone try scored in the initial ....f.

Thomas handled the game well, and the teams follow:

Wanderers' Blues—B. Drummond, J. Grogan, F. Shepherd, W. Gornall, H. Brown, I. Angus, J. Fisher, B. Pangman, T. Barber, R. McConnan, J. Latta, P. Bradford, B. Bryden, J. Fraser and K. Cook.

Victoria College—Thomas, Veitch, Cox, Halkett, Grice, Painter, Kennedy, Joe Andrews, Jones, Lindsay, Hudson, Garrison, Nation, Leckie-Ewing and Fisher.

WHITES DEFEAT SCOTTISH

A fighting and rapidly improving Wanderers' Whites intermediate fifteen scored two tries, both of which were converted, to defeat the Canadian Scottish, 10-3, at Oak Bay Park. The youthful Oak Bay aggregation fought hammner and nail against a heavier squad and chalked up a well-deserved victory.

R. Gornall, smart forward, raced over the Scottish line twice in the first half, and Briggs' educated boot lifted the pigskin over the bar and between the sticks to ... the Oak Bay lads a 10-0 lead as the initial h... ended.

Canadian Scottish prevented a shut-out victory for the Wanderers by crossing the line late in the second half. The try was unconverted.

E. H. Gilmer refereed.

Canadian Scottish — Buckler, Pearson, Adamson, Howie, McCrae, A. Anderson, Forbes, D. Anderson, Griffin, Sudgen, Briggs, H. Anderson, Cooper, Speed, MacDonald.

Toronto Argos Reach Final of Junior Series

TORONTO, Dec. 1 (CP).—Toronto Argonauts, last season's Ontario junior Rugby champions, advanced another step on their second title-bound hunt here today, defeating St. Catharines Bulldogs, 36-5, in a semi-final O.R.F.U. game. The Toronto gridders swamped the Bulldogs, 29-1, in the Garden City, last Saturday, to take the round by a score of 65-6.

Woodstock Grads earned the right to meet Toronto in the junior O.R.F.U. finals, defeating the Windsor Grads, 12-8, at Windsor. Woodstock won the round by two points.

EXPELLING GIRL FROM GERMANY

Isobel Steel, of Hollywood, Not a Professional Spy Authorities Say

BERLIN, Dec. 1 (AP).—Isobel Lillian Steel, of Hollywood, Cal., who spent her twenty-fourth birthday and Thanksgiving Day in prison, may be at home for Christmas and New Year.

The Prussian Ministry of Justice, today, informed Douglas Jenkins, United States Consul-General, who previously had sought in vain to obtain information concerning the girl's four-month detention, that she will be expelled from Germany.

Investigation disclosed that Miss Steele is "not a professional spy," Jenkins was informed. Previously the only hint as to the reason for her detention had been the vague statement that she was held in connection with "a serious offence."

SOUGHT EXPLANATION

Miss Steele was arrested, on August 10, by secret police, and has been held virtually incommunicado, while American authorities repeatedly sought an explanation of the charges against her.

Shortly before her arrest, Miss Steele gave three broadcast addresses from her apartment, concerning workers' conditions and other subjects. One was relayed to the United States. Friends said the tone of the speeches was friendly to the Nazis.

Meanwhile, the consulate pressed its investigation into the charges against Richard Roiderer, of Chicago, held in prison, in Bavaria, for the last five months. Officials termed his case more serious, saying he might be tried for espionage, because, it was alleged, notes on military matters were found in his possession.

WINS VOTE ON BUDGET

French Premier Given Overwhelming Support—Seeks Secret Appropriation

PARIS, Dec. 1 (AP).—Premier Pierre Etienne Flandin got an overwhelming vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies today as he pushed the 1935 budget, with its 12,000,000,000 francs (approximately $772,800,000) for the French war chest, toward early passage through Parliament.

The vote, 457 to 120, even bigger than that given Flandin when his Government took office, came after the Premier asked secret appropriation of 3,700,000 francs (about $238,280), to insure peace at home.

A French bid for preservation of the status quo in the Saar was made, meanwhile, by Foreign Minister Pierre Laval when he tacitly promised the Saarlanders that France will not oppose the region's eventual return to Germany if the voters want to wait for the end of the Hitler regime.

WOULD NOT OPPOSE

Laval told the Chamber of Deputies that the Government would not offer opposition if the League Council decided to give the Saar to Germany later on in the event the region votes to remain under League of Nations jurisdiction at the plebiscite January 13.

(The Saar will vote whether to rejoin Germany, unite with France, or remain under the jurisdiction of the League of Nations).

The Government policy of arms strength as the best safeguard against war was virtually unopposed in the Parliament which yesterday heard Laval ask Hitler to show that he means peace by deeds, not words.

The Socialist leader, Leon Blum, bitterly assailed Hitlerism at today's session, asserting that a "moral quarantine" should be established against the Nazis, but urged direct conversations with Germany in the ends of peace.

"We should reach out to clasp any hand stretched toward us, even hands of blood," Blum said.

IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Meanwhile, Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's personal emissary, who was in the galleries yesterday when Laval urged Germany to enter the proposed Eastern Locarno Security Pact, departed for home today after an automobile accident in which he narrowly escaped injury.

Whether Von Ribbentrop's reported efforts to get French and German war veterans lined up together to work against the fear of war were successful could not be ascertained, but he did manage to start something approaching war in the Chamber of Deputies.

Deputy Franklin - Bouillon last night accused Robert Monnier, municipal councilman, of being an informer and an accomplice of a notorious spy, this in connection with the announced disposition of French veterans to negotiate privately with German veterans, and today Monnier asked a veteran's publication to name a "jury of honor" to consider the controversy. A duel seemed likely.

ESCAPES INJURY IN GAS TANK EXPLOSION

NEW WESTMINSTER, Dec. 1 (CP).—O. Egelstad escaped injury, today, when the gasoline tank of an automobile on which he was working exploded.

The man was draining the tank of an automobile, and was smoking a cigarette. It is believed this caused the explosion. The car was destroyed and part of the garage was burned.

Little Bedtime Stories
The Shadow of the Unknown
By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Did you ever notice how on a beautiful sunny day when all the birds are singing it will happen that a cloud will pass across the face of jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun, casting a great shadow on the earth? And how when that shadow passes over them the birds will stop singing? Somehow a shadow like that seems to kill joyousness of the heart. As soon as it has passed, joy returns once more.

It was as if just such a great shadow lay over the Green Meadows, the Old Pasture, the Green Forest, the Old Orchard and the Smiling Pool. The days were beautiful, but none of the little people saw the beauty of them. There was no happiness. So far as they could everybody, little and big, remained hidden. Even in the depths of the Great Forest Buster Bear was uneasy, and Lightfoot the Deer knew no peace. Prickly Porky the Porcupine, who as a rule fears nothing and nobody, was strangely nervous.

It was all because of that strange, giant bird which had first frightened Redtail the Hawk and then Blacky the Crow. No one had ever heard of such a bird and the humming of it as it flew had filled with terror all who heard it. Whenever they could the little people got together and talked it over. They talked in whispers, looking up fearfully as they talked. It wasn't the size of this fearful giant so much as the fact that no one knew anything about it. You know it is the things that we know nothing about that frighten us most. Imagination makes them worse than they really are. So far this giant bird had hurt no one. It had been as harmless as Ol' Mistah Buzzard himself. But no one felt sure that it would always remain so. No one could believe that one so big and swift of wing was not to be feared.

They talked in whispers, looking up fearfully as they talked

So the shadow of the unknown lay over the Green Forest and the Green Meadows during those beautiful Fall days. Only at night was there freedom from it. It came about that those who can hunt by day or night did all their hunting at night and remained hidden in the daytime. Those who hunt only at night went about as usual, and those who hunt only by day hunted no more than they absolutely had to, and then did their best to keep out of sight.

THE TUTTS . . . By Crawford Young

The new superintendent of a private asylum was strolling round the grounds a few weeks after his appointment when suddenly one of the inmates accosted him.

"Excuse me, sir," he said, raising his hat, "but I have the great pleasure in informing you that I and all my unfortunate friends like you better than the last superintendent."

"Thank you," replied the new man, pleasantly. "And may I ask why?"

"Happiness," declaimed the philosopher, "is the pursuit of something, not the catching of it."

"Have you ever," interrupted the plain citizen, "chased the last car on a rainy night?"

"I dun— about cutting it, sir, I could give it a shampoo or a sandpaper."—Smith's Weekly, Sydney.

Virginia Vane Says:

TIPS ON MAKING FRIENDS

Dear Virginia Vane: Will you please pass on this word of advice to "Pat" who is lonely and wants to make friends. Dear Pat: I read your note to Virginia Vane and something about it appealed to me so much that I'm prompted to give you my own suggestion for making friends. My first suggestion sounds a little vague as I've never tried to express this idea before. I call my idea "A Happiness of Spirit." First of all you have to make friends with yourself. Be able to enjoy your own company. Have your own jokes, your own appreciation of beauty, your own imaginative ideas, which you have no need to share with anyone else. If inner happiness radiates from your face and personality you naturally attract other people.

Keep yourself fit. You can't express happiness if you're dragged down with physical woes. Go in for exercise, even though you can do no better at present than take a long lonely walk by yourself. Physical exertion will help to clear your mind of self-pity and of broodings.

Another help toward making friends is to acquire the self-confidence which comes from knowing that your appearance is OK. Before you leave the "dorm" be sure that there are no runs in your stockings, that your hair is tidy, that your dress is clean and neat, that your fingernails are well done. Once you're sure on that score, go ahead and forget about "Pat" and her appearance.

Then begin to concentrate on the people around you. Pick out the things you like best in those you meet—and don't be afraid to express your liking. Compliment the smart dress, or the perfect wave, or the tactful remark, or a well-placed witticism. Let other people see that you appreciate their good points. Shut criticisms out of your mind. When you feel a wave of criticism coming on combat it with concentration on the other fellow's best traits. You can develop a real love for others if you'll think hard about their lovable traits.

And above all PRACTICE making friends. No matter how lonesome you think you are, there is always somebody more lonesome than yourself. Practice looking for those people. Smile at them, show friendliness toward them, give them special attention to help them get over their shyness. Don't expect to find a bosom friend in the first lonely girl you meet. Realize that the effort you're making to help someone else is having a definitely beneficial effect on your personality.

And here's a tip: Always try to remember people's names. Nothing is more annoying to the average individual than to have his or her name forgotten—or to be referred to as "What's-his-name." Similarly it is very flattering to be remembered and to have someone remind you of the conversation held on the occasion of your last meeting. A good memory is a useful thing to acquire. I hope that some of my suggestions will help you, Pat, as I feel that you do need help badly.—EDITH G.

Thank you for your letter. It contains some good tips which might be helpful to a number of other girls in Pat's forlorn state of mind. I believe that you have worked out this scheme for friend-making from your own experience—which doubles the value of your advice—Come again!

UNCERTAIN SHOULD NOT BE ASHAMED OF IN-LAWS

The Uncertain Girl: You ask me to advise anything at all except that you break off your engagement to the boy you love. And so I can only tell you that you must either break off a few of those rough social edges of yours, or plan to make a miserable life for yourself.

Get it into your head here and now that your attitude is all wrong. Don't imagine for one minute that it shows fine fastidiousness on your part to be ashamed of your future mother-in-law because her voice, manner, speech and clothes seem to put her beneath your friends and neighbors.

Your awareness of superficial values is over-acute. You have the honesty to admit that your man's mother is admirable and that you respect her character. Why haven't you the courage then to introduce her to your friends and thus give them a chance to understand her real value?

If your friends are somebodies, they are not going to ridicule or despise what is admirable. Your fear of their opinion shows a weakness in you—and if I were you, I'd start at once to erase that weakness by reasoning yourself out of this form of snobbishness.

Understand that if you marry this boy, hoping to keep his family hidden from the public eye—you will not be happy and eventually you are bound to hurt your husband with the truth. You must break yourself of the habit of dividing people into classes—or else definitely break with the man who has faced you with a problem you haven't the courage to solve.

I cannot give you a recipe for being proud of your mother-in-law. I can only suggest that you realize how utterly wrong you are in clinging to such false standards.

You must not try to change your fiance's family, nor attempt to lead a kind of double-life; one thing to your friends, another being to your in-laws. You must be consistent and honest. And to do that you must rid yourself of the feeling that you are marrying beneath you.

The Fastest and Slowest Trains in the World—Historic Places Possess Delightful Charm—Canadian News in English Papers Record Bare Fact—Elementary Schools and the "Pampered Pedestrian."

By J. EDWARD NORCROSS

LONDON, Eng.—(By Mail).—The Great Western Railway runs the fastest train in the world (bar the new stream-liners), that from London to Cheltenham. I am inclined to think that it also runs the slowest.

J. E. NORCROSS

I had occasion to travel by the latter the other day. I had come down from the north on an express and had had to change at Oxford to a local.

It was a delightful train. It did not seem to matter to it in the least when it got anywhere. It did not merely stop at every station. It rested at each until the engine driver and the guard (they call conductors guards here) were quite ready to go on again.

This was when the guard had done talking to the passengers, who seemed to know him and each other, as they got on and off the train at stations so small that there was no staff to perform the usual duties and he had to attend to them himself—stations with such mellifluous names as Littlemore, Morris Cowley, Horspath Halt, Wheatley, Tiddington and Thame.

It was a perfect afternoon for such a journey. The soft sunshine of St. Luke's Summer (the English equivalent of Canada's Indian Summer) bathed the rich green of the fields and the deep foliage of the trees set in a landscape of little farms alternating with the private parks of great estates, a diversified landscape of low hills and sequestered vales, with here and there a little village clustered around an ancient church of grey stone.

Untouched by modern industrialism, it looked much as it must have looked, except for the railway and the motor highways, two or three hundred years ago.

HISTORIC PLACE

As related, we came to Littlemore, just outside Oxford, the vicarage and church of which were the scene of the agony of mind through which Newman found his way to peace in the Roman communion.

They made Newman a prince of the church, but he will be remembered wherever the English language is spoken, not as Cardinal Newman, but as the author of a great English classic, his "Apologia."

This bit of country is full of associations with men who made history as well as those, like Newman, who made literature. At Thame, a quaint little market town, the grammar school still stands, and is still in active service, that John Hampden attended, and it was to Thame that they bore him, sorely wounded at the battle of Chalgrove Field, to die.

Farther along the line, soon after it has passed into Buckinghamshire, reach Bradenham, where, early in the nineteenth century, an old Jew named Isaac Disraeli bought a beautiful estate and wrote his "Curiosities of Literature."

Whereby it happened that his son Benjamin spent his youth amid the woods of Bradenham, and came to have such a love for the county that he was associated with it politically throughout his life, representing it in the House of Commons continuously for twenty-eight years and taking his title from the village of Beaconsfield nearby.

The great Earl of Beaconsfield might have been buried in Westminster Abbey, near his great opponent, Gladstone, but he left instructions indicating his preference for the quiet churchyard of Hughenden, hard by Bradenham, on the western slope of the Chilterns, in a countryside which he, of alien progeniture, loved and delighted in as much as any lord of the manor of twenty generations.

CHILTERN HUNDREDS

Leaving the railway at High Wycombe, where the factories that are here invading one of the most beautiful parts of England have left unspoiled as yet the old sixteenth century buildings that cluster about the market place, I drove by road through Amersham, where in the days of the later Plantagenets, the Lollards were burnt.

And, arriving at my destination, I found to my surprise that there really was such a place as the Chiltern Hundreds and that I was in them.

Until then the Chiltern Hundred had been, for me, merely a political expression.

Members cannot resign from the House of Commons, so when one wants to withdraw he "applies for the Stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds."

Apparently the stewardship is always vacant, expectantly awaiting the advent of a member of Parliament who wishes to retire.

And when it gets him it does not keep him long. He performs no functions unless it be to acknowledge receipt of his nominal salary for the day or two that he continues in office.

For, you see, the stewardship is "a place of profit under the Crown," and the moment a member of the House of Commons accepts a place of profit under the Crown he thereby vacates his seat.

So, if there had been no Chiltern Hundreds it would have been necessary to invent them. I had had a vague idea that something of the sort had been done until, as I say, I suddenly found myself in them.

NEWS FROM CANADA

With one exception, such English newspapers as I have seen have contented themselves with recording the bare fact of the resignation of the Hon. H. H. Stevens and attributing it vaguely to "differences in the cabinet."

There is nothing surprising in this. Only in one or two journals, such as The London Times, which really endeavor to cover world news, does one find from day to day anything about Canada except the rate of exchange with Montreal.

It so happens, however, that, as I have mentioned before, Hannen Swaffer, the political columnist of The Daily Herald, the chief organ of the Labor Party, was in Canada for a few days last Summer and became impressed with the evidence emphasized by Mr. Stevens in his famous pamphlet on the trade probe, as published in a number of Canadian newspapers.

So, the day after the news was received in this country, Mr. Swaffer gave up his whole column to reflections on the probe and the pamphlet and the resignation.

Unfortunately there is not much enlightenment in all this for the English reader, more especially since Mr. Swaffer manages to assert, first, that Mr. Stevens, "sick of the graft and corruption he unearthed during his probe into Big Business, has got out," and, second, that "Bennett has kicked out Stevens."

Probably Mr. Swaffer was chortling too much over the opportunity the resignation give him to revamp the pamphlet for the benefit of British Socialists to notice or care about the inconsistency.

Notwithstanding which, it is refreshing to find a writer in an English daily, even Mr. Swaffer and in a Labor daily, discovering that there is news in Canadian events.

PAMPERED PEDESTRIAN

Gradually the right of the "pampered pedestrian" to get himself killed or injured by motor traffic is being brought within stricter and stricter limits.

Mr. Hore-Belisha, the Minister of Transport, who issues new regulations about once a month, has now ordained that pedestrians who break the rules as to the use of crossings shall be on exactly the same footing in a legal sense as motorists who do so.

Formerly if a motorist disregarded traffic lights, or the raised hand of a policeman where there were no traffic lights, he was liable to a fine of $25. The pedestrian who did so might have to pay at most $1.25. In both cases, of course, there would be the costs as well.

Now the maximum fine for motorist and pedestrian alike is $10.

The pedestrian still has the right of way at all marked crossings not governed by lights or police, but he must not linger on his way across the street and so delay traffic.

For the present, however, the pedestrian can avoid trouble with the police by crossing where there is no marked crossing at all. He may be killed, but he won't be fined.

I surmise, however, that even this last liberty will not be permitted him very much longer. From the time Mr. Hore-Belisha began marking crossings and laying down more and more regulations governing their use I have been of the opinion that he was leading up to a grand climax—an order forbidding the pedestrian to cross the street anywhere but at a point where the famous Belisha beacons and the studs in the roadway indicated his proper path.

And when jaywalking is made illegal, the fun will begin, for the British pedestrian believes he has a right to step off the pavement into the roadway when and where he pleases, and before the question is settled he is likely to take it to the House of Lords.

ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS

In England the elementary schools are in the hands of education committees appointed by the municipal authorities, the old school boards having been abolished many years ago.

The cost of education is defrayed partly from the rates and partly from grants made by the Government. These latter are controlled by a national authority, the Board of Education.

It will be remembered that three years ago the National Government, facing a great financial crisis, called a halt as far as possible on public expenditure and exhorted local authorities to follow suit.

The city of Liverpool, it appears, took the Government at its word—at least in respect of the elementary schools. Regardless of needs, new construction was stopped.

Liverpool, however, seems to have overdone it. A Government inspector who had been sent down to report on the situation found that no less than thirty-six buildings should be replaced and that a number of new schools should be built to remedy the overcrowding in the rest.

The report was sent to Liverpool in due course, but nothing happened. Liverpool satback, remembering that the order to economize had not yet been cancelled.

It was something of a bombshell, therefore, when the Board of Education wrote to the town clerk (Liverpool is a city now, but it had a town clerk before it became a city, so it continues to have a town clerk and not a city clerk, just as it has a town hall and not a city hall) telling him that the failure of the council to remedy the conditions cited in the report had endangered the Government grant for 1933-4.

What this meant will be better appreciated when it is stated that the annual cost of elementary education in Liverpool (that of children under fourteen years of age) exceeds $7,500,000, and that the Government contributes half of it.

The Board of Education said that Liverpool would be let off this time with a warning. Th grant would be paid for 1933-4, but woe betide the city if things were not improved during the current year.

So Liverpool must find a few millions for new schools.

The problems arising from the cost of education seem pretty much the same on Merseyside as in Victoria.

According to The British Medical Journal, even at this distance of time, men are being robbed of their sight by the effects of poison gas encountered during the war.

The sixteenth year, writes Dr. Reginald Bickerton, opthalmic surgeon at St. Dunstan's, appears to be the critical one.

No cases of war-blindness due to gas were admitted to St. Dunstan's last year, but of nineteen new cases admitted this year, five were caused by gas. As he remarks, it is surprising both to the public and to medical men that veterans are still being admitted to St. Dunstan's with blindness due to the war.

Employer (frowning): "Jan, why are you so late this morning?"

Employer (unconvinced): "Yes, but why did you leave late?"

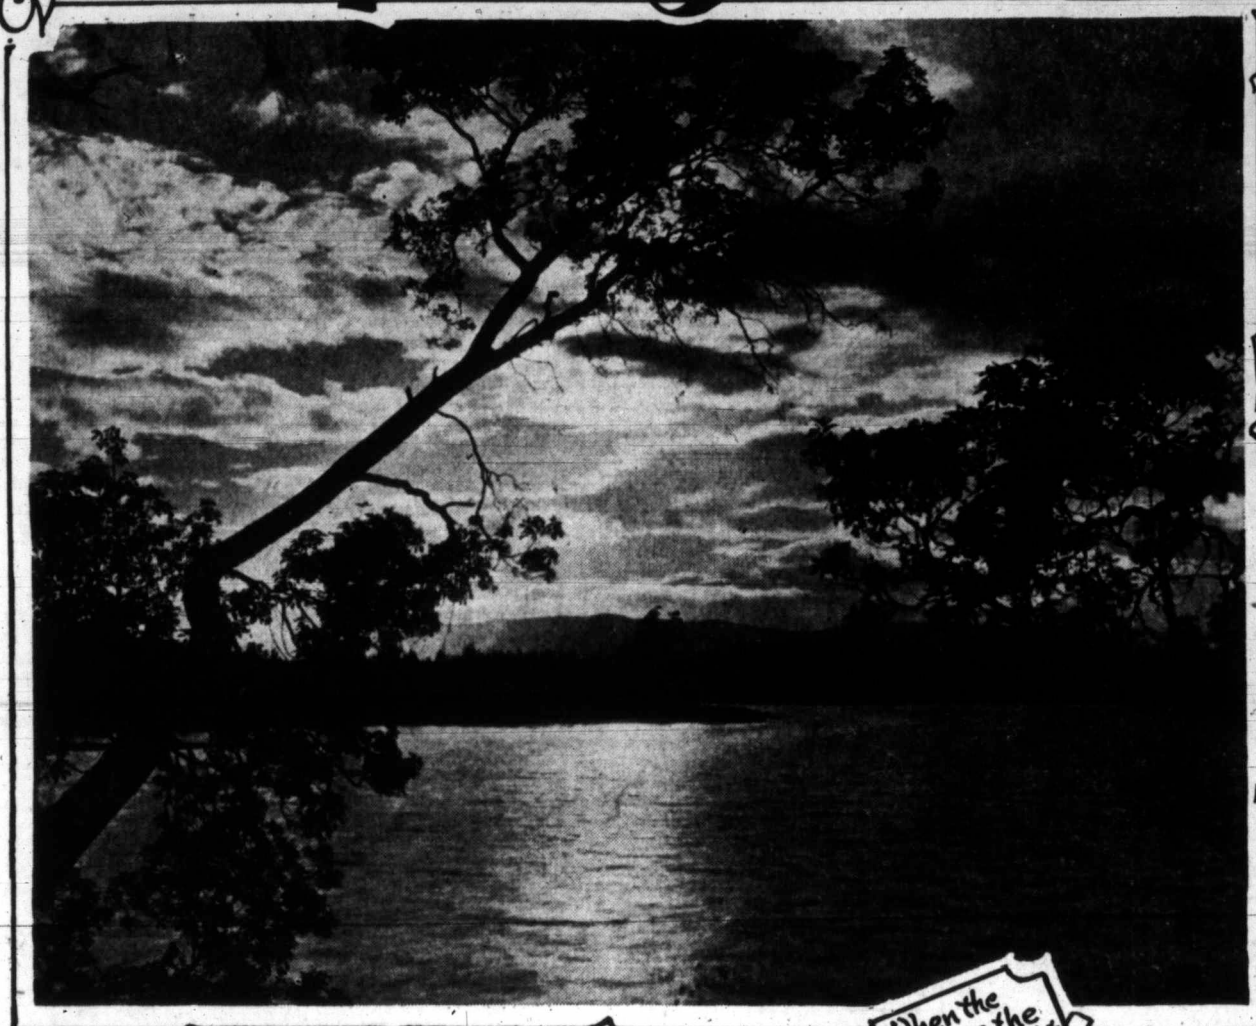
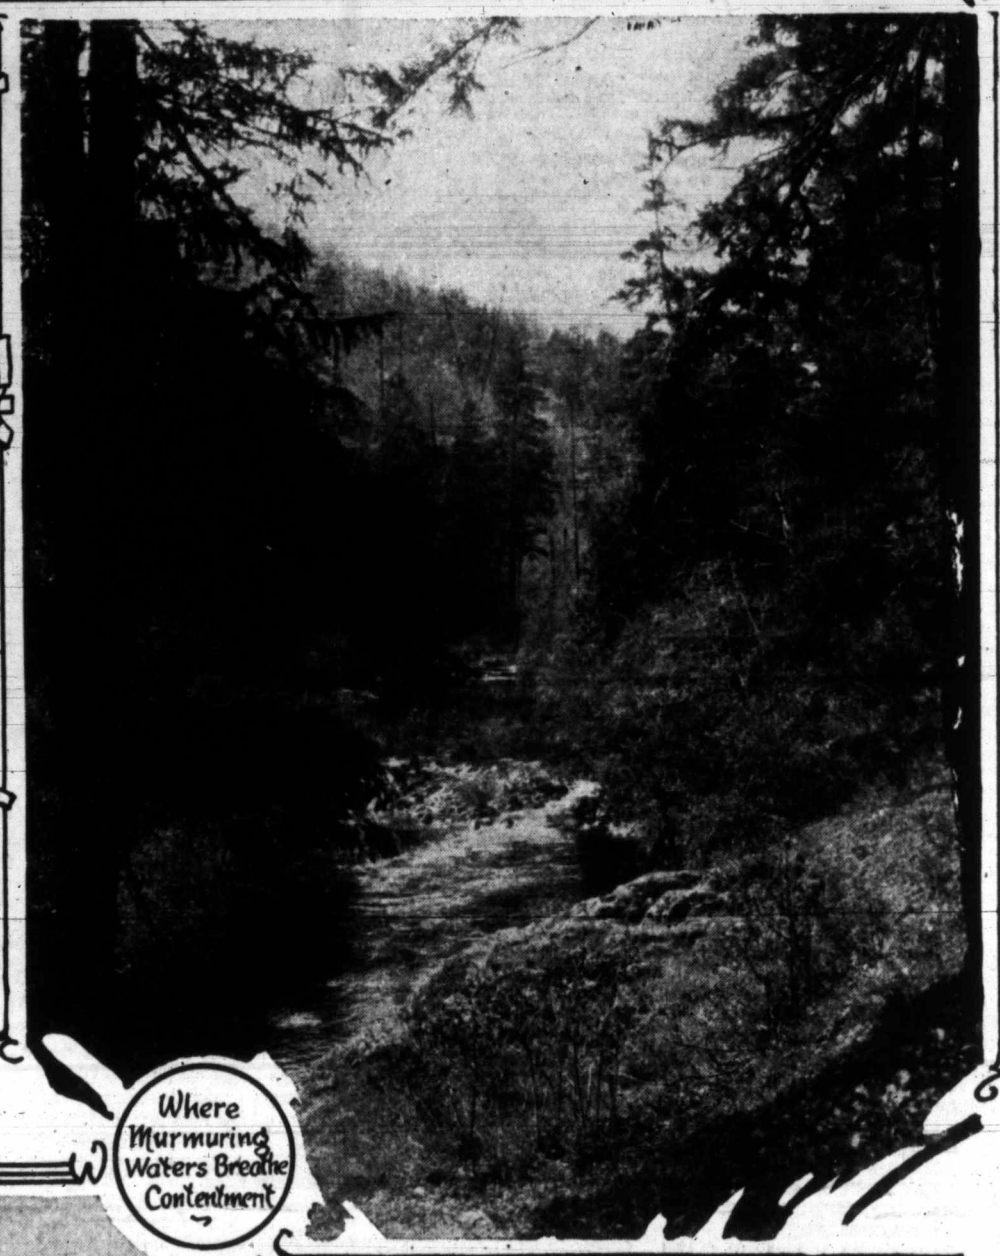
Helping Ourselves

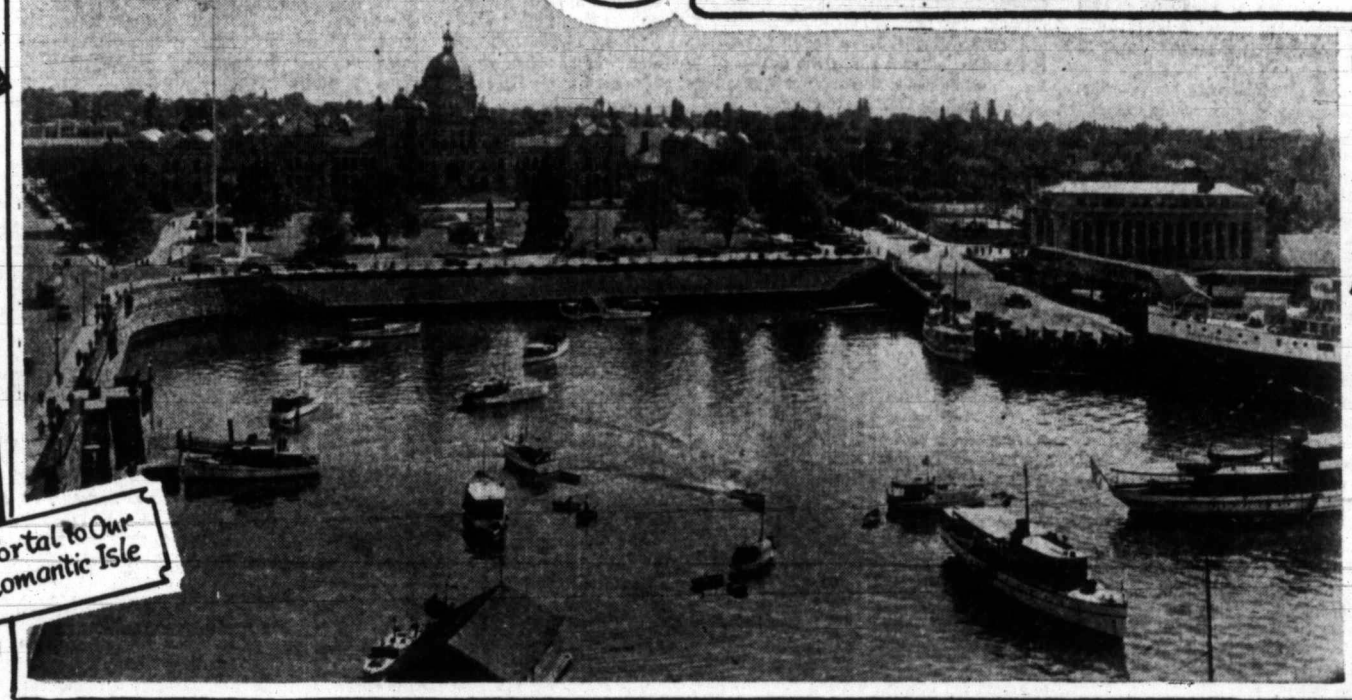
BY B. A. McKELVIE



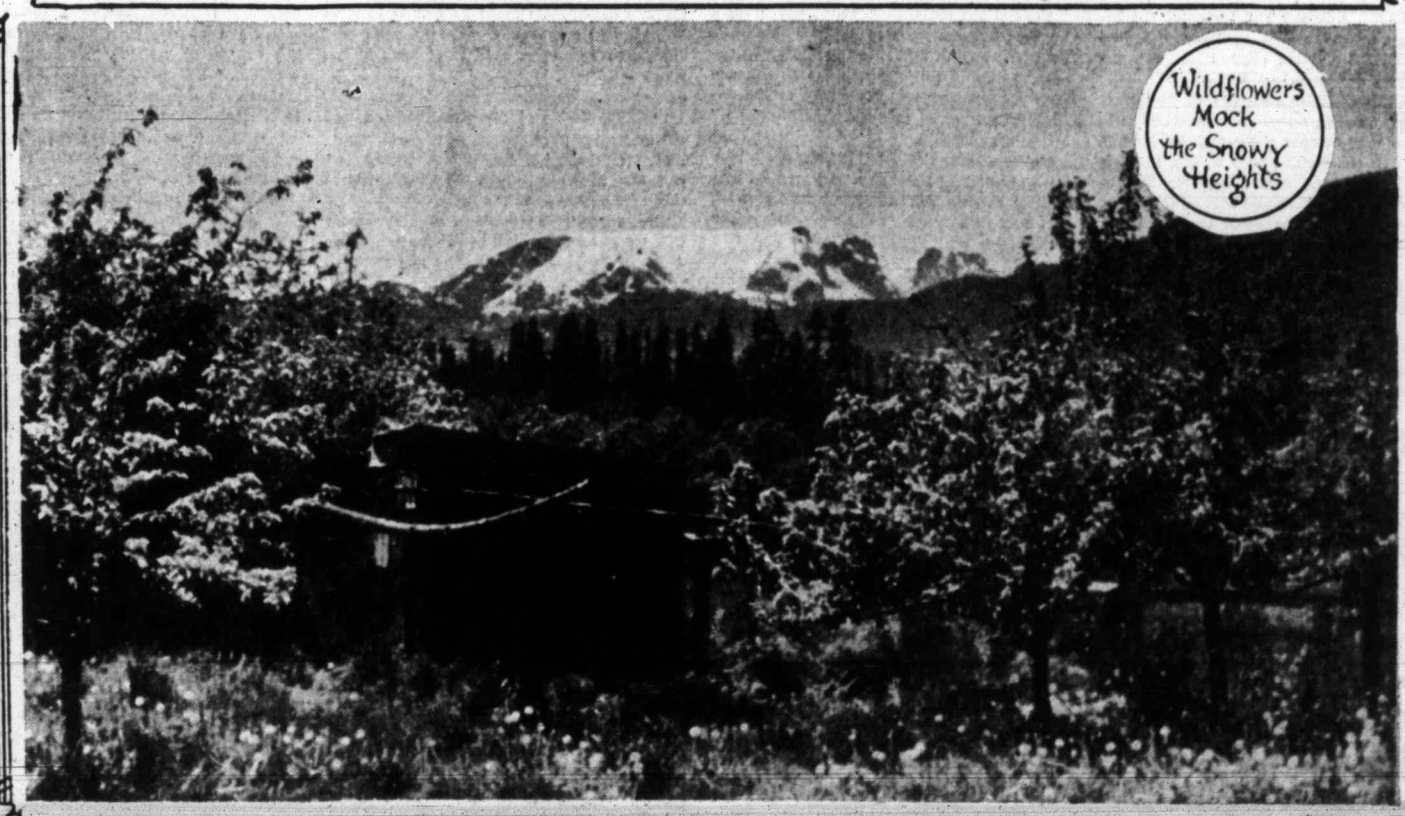
When the Sun Kisses the Island Goodnight



Where Murmuring Waters Breathe Contentment



Portal to Our Romantic Isle



Wildflowers Mock the Snowy Heights

THIS story is not written with the intention of extolling the scenic charms, the natural advantages and the healthful climate of Vancouver Island to its residents. Not only those who have lived here for years, but the thousands who have come for brief visits are convinced that the Island is a place of wonderful beauty. But what are we going to do with these assets—this wonderful heritage that has been given to us by Nature? That is the question that requires answering. It is a practical and sensible question.

To get a proper setting and perspective it might be well to look back into history. The shores of Vancouver Island were first visited by Captain James Cook in 1778. Here he found the Indians wearing robes of sea otter skins. When news of this reached the civilized world, adventurers came from the Orient, from England, from United States and from France in quest of the costly furs. They sailed round the Horn in tiny ships, and invariably put in at Hawaii for refreshment before completing their journey to this wild coast. This is interesting. It is well worth recalling that the original settlement of the Hawaiian Islands was incidental to the fur trade off Vancouver Island's coast.

Spain and Great Britain almost came to war over the right of trade and the privilege of settlement here. Their dispute ended without either nation taking advantage of the possibilities offered by the establishment of permanent communities.

Years passed; the sea otter was hunted to the point of practical extinction by the natives to meet the wishes of their white visitors. Then trade waned.

Founded on Fur

THE maritime traders faded from the picture, to be replaced by the fur trader who sought the pelts of land animals, and under that efficient organization that had extended its efforts across the continent—the Hudson's Bay Company—settlement was started. Fort Victoria was founded as a fur trading post.

Extending its field of operations, Nanaimo was started by the same company as a coal mining centre. The Hudson's Bay Company was keeping abreast of the times. Coal was now a maritime requirement, for steam was replacing sail on the high seas as the motive power of commerce carriers. Hence a new industry established a new community on the Island.

Fur trading was on the decline. Then came the discovery of gold, and with it came thousands of adventurers, their minds fired with the flame of fancied riches. They came, not as permanent settlers, content to work and wait for fortune, but in the hope of quickly acquired wealth to be taken elsewhere to purchase the ease and comforts that would recompense them for the toil and privations endured in attaining it.

For every one person who won riches from the river bars fifty failed to do so. The result was what may be termed the "first depression." Hundreds of men were idle. They had to be cared for and fed. Then it was that the Government started a movement to the land. Excursions were run to Cowichan and to Comox, and the foundations of the great farms of those localities were established. About the same time saw-milling may be said to have started, when Captain Stamp built his mill at Alberni.

Fur trading blossomed again for a time, when organized fleets sought the fur seals of the Coast. These swift schooners, manned by daring men, for the most part claimed Victoria, the old fur post, as their headquarters.

Prosperous Days

WORLD trade compelled the building of the railway across the continent, and with this development of the transportation system, with its application of steam to fast-moving vehicles, British Columbia prospered. As the oldest established commercial section of the West, Vancouver Island shared in that prosperity. Here were the industries incidental to increased population; here the depots of food were established, and here large mercantile houses are located. This period, from the building of the C.P.R. until the turn of the century was, perhaps, the most prosperous in the history of Vancouver Island.

Where is that prosperity now? Where is the fur trade? Where are the great industrial manufacturing plants, where are the wholesale establishments? What of the coal trade?—the memories of old Wellington, of South Wellington, of Extension and of Ladysmith mock the question.

Vancouver Island has fallen victim to the changing times. Such is a condition that we would do well to face—and face without fear. The changing times have created a new field of prosperity—and in that sphere Vancouver Island is pre-eminent. Just as Nature gave to these shores the means of attracting the first navigators; just as she stored the crust of the earth with thick seams of coal, and even as she located the Island at the gateway to the regions of gold, so she provided an inexhaustible wealth for the future—for the benefit of the Island dwellers when most required. It is the abundant beauty of the Island; the most temperate climate known, and manifold means of enjoyment of the healthy and invigorating pastimes of the great outdoors. In short, Nature designed Vancouver Island as the Playground of the World.

Must Be Won

NATURE, however, is a shrewd banker. She does not readily confer her favors unless those who are to profit by them display an inclination to help themselves towards the complete enjoyment of her bounty. The sea otter pelts were obtained by those who risked hardships to attain them; the coal seams which she planted were useless to man until mined; the gold was valueless in the beds of streams or hidden in the ledges of the mountains, and the rich, black soil of the valleys did not yield the produce of the markets until cultivated. So it is that to enjoy the full benefits of selling scenery; of realizing on the advantages of climate and the capitalization of the charms of the sheltered waters, the park-like glades and the rugged mountains, Vancouver Island must be prepared to bestir herself and meet the requirements of this age of travel and amusement.

Can it be done? That is a fair question. Let us see what others have accomplished.

Profit in Friendliness

FIRST let us look at the Hawaiian Islands —the group to which our fur trade gave its first civilization. The white population of the Hawaiian group is much less than that of Vancouver Island. It entails a long journey to reach its chief port of Honolulu. Its nearest approach to this continent is 2,400 miles. The progressive citizens of Honolulu recognized that they had an attraction to sell —climate. They organized to let the world know about it; to make their city attractive.

JANICE MEREDITH

By PAUL LEICESTER FORD

"MISTER Muridith," the letter ran, "noting that agenst the centyments of younited Amurika you still kontinyou to youse tea, this is to warn you that we konsider you an enemy of our kuntry, and if the same praktises are kontinyoud, you will shortly receeve a visit from the kommity of TAR AND FEATHERS, Brunswick County."

The threat threw Squire Lambert Meredith into a rage.

"I'll have no Sons of Liberty tell me what I may do or not do," he cried. "'Till I say nay, tea is drunk at Greenwood!"

For the squire, frankly a Tory, had no sympathy with what he called the attempt of the mobility to override the nobility of the land. Holder of twenty thousand acres along the Raritan, he was having trouble collecting the rents from his tenants as the dawn of the Revolution encouraged a disregard for the old order.

Young Philemon Hennion, son of a neighbor, told Meredith that he would find it easier to get his rents if he "sided more with folks," but the squire was only further enraged by the suggestion.

Hennion had brought an indentured servant to the Merediths whose name, marked with a cross on his papers pledging service for five years, was Charles Fownes, and whose sullen manner as he confronted his new master failed to impress the Merediths favorably.

While the squire questioned him concerning his ability to care for horses and gardens, Mrs. Meredith, her pretty young daughter Janice and Janice's guest, Tabitha Drinker, studied the man. In return, Fownes kept his eyes mainly on Janice as he answered the squire's questions.

Finally the squire ordered the man taken to the stable and put to work, but Mrs. Meredith intervened.

"Charles, hast thou had breakfast?"

He shook his head sullenly.

"Take him to the kitchen and give him some, Peg," the mistress ordered the servant.

To the surprise of the Merediths, Fownes bowed easily and gracefully, saying "Thank you," and followed Peg.

"He holds himself like a gentleman," commented Tabitha.

"I think he is a born villain and has committed some terrible crime," Janice said. "He stares so that one wants to shiver."

A WEEK later, Janice and Tabitha, strolling along the river, from behind a clump of willows, saw Charles and Janice's dog Clarion swimming. The girls stole softly away and came upon a heap of coarse clothing.

"Oh, Jan, look!" exclaimed Tabitha, and picked up from among the clothes a light gold chain, at the end of which was a miniature of a beautiful woman.

As they studied it, a crash was heard in the bushes, and the girls fled, Tabitha still carrying the miniature and chain. Ashamed to return it, they studied it more closely, and on the back found the initials W.H.J.B.

Tabitha still declined to return it to Charles and Janice took it on herself to do so, but Charles rather roughly refused to take it back.

"'Tis not mine, nor is it aught to me," he said.

That evening, Charles caught his reflection in the horse trough, and noted his unkempt hair and scrubby beard. It was not the custom for bond servants to shave, but at the King George tavern that night he bought a razor from a peddler.

A traveler in the inn watched Charles closely and, inquiring from the landlord, was told that he was bond servant of the Meredith and that the folk generally thought he was a deserter from the British army. Suddenly the traveler called out:

Fownes' body stiffened and he turned his head to the left. Then, relaxing, he stared at the man who gave the order. Then he started to leave the place.

"Ay," cried the traveler, "run, deserter."

In a Somerset dialect, Fownes declared that he was no more a deserter than the traveler was a spy, but left without further words, and on the way to the Meredith's realized he had been recognized by the traveler, whom he had known in England as Lord Clowes. Fearing further discovery, he decided not to shave his bondman's beard and threw away the razor.

The stranger then told the crowd in the inn that his name was Evatt and that, on behalf of himself and others in England, he was looking for lands to buy.

Joe Bagby, a lawyer and leader of the Invincibles, a local militia company, described the Meredithes and the squire's lack of sympathy with the American Whigs.

The stranger called next day at the Meredith's to complain about their servant's "impudence," and at once was struck by Janice's beauty. In the evening they walked together along the river and Janice told him the incident of the miniature and showed it to him, but though he said the portrait remided him of someone he had seen in London, he professed not to know whom the initials "W.H.J.B." signified.

The miniature convinced Evatt of Charles' identity, but when he spoke of it to the bondman, the latter was far from conciliatory and again charged Evatt with being a spy.

As the two talked, Janice came up and again offered to give the miniature to Charles, but he refused it, saying it was not his, and asking her to keep it.

Evatt remained at the Meredithes' several days, entertaining them with his stories of the court, but, telling Janice that he must be about the King's business, declared he must leave next day.

"You will never see me again," he went on, "unless——"

"Unless?" asked Janice, her face downcast.

"Unless I return here to carry you away," he said, seizing her hand.

"Please let go my hand," she said.

"Not till you give me yea or nay," he said.

"But I can't—" began the girl. "Here comes Charles."

"May I come back?" Evatt demanded.

"Yes," she answered desperately.

"I give you back your hand, Janice, but remember 'tis mine," he said, and departed, leaving a flattered, puzzled and miserable damoiselle.

AMONG Janice's suitors were Philemon Hennion, and Mr. McClave, pastor of the church which the Meredithes attended. The latter's suit was favored by Mrs. Meredith, a strongly religious woman who thought marriage to the clergyman might cure Janice of what her mother considered flippancy.

As for Philemon, he appeared to Janice to be more or less of an uncouth yokel.

And now, although it was usless for an indentured servant to hope for her hand, it was obvious that Charles had fallen a slave to her beauty. He was near her when he could be, and one day, when helping her and Sukey, the cook, prepare preserves, her mother became aware of his fondness for the girl.

"That was Colonel Brereton——," said Washington. Janice looked up and gave an exclamation so loud that everyone looked at her.

She rebuked her daughter and to her husband urged the girl's early marriage to Mr. McClave, but the clergyman, a widower, had a flock of young children and Mr. Meredith objected to his daughter's being a drudge for them.

The squire favored Phil's suit, and when the mother objected on the ground that the Hennions were bankrupt, said that the elder Hennion had plenty of good land which Janice's dowry could develop. Mrs. Meredith then warned her husband that the girl's head was full of the bond servant.

Janice, asked later by her father to explain the stableman's presence in the kitchen, revealed that Charles had come in to warn her that the villagers were preparing to tar and feather Meredith because of his pro-British attitude. The news left the squire still defiant.

A few weeks after, Janice's mother found the girl reading a letter which she demanded to see. It contained a miniature of Janice herself and was the work of Charles.

The discovery caused a furore in the Meredith house. Charles was rebuked for his presumption and Janice was forced to give the portrait back to him.

Her parents knew so little of their daughter's nature as never to dream that they had occasioned the first suggestion of tenderness for the opposite sex the girl's heart had ever felt. And love's flame is superior to physical law in that the less ventilation it has, the more fiercely it burns.

MR. McClave lessened his chance with Mr. Meredith when, on the next Sunday, he read an announcement in church that the State Assembly had been called to pass on the measures of the recent Congress and followed it with a sermon holding it the duty of the community to join hands in resisting the country's enemies.

The minister also announced that the Committee of Observation had called a meeting to instruct the county's representatives in the Assembly on how to vote on the measures.

Squire Meredith announced that he would never go into Mr. McClave's church again and, although a member of the Assembly, refused to attend the committee meeting.

News of the committee's action was brought by Squire Hennion, who blamed Meredith's non-participation for its endorsement of Congress' policy of resistance to the British authority. Hennion, also a member of the Assembly, had feared to oppose the "hotheads" of the committee.

The committee had voted to buy twenty barrels of powder and Hennion had revealed that Charles Fownes, the Meredithes' bond servant, had been drilling the Invincibles. The squire immediately sent word to have the bondman appear.

Then Hennion, while his son and Janice sat in the room, proposed that the two marry, saying that Philemon was too shy to propose directly himself.

"Oh, daddy, I don't want to marry," Janice appealed. "I want to stay home with you!"

But her parents silenced her, and Mrs. Meredith, realizing that her husband's anger at Mr. McClave barred the clergyman as a son-in-law, agreed when the squire announced that the girl should marry young Hennion.

Philemon, at his father's urging, was about to seal the bargain with a kiss when Charles suddenly appeared in the doorway. To the girl it seemed that an ally had risen in her need.

"I sent for you because I hear you've been drilling the rebels," Meredith said to Charles. "Is it true?"

"Ask Phil Hennion," answered Charles.

"Do you mean Hennion has been drilling with the other villains?" roared Meredith.

Hennion's admission sent the squire into a rage. He canceled the engagement and ordered the youth and his father from the house.

When they had gone, he berated Charles.

"'Tis the like of you—debtors, runaways and such trash—that is making all this trouble," he declared.

But Charles defended the American cause. "What the Whigs demand is only what the English themselves fought for under Pym and Hampden," he said. "And if the words 'Great Britain' instead of the 'American Colonies' were written into the acts of Parliament of which the Whigs complain, there'd be rebellion from Land's End to Duncansby Head."

The squire, unconvinced, commanded his servant to cease such talk, and when Charles offered to buy his freedom, saying he thought he could get the money, Meredith flatly refused, and ordered him back to the stable.

CHARLES, sent on an errand to the village, returned a few days later with the information that the Massachusetts Committee of Safety had dispatched news of the Battle of Lexington to the other colonies, telling them that British Regulars had fired on a militia company without provocation.

The squire hailed the news as indicating that the incipient rebellion would be crushed.

That night, Charles met Janice on the lawn and asked her to intercede with her father to let him buy his freedom.

"Why do you want your freedom?" she asked.

"How beautifully he talks!" thought Janice.

"It will be better to let me go before I turn mad," the bondman went on. "You need not have avoided me as you've done lately to show me that I'm beneath you. I knew it without that. But who is this 'put' you are going to marry?"

"Mr. Hennion is of good family," Janice said with spirit. "'Tis quite in keeping that a bond servant should think little of blood."

Charles cut the air with his whip.

"That for all the blood in the world unless there is honor with it," he exclaimed hotly.

"Sour grapes?" asked the girl.

"'Tis no case of sour grapes, as you'd know if I told you my story."

"Oh, I should monstrous like to hear it!" Charles came nearer to her.

"I swore it should die with me, but there's one woman to whom——"

"Is the squire home, Miss?" asked Joe Bagby. "I just wanted to see if we could fix things between us about the next election."

As he spoke there was a sudden rush of men, who seemed to appear from nowhere. They overwhelmed Charles and, at Bagby's order, some stood by Janice to prevent her screaming. Others dragged Mr. Meredith from the house, while another group started a fire and over it hung a kettle of tar.

The threat was too much for the squire. At Bagby's demand he swore to give up tea, to withdraw as candidate for the Assembly and finally, in a tuneless base, sang some of the songs of Liberty.

BRUNSWICK and the neighborhood not long after were excited as General Washington and Colonel Lee passed through on their way to Boston, where Washington was to take over command of the army.

The Invincibles turned out and, under Charles' direction, drilled in the leader's honor while Bagby revealed that they had acquired twenty barrels of powder.

Philemon meanwhile was a constant visitor at Greenwood and made a point of spying on Janice. One evening after supper she rose from the table and went out of the house. Philemon following at a discrete distance. Janice, aware of this, suddenly turned and accused him of being a spy.

"I am going to the stable to see Charles," she said. "If you follow me, I'll——"

The girl turned away, leaving Phil a picture of indecision and anxiety. She knew that Charles had gone to the village, but went into the stable and sat down in the hay.

Soon she heard two men approaching and knew, from his voice, that one was Charles.

"Tell the lads I'll lead them and meet them tomorrow evening at Drigg's barn," she heard him say. Fownes went on to tell his companion that, failing to buy his freedom, he was going to run away, despite the fact that his capture meant doubling his time of service. The other then left and Janice stepped from the stable.

Charles was startled at her appearance, and asked her if she had overheard him, but she promised she would not reveal what she had heard.

He then told her that General Washington had written to the revolutionary committee in Brunswick to ask that the Invincibles send him their powder, of which the American Army was desperately in need, but that Bagby had refused on the ground that it might be needed for the defence of Brunswick and that Squire Hennion, who, chiefly from selfish motives, was now linked with the rebels, had proposed to sell it to Washington for three times its value.

But Parson McClave, Charles and others of spirit among the Invincibles had plotted to steal the powder and take it to the Army.

"I'll bead them," Charles went on. "I want to go where there's fighting. Perhaps a bullet will end my shame and my bond—ay, and my love for you. For I love you, Miss Janice, more than——"

"You forget—" Janice began.

"Of course I forget! What would love be worth if it didn't forget everything but itself? But you are too heartless to know what love is."

"'Tis not so," said the girl. "But I'll love no redemptioner."

"And who are you?" demanded the man passionately. "Daughter of a nobody, called 'esquire' because he's the biggest bubble in a pint pot."

"My great-grandfather was Edward Bylynge," she answered angrily.

The man laughed. "My great-grandfather was King of England," he said as the girl walked away.

MR. Evatt paid a visit to Greenwood. The squire had learned that he was really Baron Clowes and had become commissary to the British forces. Lord Clowes was disappointed when he heard that Janice was engaged to Philemon, but when Philemon told him that, while spying on Janice, he had heard of the plot to steal the powder, persuaded young Hennion to turn loyalist, to make his way to Boston and inform Lord Howe, the British commander, of Washington's lack of powder,

Early in the morning Clowes and Philemon rode to Amboy, where Philemon was put up on the frigate Asia to carry his information to Howe.

Thus rid of his rival, Clowes proposed to Janice that he and she elope and be married. Her objections on the ground that her parents had pledged her to Philemon he answered by the argument that the Meredithes would be better pleased to have her "Lady Janice Clowes" than the wife of a "gawk" like young Hennion.

Flattered by his proposal, Janice finally consented, and that night, taking two horses from the stable, they started to Amboy to be married on a British ship.

But on the way, unluckily for Clowes, they met Charles and his group. The bondman was astonished at the girl's announcement that she was to be married. He ordered Clowes bound and led Janice's horse down the road.

"I am going to send you back to Greenwood in charge of Parson McClave," he said.

"Oh," she begged, "you'll not be cruel. You'll not disgrace me? I promise never to go off with him—indeed——"

"Of that I'm sure, for I'm going to take him with me to Cambridge."

For a moment Janice was silent, then cried: "If you only knew how I hate you!"

The man laughed bitterly. "I do," he said, "from the way I hate and despise you."

They parted as the clergyman took charge of the girl and headed for Greenwood.

UNDER his own name of John Brereton, Charles delivered the powder to the American Army in Cambridge and was put on Washington's staff. He stayed with the commander through the ineffectual defence of New York and was at the Morris House on Haarlem Heights when the staff was informed that two ladies had come to see the general. The younger was described by one of the aides as a Venus.

Washington told Brereton that a prisoner was awaiting examination and, as the commander was busy with battle plans, gave the task of examination to him.

The prisoner, it turned out, was Squire Meredith and the two ladies were Mrs. Meredith and Janice. The squire had been seized because Clowes' letter to Howe, discovered after the British evacuation of Boston, had contained the statement that the information concerning Washington's lack of powder had been obtained from Meredith.

None of the three recognized Brereton, in his trim uniform and clean-shaven, as Charles the bondman, and he did not reveal his identity. As a result of the squire's story, the aide told him he believed the commander would free him from blame.

Brereton found quarters for Mr. Meredith and gave up his own room to Mrs. Meredith and Janice. Next day General Washington asked them to be his guests at dinner and himself took Janice to the table.

Asked by the commander if her accommodations were not too uncomfortable, Janice told him that one of his staff had given them his apartment.

"That was Colonel Brereton, the beau of my 'family'," said Washington. "Look at him there. Wouldst think the coxcomb was in the charge this morning?"

Janice looked and gave an exclamation of surprise so loud that everyone looked at her and she longed to slip under the table.

"What startled thee, child?" asked Washington.

"Oh—nothing," the girl blushingly answered.

But later, alone with her mother, she revealed that she had discovered in Colonel Brereton their runaway bond servant. Mrs. Meredith scoffed at the idea.

"A runaway bond servant on the General's staff!" she exclaimed. "General Washington is a rebel, but he is a man of breeding and would never allow that."

At Brereton's report of his examination of Mr. Meredith, the General exonerated the squire and gave him and his family a pass back to Greenwood.

"The General's a fine man in bad company," said the squire as they left. "'Tis a mortal shame to think he's like to come to gallows."

ACROSS New Jersey came the retreating Americans followed by the British. The Meredithes learned that Philemon Hennion had entered the British service and had become a cornet. Lord Clowes, or Mr. Evatt, as they first knew him, had been taken by Charles at New York, where the bond servant, fearing he would be unable to justify the kidnapping, had put him on board a ship bound for Madeira, but Clowes had persuaded the ship's captain to land him in New England and the baron had rejoined the King's forces.

Clowes was with the British when they reached Brunswick and brought Generals Howe and Cornwallis to dine at Greenwood. The squire's wrath over the parson's story of Clowes' attempt to elope with Janice vanished at the sight of the British commanders and he made them welcome, though complaining that the rebels, on their retreat, had left him little with which to entertain them.

Cornwallis urged Howe to press the pursuit of Washington's men, but Howe, after a glance at Janice, decided not to hurry. He asked Janice to fill his glass, and as she did so tried to put his arm around her waist.

"Fie!" said Clowes. "What will Mrs. Loring think?"

The King's men later left to press on, and in a day or two Brereton was commissioned by Washington to order General Lee, then at Morristown with his command, to join the American leader with all his forces and proceed to beat the British in detail at Burlington, Princeton or Trenton.

But Lee scoffed at the plan, declaring that Washington's manoeuvres at Brooklyn had unhinged the goodly fabric "we have been building."

"I tell you we shall be in declension till a tobacco hoeing Virginian, who was put in power by a trick, is shown to be weak and deficient," he said. "He has had his chance and failed. Now 'tis for me to repair the damage he's done."

Brereton scowled. "Do you mean you refuse to obey the order?"

"'Tis necessary in detachment to allow some discretion to the commanding officer," replied Lee. "However, I'll think on it."

Brereton, leaving Lee's headquarters, rode to Greenwood in the night and went to the Meredith stable to take the horse Joggles in exchange for his wearied animal, intending to bring back Joggles later.

Tired of the conversation in the house, where Lord Clowes and Philemon were holding forth, Janice went to the stable. There she encountered Brereton, who explained his mission.

"I must ride thirty miles," he said, seizing her hands.

"Your hands are cold," she whispered. "Let me get you something to eat."

"Ho, there," came a voice, "which way is't to Greenwood?"

Brereton swung into the saddle.

"To the right," he answered, but as he spurred the horse a band seized the bridle. Brereton swung his sword against an arm and galloped on. A few shots were fired blindly at him, but he escaped unscathed.

The man who had tried to stop Brereton's horse was one of a squad led by Philemon, who soon found his way into the Meredith house. The shots had aroused the household and had brought Janice hurrying in.

"Did they kill him?" she cried.

But she learned that it was not Brereton who was wounded and, in her excitement, confessed that it was he who had been at the stable.

"What did he tell you?" asked the squire, as Clowes and Philemon listened.

"I passed him my promise not to tell," she said.

The squire stepped into the hall and returned with his riding whip.

"Thou'rt a great girl to be whipped," he announced, "but if thou'rt not old enough to obey, thou'rt not too old for a trouncing. Which will it be?"

"You can kill me, but I'll keep my word," answered the maiden, shaking with fear at the threatened punishment and the shame of its publicity.

But young Hennion and Clowes intervened, persuading the squire to send the girl to bed while they figured out a way to capture Brereton.

GERMAN bands paraded up and down the streets of Trenton playing Christmas songs as Colonel Rahl, Hessian commander, tipsily celebrating the holidays, received word through a spy that Washington was planning to cross the Delaware and attack the mercenaries.

"Nein, nein," Rahl scoffed. "Vashington's mens have no shoes. Dey vill not cross to dis side, ice or no ice."

So the celebration went on in Trenton, while on the Pennsylvania side some of Washington's aides sought to deter him from the raid, but he would not be moved from his purpose.

"General Gates leaves us all the honor to be gained tonight," he told Brereton and the others of his staff, "and Colonel Cadwallader declares it impossible to get his guns across. It seems there are some in our own forces, as well as the enemy, who need a lesson in Winter campaigning."

Two twelve-pounders were put on a hay barge and two row galleys were made fast to the front, and leaving the embarkation of the troops to Greene and Knox, Washington set out on the barge to cross the river.

The instant the shelter of the shore was lost, the struggle with the elements began. The wind, blowing savagely from the northeast, churned the water into foam and blew cold spray against man and beast. Masses of ice were kept from crushing the sides of the boats and barges by artillery men with their rammers and sponges.

The departure from the Pennsylvania side took place at 10, but it was 3 o'clock in the morning before the last of the troops were over and 4 when the twenty-four weary and half-frozen men set off in a blinding snow storm on the nine-mile march to Trenton.

The Meredithes were in the city, stopping at the Drinkers' house, where, because Rahl and his Hessian staff had made headquarters, they were forced to occupy the servants' apartments in the attic.

Colonel Brereton was among the first of the raiders to enter Trenton as the Hessians were routed or captured, and took over the Drinkers' home for Washington, who was gladdened by the sight of Janice. Her courage in refusing to reveal anything Brereton had told her about the army's plans earned his praise.

THE war dragged on and Janice saw nothing of Brereton, but Clowes and Hennion sought every opportunity to be near her. Clowes, rich through his office as commissary, constantly urged the squire to cancel her engagement to Philemon and, when all the country was suffering from lack of provisions, saw that the Meredithes had plenty.

The Meredithes, because the Whigs were in control about their place in Brunswick, went with the British forces as they took Philadelphia and there, in Mrs. Loring, inamorta of Howe, Janice recognized the original of the miniature which Brereton had carried.

When the King's men finally evacuated Philadelphia, and the Americans entered, the Meredithes and other loyalists were transferred to an uncomfortable prison camp in Virginia, and there they stayed until the British, transferring their operations to the South, advanced northward, freed the prisoners and took them to Yorktown.

It was there that Janice heard from Colonel Mobray Brereton's story, which he himself had never told her. Mobray had been an officer in the Welsh Fusileers with Brereton.

"His was so bitter a story that he deserves a love such as yours," Mobray said. "I can remember him the merriest of us all."

"What changed him?" Janice asked.

"'Twas one evening at mess when Powel, too deep in drink to know what he was saying, blurted out something concerning Mrs. Loring's relations with Sir William Howe. Poor Brereton was the one man in the force who knew not why such favoritism had been shown him in his being put so young into Howe's regiment. But that we were eight to one, he'd have killed Powel then and there. Prevented in that, he set off to kill his colonel, never dreaming Howe was his own father. He burst in on me late that night, crazed with grief, and told me how he found Howe at his mother's and how she had robbed him of his vengeance by a word. The next day he disappeared and I never heard of him until I learned that he was in the American Army. Does he not deserve something to sweeten his life?"

YORKTON fell, and though Squire Meredith, after some trouble, regained his property at Greenwood, his life was saddened by the death of his wife from smallpox while the siege was on.

At Greenwood, Janice learned that Brereton, now a general, was in command of a body of Continental troops at Brunswick. One day, seeing an American soldier passing along the road, she asked him if he knew where General Brereton was, and the soldier said he had seen him at Colonel Dayton's quarters.

Janice picked a rose from a bush and such sprays of honeysuckle as she could find, and, giving the soldier a Spanish milled dollar, asked him to carry the bouquet to Brereton.

The soldier, somewhat embarrassed, gave the flowers to Brereton as he sat with other officers.

"A gal gave me this to give to you, General," he said.

"Where was she when she gave them to you?" demanded Brereton.

"In the garden at Greenwood," said the man.

The General, without a word of explanation or apology, started away almost at a run. He tossed a gold piece to the soldier and hastened to the Greenwood garden. Janice was awaiting him.

"Oh, sweetheart," cried Brereton, clasping her tightly. "Do you mean—can the flowers truly say that you really love me?"

"They can, but never how much."

"Then tell me yourself."

"No words can."

"Ah, sweetheart, try," besought Brereton.

"Then stoop and let me whisper it," said the girl, and obediently Brereton bent his head. But what she had to tell was told by her lips upon his.

FOILING THE ANARCHISTS

By EX-DETECTIVE-INSPECTOR HERBERT T. FITCH
(Formerly of the Special Branch, New Scotland Yard)

NOT many people in this country know the name of Angelica Maranoff. In the hidden places of modern Russian intrigue, however, her name is famous. I have never met her, and only once came across traces of her work in England. On that one occasion her mind directed a plot in which it was proposed to set up a Communist dictator in England. By this you will understand that she is a lady of big ideas.

We first got on her trail when a police raid on a cheap lodging house near Blackfriars revealed correspondence, incautiously signed with her own name, in which she said she was coming over to England. That, from what we already know of her, meant business! We have a dossier of this lady at the Yard. She is about twenty-seven, slender, of medium height, with smooth black hair and unusually attractive appearance. Also, she dresses as tastefully as a Frenchwoman, and with the expensive simplicity of an American millionairess.

Her father was sent to Siberia, and never heard of again; her mother was killed during the Tsarist regime. The girl's mind became unhinged with grief. From childhood she has thought only of one thing—the destruction of the class responsible for the deaths of her parents. She has since became Chief Soviet Courier, because the Soviet knows well how to use such hatreds as hers. We have records of her work in Italy, just before Mussolini's coup brought that country from out of the very crater of anarchy. She was later imprisoned in Spain, but was apparently released. At different times she was reported to be flitting through Germany and France.

Makers of Trouble

WHEREVER she goes, revolution and unrest follow. Therefore, when we came across the letters saying that she was visiting England, we instituted a thorough search for the lady. From the dates of the letters, we gathered that she had already landed in England. We sifted all London, where we had reason to suspect that she was hiding, only to find a trail already cold. She had left again by a Soviet wheat ship from the Pool of London—apparently on the afternoon of the very day when we raided the house in Blackfriars.

But I knew enough about her to know that she would not have deserted England until whatever plans she had come to perfect were laid to the last detail. The next search was for those plans. I went back to the house where we had found her letters, and asked a number of questions of some of the lodgers there. The papers we had seized belonged to a man who, since our raid, had been lodging at His Majesty's expense. He had been the secretary of an English anarchist club, though his fellow boarders and landlord knew nothing of that.

All they could say was that he had had all sorts of queer visitors, some of them coming at unearthly hours of the night. Among the latter, a beautiful girl had been noticed, answering very well to our description of Angelica Maranoff. The man who had seen her had come in after midnight from visiting friends, and had found her and a tall, aristocratic man with a scarred cheek waiting on the doorstep.

Using Number System

IN one of the letters the Russian girl had said she would come "with 354." I had exercised my brain a good deal about "354," and had a theory about him. The number, apparently, stood for a man. I took a very close description of the aristocratic-looking man with the scar, and then went to the nearest postoffice and began patiently to search a London directory.

I was looking for all the streets which had a house number "354" in them. There are not many long streets in London, and I soon had a list of them all. Then I hired a taxi, and started at each No. 354 in London. At the third call I struck lucky. A tall gentleman with a scar on his right cheek rented a room there. His name was Jacob Bronstein.

I searched his room. It proved to be little more than a poste restante address. A small writing desk in one corner was fastened with a powerful lock. But to defeat criminals we have to know their methods, and the lock did not give me much trouble. The desk contained some correspondence which I commandeered. It also contained a blotting-pad which had been used a good deal. The pad looked as if it had been used very recently, and I found, sure enough, that Bronstein had been to the house the night before.

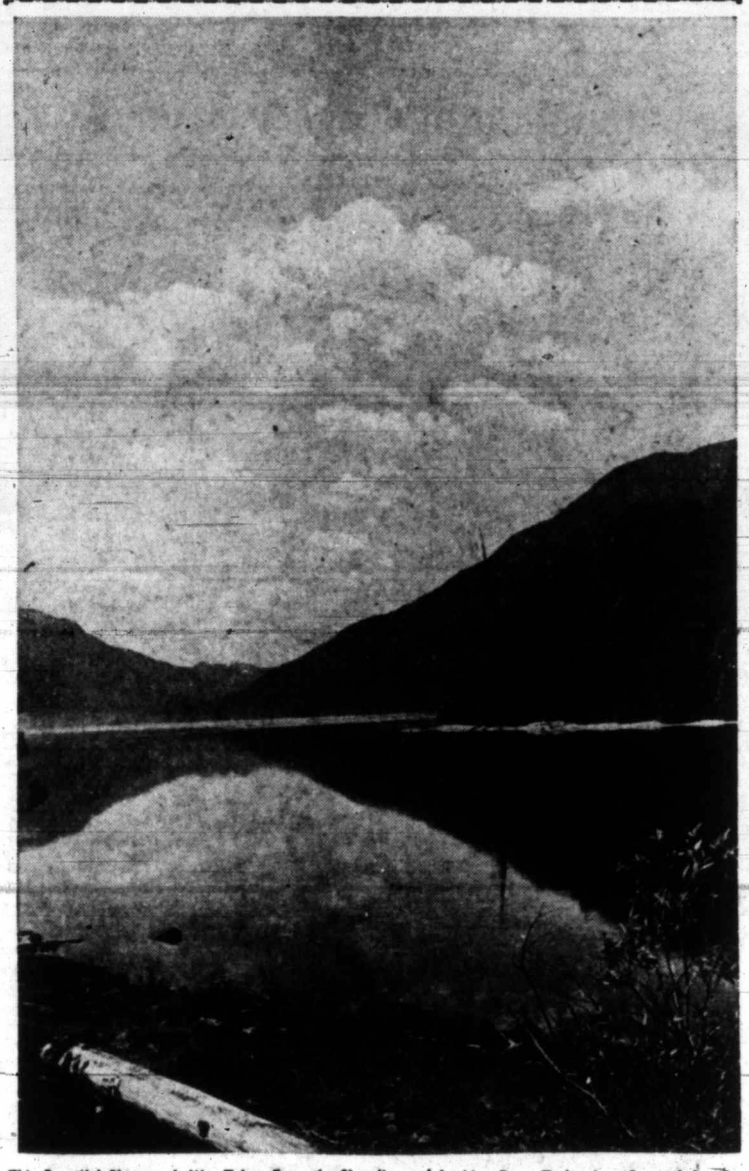
I held the blotting-paper up to a looking-glass over the mantelpiece, and could read back the most recent marks. An envelope had been blotted, and I could faintly make out the address. It was a place in Soho, already known to us as the headquarters of a powerful Communist organization which had hitherto kept itself precisely within the bounds of the law.

I Suspect Something

I WENT straight to Soho, but dismissed my taxi in Charing Cross Road. When I reached the shop to which the letter had been addressed, I suspected something was happening there at that very moment. A big Italian was lounging in the street outside, and a small, ferret-faced man hung about in the shop doorway. Neither were ostensibly doing anything, but they glanced at each other occasionally. It was obvious that both were guards, and, judging by the inactivity of both men's right hands in their jacket pockets, they probably carried revolvers.

If such precautions were being taken, there were certainly no time to lose. I walked boldly towards the shop. The small man stood in the entry, and asked me what I wanted without allowing me to pass. The other man came nearer.

Morning Casts Its Shadows



This Beautiful Photograph Was Taken From the Shoreline and Looking Down Taylor Arm, Sproat Lake, One of Vancouver Island's Scenic Attractions.

"Don't be a fool," I said urgently, in an important whisper. "I've got a message for Bronstein. From Mlle. Maranoff."

Both men stared at me very doubtfully. Finally, the smaller one nodded. "Go up, then," he muttered.

I passed into the shop, where the proprietor was sitting reading an afternoon racing special, and, taking the hint, went up the dingy stairs at the side. At the top were two doors. I could hear the murmur of voices from behind one, and the noise ceased abruptly as I knocked and walked in without waiting for an answer.

There were five men in the room, which was obviously being used for a sort of committee meeting. At the head of the table sat a fine-looking man with a scarred cheek. I could hardly believe my eyes when I looked at him. He was not Jacob Bronstein, but a financier of world fame who had apparently found the alias useful.

A Multi-Millionaire

OF the others, one was a Greek multi-millionaire, another a foreign ship owner, and the remaining two were English anarchist leaders well known to me. One of these latter was "wanted" on a number of serious charges, and was supposed to be in sanctuary in the Far East at the time.

The Greek had before him on the table a sheaf of papers, obviously memoranda of the discussions of the meeting. I walked forward and reached out my hand for the papers.

"You are under arrest, gentlemen," I said, giving them the usual warning. "Give me that sheet of notes, please."

The Greek thought the game was up. They all seemed to think that I had a squad of constables outside to back me up. But the man with the scar jumped round the table and snatched at the paper as my fingers touched it. Next second, my whistle was shrilling and we were all mixed up in a heap fighting for possession of the paper. It was like a rugby scrum. But I had the ball—or rather the document—and meant to hang on it it.

It was a bit of luck for me that a policeman returning home after a spell of duty happened to be in the street outside, and heard my whistle even through the closed window. He recognized its urgency from the abrupt way it was cut off, when the five men came down on top of me. The policeman blew his own whistle, and came running up the stairs at the heels of the two gunmen. He got them with his truncheon while they were dodging round trying to get a sight of me, and, by the time some of my assailants had turned on him, other policemen had arrived. It was quite a complete coup. The paper which caused all the trouble was torn in three pieces, but was otherwise quite readable.

Plot Is Laid Bare

THE notes, and other evidence we were able to gather together from the room and the lodgings of the conspirators, laid bare one of the most skilful anarchist plots of modern times.

The three financiers were to put several millions of pounds into a scheme for a combined general strike, and an armed rising of certain foreign dockside elements, in two of our big cities. Planned as it was, the outbreak would have so disorganized the country's business that there seemed a chance—at least in the minds of the plotters—to form an anarchist dictatorship, and run this country on Russian lines.

It was realized, of course, that the great bulk of England would never agree to such a step. But they hoped that our national sense of security would quieten us until, in two or three swift moves, the plan was too far advanced to be stopped save by widespread bloodshed.

Man With the Scar

THE wickedest part of the scheme was the part assigned to the three real originators, whose leader was the man with the scar. They were to operate markets from outside this country, and make inconceivable profits by a foreknowledge of political events in Great Britain. Their own skins would never have been risked in the slightest, but they, not their anarchist dupes, would have raked in all the gains. The latter, indeed, could hardly have done other than end in gaol or get themselves shot, for we at the Yard would not have been so slow to take action as they fondly imagined. But, even if the effort had ended in smoke and the English participators in prison, the three foreign financiers would have made several millions between them, and done endless mischief to British trade and credit.

I was very satisfied, indeed, that one of them, at least, had not only failed to save his precious skin but was unconscious for ten minutes or so after our little melee ended. The others were in little better plight.

They were tried on comparatively minor charges, because at the time we were still busy unravelling odds and ends of the plot, and did not want to be disturbed by too much publicity. But they all received severe sentences. I don't think any of the three foreigners will ever risk coming on English soil again, while their dupes must have learned that it does not always pay to trust to specious people who promise the millennium in exchange for a violent jolting of the world's finance.

John Hampden—Statesman and Patriot

By DORA KITTO

I LIKE to dream of the quiet villages and green slopes of the Chiltern Hills and to picture the men of Buckinghamshire, who came riding along the rutty lanes and over the muddy fields on a day in early January three hundred years ago. They were gathering from town, village and cuddling hamlet to join in a purposeful errand and there was much stamping of horses and jingling of harness, laughing and shouting, as the men came riding, four thousand strong, towards London. The footsteps of their horses must have sounded as the pulsing heart-beat of a nation, torn in a life and death struggle for liberty.

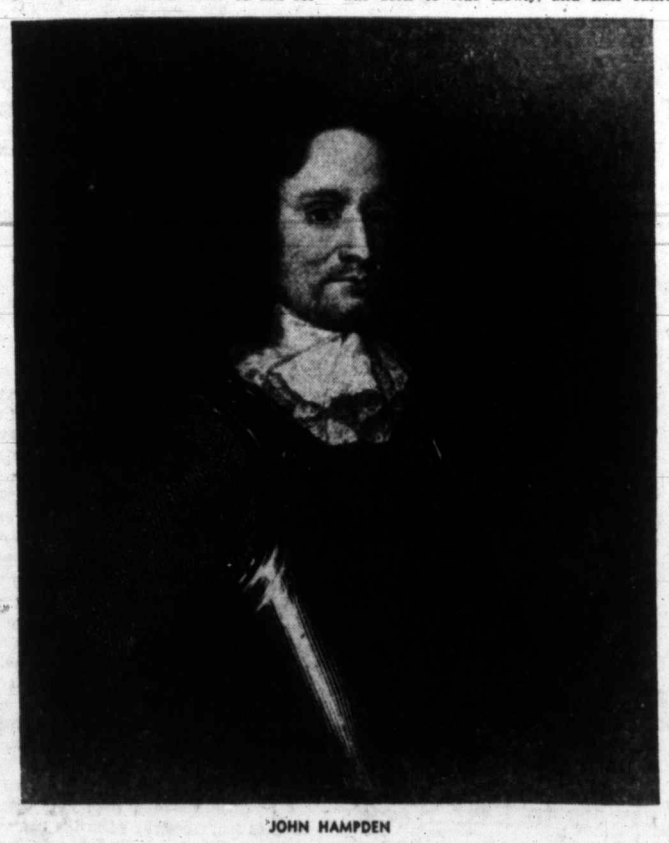
It was January 12, 1642, and the men of Buckingham had come to petition the King for justice to their leader, John Hampden, statesman and patriot. In their hats they carried copies of the Grand Remonstrance, which Parliament had printed, and which cited the misdeeds of the Sovereign over a period of sixteen years. Stuart folly had reached a high water mark in October, 1634, when Charles I, without consent of Parliament, demanded the payment of the tax known as Ship Money. Hampden, living in his peaceful home in the Chilterns, refused to pay it, as he had not long before refused to pay another tax levied by the authority of the King, alone. For this act of defiance he had suffered imprisonment in the Gate House, and the punishment had left its mark upon him for the rest of his days.

Hampden had sat for six years in the Parliaments of James I, and also in those of Charles I. No man more deeply longed for peace and the fields and woodlands of his native shire called to every fibre of his being. His family had owned great wealth and the estate in Buckinghamshire had been given to them from King Edward the Confessor. Of good education and possessing the most desirable qualities of heart and mind, Hampden was regarded as a man of unimpeachable virtue and honesty. The payment of the Ship Money Tax would have worked no hardship, indeed, to one less sincere in purpose, the road of least resistance would have been the easier on to travel. It was not, however, the road for John Hampden, whose patriotism belonged as much to the whole nation as to his home county. That he longed for peaceful rulership, is shown by the words inscribed upon a locket he wore:

"Not against the King I fight,
But for the King and country's right."

Political Turmoil

CIRCUMSTANCE, however, compelled him to become a leader of men against the encroachments of a tyrannical monarchy The momentous year 1634 found him not only bereft of his wife and left with nine young children, but engaged in that political turmoil which ended in civil war. Tried for refusing to pay Ship Money, the judges decided against him, for we are told that there had been much solicitation, hopes of preferment and threats. The uneasiness of the country increased. Symptoms of the brooding storm were becoming more and more evident. In January, 1642 the King was possessed of the fatal idea of impeaching five members of the House of Commons and one of the Lords for high treason. The Great Remonstrance had been printed and scattered over the land, and Charles tried to buy the loyalty of John Pym, the Parliamentary leader, by offering him the Chancellorship of the Exchequer. This he refused. The five members effected their spectacular escape from the House to avoid arrest by the King's men. The Queen fled to Holland, taking with her the crown jewels. These she sold to procure supplies for the King's army. Angry messages were passing all too frequently between the Sovereign and his Parliament, but neither side would yield. It was at this juncture that the men of Buckingham rode to Westminster to ask for fair treatment for their own representative, John Hampden, the Grand Remonstrance tucked in their hat bands.



JOHN HAMPDEN

Cavalier and Roundhead

WHEN Charles refused his consent to a Militia Bill, authorizing certain lord-lieutenants to raise forces and so transfer the command of the army to Parliament, nothing could stem the tide of bitter feeling. Both sides prepared for war and out of the tumult arose those historic names, Cavalier and Roundhead. Unfortunately, the leadership of the Parliamentary troops fell upon the somnolent Lord Essex, whose household troops wore the orange scarf. Had Hampden lived, he would in all probability have superseded Essex and the war would have terminated more quickly. Too soon the orange scarves and the blue coats, the red, purple and green were to be stained by the storm and stress of warfare, but gathered from the countryside under their respective leaders, the troops provided a picturesque touch in an ever-changing scene.

Chalgrove Field

IT was early on a Sunday morning, June 18, when Prince Rupert, whose name is for ever tainted by acts of cruelty and rapacity, was forced to a skirmish with Hampden in a field of golden corn, at Chalgrove. As the corn was being trampled in blood, Hampden was seen to ride slowly, and half fainting, from the field. This he would never have done except in great extremity. He tried to reach Pyrton, the home of his first wife, but the enemy troops intervened, so he traveled a longer distance, to Thame, and took refuge in the house of one, Ezekiel Brown. Here, after six days of unspeakable agony, he passed away and was buried in the parish church of his own estate, his body being escorted by a detachment of his followers, the Buckinghamshire Green Coats. "It was a loss that goeth near the heart of every man that loves the good of his King and country," we read.

Hampden House

AT Hampden House, on the slope of the hill, are shown the parlor where its owner was arrested for refusing to pay Ship Money; the chalice cup he used at his communion; his helmet, some family portraits and a Bible, with entries of the Hampdens and Cromwells, who were related, but interesting as these relics may prove, the name of John Hampden lives without them.

I know no part of England which is more deeply associated with the stories of great men and great deeds, than this historical strip of country, measuring fifty-three miles by twenty-seven, and I like to fancy that the spirit of John Hampden and the men of Buckingham might come riding over the green slopes of the hills, and gathering in the peaceful valleys, today. They would see the same leafy woodland paths that they knew, and the golden corn ripening where it was trampled in blood at Chalgrove on that Sunday morning in June. The skylark, singing, still wings its flight towards the blue; the daisies powder the green sward as they did three hundred years ago, and the Green Coats of Buckingham, who fought about their leader and marched beside his body with muffled drums and arms reversed, might point us to an unmarked grave and say, "There lies John Hampden, soldier and patriot, who died for the liberty of the people of England."

and they remembered a most important factor. It was that when a person goes on a holiday that person goes away from his home, not only in search of a change of scenery and air—but to play; to be entertained. What is the result? About $20,000,000 yearly from the tourist trade. It is the big business—the mainstay of the Hawaiian Islands. What is the secret? It is not a secret. It is an appreciation of human nature, and is based on an understanding that man is a friendly animal. So the good people of Hawaii make their visitors understand that they are anxious to serve them and to make their visit enjoyable. The stranger is greeted with a smile wherever he goes on the Islands. He is asked to make known his wants and preferences—and when the time comes for his reluctant return to his own community he leaves with the hope that he will be able to come back again to a friendly land of friendly people.

Vancouver Island has much to offer that is not to be found in Hawaii, even as those islands possess their own unique attractions.

Manx Prosperity

LET us, for a moment, consider another island. Everyone has heard of it—the Isle of Man. Fifty years ago the Isle of Man was not the prosperous place that it is today. Its inhabitants were farming and fishing, just as had their forefathers for hundreds of years. There was a member of The House of Keyes named James Roscoe—and he had an idea. He had an eye for beauty in Nature and an appreciation of the value of the lore of that historic little island. Roscoe each year addressed the local Parliament—The House of Keyes—advising that efforts be directed towards developing the tourist trade. He was persistent, and finally he overcame opposition and secured a grant of £5,000. He started to advertise the Isle and tourists came. Two years later the grant was increased to £25,000—and today the mainstay of that old island is the tourist trade. But the people of the Isle of Man—just as had the business men of Honolulu—knew that they must keep their visitors entertained, and they provided entertainment. The Isle of Man is today one of the great tourist places of the world.

World Famous Place

TAKE another place, world famous for its selling of entertainment — Blackpool, England. Who has not heard of it? Blackpool was just a small fishing town, with no particular known attractions until Walter Huddlestone came there in 1880. Huddlestone was recommended to rest up in some quiet seaside place for the benefit of his health, and by chance he went to Blackpool. He was a keen business man, and saw possibilities of making money through the attraction of visitors. He convinced some of the citizens to join in with his views and he succeeded in starting the development with the building of Raikes Hall. The effects of making Blackpool known were soon evident. There was in Blackpool at that time a publican who ran the Star Inn, John Bickerstaffe, who was tourist minded and public spirited. He became the mayor, and later was honored with knighthood. But this is aside from what he did in 1886. He was responsible for starting the Winter Garden, which was primarily erected to provide entertainment for visitors. It was a great success. This was followed by other developments, until today Blackpool has a world reputation for providing facilities for the entertainment of millions of persons who wish to play during their holidays. What is it worth? The revenue brought to Blackpool annually exceeds £200,000,000.

Then there is Beauville, France. Thirty years ago it was another small place largely dependent upon fishing for its upkeep. Today it is one of the greatest tourist resorts on the continent of Europe. Mention is made of Deauville because it is on the same isotherm as Victoria—that means that its climate is milar to that of Southern Vancouver Island.

Similar Story—Same Moral

MENTION could be made of scores of other places made prosperous through development of the tourist traffic, but story would largely be the same and the moral would be identical. It is, to put it concisely: you can help yourselves to prosperity by developing your natural assets and cultivating the facilities for others to enjoy them.

This tourist traffic is straightforward, legitimate business. Persons who intend to holiday plan to buy enjoyment. Those who add to the attractions supplied by Nature by an evident desire to assist in making possible the fullest measure of clean, honest enjoyment will secure the business. It is a highly competitive development, but it is lucrative, and it is paid in cash.

It differs from other forms of merchandising, for the satisfied visitor does not deplete the assets, but takes away memories and a desire to return and usually tells others of the pleasure experienced.

Support Advertising

NOW it may be argued: "Well, we have been advertising for tourists." That is true, and rich returns have resulted from that advertising. But that is not enough. We have done little, if anything, to develop the opportunities that our advertising have given. To illustrate: Recently a visitor to Victoria approached a resident: "Please don't think I'm getting personal," he apologized, "but say, old man, what do you people do here after seven o'clock if you don't go to bed?" This man was not impertinent. He explained that he and his wife had come to holiday and play. They had driven about the district and were delighted—but when the daylight faded they were at a loss as to what to do. Those people left Victoria the next day, although they had come to spend several weeks—and Victoria lost the money they intended to spend.

An organization is being formed—and is already under way—to set Victorians to work to help themselves. Mayor David Leeming is the chief inspiration of the movement, but the enthusiasm of a few cannot succeed if the majority are apathetic. Success requires the united effort of every citizen to make successful a business in which every citizen is a partner.

The movement is being initiated in Victoria, but those responsible for it are not parochial. They realize that Vancouver Island as a whole is a wonderland and that organization of all the communities of the Island into one great, progressive movement is essential to local and general advantage from the business of giving the absolute in enjoyment of the traveling public. Every person can play a part—and in so doing can aid himself or herself, as well as benefiting the community at large. It means more employment, more collateral expansion of Island industries and more opportunities for development along different lines.

Rewards of Effort

THERE is no use in sitting down and saying, "Oh, it can't be done until we have our roads put in shape." If we attract the volume of travel, the highways will have to be put into condition to serve it.

In the past we have sat and waited. We have not supported the advertising that has been done—and good advertising, too. Let us develop a new consciousness and determine to play our respective parts. There is much that can be done, and more and still more as time goes on. The first thing to do is to determine on a general plan and work progressively towards its attainment. At the same time there is a great deal, locally, that may be done, and much that can be done individually, for friendliness must be the basis of success, and friendliness in the mass is impossible without friendliness in individuals.

Yes, Vancouver Island can enjoy greater prosperity, with greater assurance of permanency of that prosperity if its citizens determine to make it possible by—helping ourselves.

The Fairest Things

What seems to grow fairer to me as life goes by is the love and grace and tenderness of it; not its wit and cleverness and grandeur of knowledge, but just the laughter of little children, and the friendship of friends, and the cosy talk by the fireside, and the sight of flowers and the sound of music.—John Richard Green

GYPSY STORMS THE CASTLE

ALTHOUGH the clever doctor soon had Meg running about again after her illness, somehow she did not seem to regain her old health and spirits. When her school fellows ran in to fetch her for a game and a romp, she would shake her head in a tired little way and say she would rather sit by the fireside and read her book. There would be troublesome headaches, too, and times when every little duty seemed a trouble. Meg was clearly not herself.

"Tut, tut!" the doctor said when he heard all about it. "This won't do. The little one needs a change. Send her to the sea. A good stiff sea breeze will soon blow the cobwebs away, and she will come back as full of fun and mischief as ever."

And so to the sea Meg went—to a little fishing village, the home of honest Martha, the children's old nurse, who had left them soon after Meg was born to marry her sailor sweetheart. Martha was a tremendous favorite, for not only was she brimful of life and fun, but she was a born story-teller. And the children never grew tired of her tales, for her store was endless—fine, stirring tales of the sea; eerie tales of haunted houses that sent a cold tingling down your spine; tender, romantic tales of true lovers in distress—all these old Martha told in a happy way that was quite her own.

And what delicious doughnuts and toffee and hot sultana scones she made! It was all delightful, and if only Peggy and her dear old Geoff were coming too, nothing in all the world could have been better.

But, although she felt terribly homesick at first, the days passed quickly and very happily. And then one morning Meg had a welcome surprise. At breakfast came a letter to say that Geoff was coming over on Gypsy to pay his little sister a visit. When the visitors arrived, Meg was wildly excited.

"Take care!" laughed Geoff. "You will strangle Gypsy. I believe you're more pleased to see her than your own big brother."

"Oh, no," cried Meg, flinging her arms round Geoff's neck. "It's just splendid to have you! There are such lots of things I want to do, but nothing is much fun when you are alone. I want to go out in one of those dear little boats, and explore the coves round the headland. And, oh, Geoff, there's the loveliest tumble-down castle on the cliffs you ever saw! Nurse says it's ever so old."

The ruined castle appealed strongly to Geoff, and, to Meg's delight, he proposed that they should beg an early lunch and spend the afternoon there.

"The fishermen say it's haunted," said Meg, as they jogged along the pleasant cliff road on Gypsy's back—it was scarcely a couple of miles from the cottage, but Meg would not hear of leaving her pet behind. "Let's get back before it's dark."

"Don't be a goose!" laughed Geoff.

"But they say at night a strange, flickering light shines through the turret windows," persisted Meg. "Lots of people have seen it."

It all sounded very exciting, but once inside the castle gates the ghosts were forgotten. Geoff was determined to give his little sister a good time, and, when they had thoroughly explored every inch of the interesting old ruin, they played hide-and-seek among the moss-covered walls till Meg declared she was tired out.

So they went back to Gypsy and led her out into the road.

As they reached the entrance a strong gust of wind lifted Meg's hat and carried it away. She ran back laughing, but just as she stooped to pick it up there came another great gust; the heavy oaken door creaked, swung on its hinges, and closed with a bang!

And Geoff called back:

And although he put out all his strength, and pushed it and shook it, and jerked it this way and that, he could make no impression on the obstinate lock. The door had slammed to with such force that it had released the old lock, which had been stuck fast for years, and it soon became evident that nothing but the blacksmith's tools would move it.

To fetch the blacksmith meant leaving Meg alone, and how little she would like that Geoff could guess. But clearly there was no other way. The outer walls of the castle were in an excellent state of preservation, and even if he could have scaled them himself at some point it would have been quite impossible to get Meg over too.

"Be brave, darling," he shouted. "I'll be back in ten minutes. Gypsy will go like the wind, won't you, lass?"

"Oh, don't take Gypsy!" begged Meg, terrified at the thought of being left alone in that awful place. "Tie her up to the door, then I can talk to her."

As soon as he had made Gypsy secure, Geoff sprang over the stile that faced the castle gates, and ran across the fields to the village as fast as his long legs could carry him. Meanwhile Meg did her best to be brave, but, try as she would to forget it, the thought of that flickering light in the empty tower set her poor little heart beating.

"Gypsy! Gypsy! Oh, why can't you talk?" she cried again and again.

"Gypsy! Gypsy!" cried Meg.

And again the little creature, feeling that something was wrong, drew nearer the door that divided them, and whined piteously.

And then, to Meg's horror, there came suddenly the sound of stealthy footsteps behind her. She caught her breath, and the color fled from her face, as the bent figure of a little lame boy crept silently out from the doorway of the tower and came slowly forward. A second gance and Meg's worst fears would have vanished. But her mind was full of ghosts and strange, uncanny lights, and she allowed herself no time to think. Uttering a piercing shriek, she flew to the gate, calling frantically on Gypsy to save her.

And Gypsy did not fail her. The faithful little animal threw back her ears, snorted, and kicked violently at the old oak door. Blow after blow rained upon the rotten woodwork, till the great door creaked and swayed, and suddenly burst open.

Meg sprang aside just in time to save herself, and the next moment fell sobbing on Gypsy's neck.

* * * * *

So after all the ghost turned out to be nothing more terrifying than a little lame boy, homeless and friendless, who had found in the deserted castle a refuge and a shleter. The few coppers he earned in the daytime barely provided him with food, and were rarely sufficient to pay for a lodging.

Poor little lad! His lot was a hard one, and Meg's tender heart could not forget him. But before her holiday was over she was able to write to Geoff to say that a home had been found for him by some kind-hearted fisherfolk, and that the worst of his troubles were happily over.

Meg Merrilees

Old Meg she was a gypsy,
And lived upon the moors;
Her bed it was the brown heath turf,
And her house was out of doors.

And every morn of woodbine fresh
She made her garlanding,
And every night the dark green yew
She wore; and she would sing.

Her apples were swart blackberries,
Her currants, pods o' foam.
Her wine was dew of the wild white rose,
Her book a churchyard tomb.

Her brothers were the craggy hills,
Her sisters larchen trees;
Alone with her great family,
She lived as she did please.

Old Meg was brave as Margaret Green,
And tall as Amazon;
An old red blanket cloak she wore,
A ship-hat she had on;

God bless her aged bones somewhere,
She died full long ago.

—John Keats.

The Old Home

We leave the well-beloved place
Where first we gazed upon the sky;
The roofs that heard our earliest cry
Will shelter one of stronger race.

We go, but ere we go from home,
As down the garden-walks I move
Two spirits of a diverse love
Contend for loving masterdom.

One whispers: Here my boyhood sung
Long since its matin song, and heard
The low love-language of the bird,
In native hazels tassel-hung.

The other answers: Yea, but here
Thy feet have strayed in after hours
With thy lost friend among the bowers,
And this hath made them trebly dear.

—Tennyson.

Alfred Nobel, King of Dynamite

By VERNON TIMBERLEY

SOMETIME in November every year we read in the newspapers to whom the Nobel Prizes have been awarded. There are five prizes: one to the person who has made the most important discovery or invention in the domain of physics; one to the person who has made the most important chemical discovery or improvement; one for the most important discovery in the domain of physiology or medicine; one to the person who has produced in the field of literature the most distinguished work of an idealistic tendency; and one to the person who shall have most or best promoted the fraternity of nations and the increase of peace. Each prize is about $40,000 and a gold medal. It was the wish of Dr. Nobel that the prizes be awarded without considering in any way the nationality of the persons receiving the awards.

The donor of these prizes, Dr. Alfred Bernhard Nobel, was a distinguished Swedish engineer and scientist and the inventor of the explosive known as dynamite from which he made a great fortune. He did not believe in leaving large sums of money to relations, but preferred to leave his wealth as a contribution to progress in science, literature and the furtherance of world peace. It seems a strange contradiction that so successful an inventor of destruction should leave the money made thereby to further peace and the creative arts.

It is thought that Dr. Nobel intended the literary prize to be awarded with the object of encouraging the writing of good literature and not merely as an award for writers who have written their best work years before the prize was given.

Every year but two, the awards for literature have been made and twice it was divided between two writers. You may be interested to know some of the writers who have received the coveted prize. For 1934 it went to Luigi Pirandello, an outstanding Italian writer of plays. Last year the award was made to Ivan Bunin, a Russian writer of novels and short stories. The year before, 1932, it went to the famous English novelist, John Galsworthy, who has since died.

The first award for literature was made in 1901, and since then it has been given three times to Great Britain, twice to Ireland and once to the United States. In 1907 the prize went to Rudyard Kipling, author of "Kim" and the "Jungle Books"; in 1913 to Rabindranath Tagore, famous Bengalese poet, and in 1932 to John Galsworthy, author of "The Forsyte Saga." The prize for 1923 went to William Butler Yeats, famous Irish poet and playwright, and in 1925 to George Bernard Shaw, Irish playwright. The only time the literature award has gone to an American was when it was made to Sinclair Lewis, author of "Main Street."

The Swing

Up in the air so blue?
Oh, I do think it the pleasantest thing
Ever a child can do!

Up in the air and over the wall,
Till I can see so wide,
Rivers and trees and cattle and all
Over the countryside—

Till I look down on the garden green,
Down on the roof so brown—
Up in the air I go flying again,
Up in the air and down!

AN OLDER SETTLEMENT

WE saw last week how the early settlers in Canada carried on the work their fathers had begun. But these men as they ploughed and sowed left other seed in the land. They had brought with them the religion of their forefathers and taught it to their children. Those lessons of faith and reverence have spread from shore to shore and outlived the years between. Canada may well cherish the memory of those who in the midst of poverty and hardship never forgot that "The life is more than meat."

There came a day when the children left their home in the heart of the forest. A day's journey brought them to a part of the country that had been much longer the home of colonists.

Little could the children understand the grief of parents in parting with the kind friends who had made their first home a happy one. They brought with them memories which were never forgotten.

The sun of a warm June day scorched the faces of the little ones. The next morning showed a new scene. Near their home the long rich grass grew as high as the tallest of them, and kept the little ones on the narrow path for the house had been vacant for some time.

Then for the first time they saw the sea. It was a mile or perhaps more away, but the waves of the bay rippled and sparkled in the sunshine, while sailboats glided over the waters.

An Old Settlement

ALMOST as far as the eye could reach the fields of hay and grain stretched to the shore at one end and the woods at the other. The high road ran between. The frame houses looked very large and the barns were big. In the pastures were many cattle, horses and sheep. The stumps were at the end of the pasture. Around some of the houses were fruit trees. Here and there was a hedge of fir trees, and the children soon learned how sweet were the young shoots.

Few trees had been left to shelter the animals from rain in Autumn or sun in Summer, for the wood was looked on as an enemy.

By the grassy side of the road the geese and the ganders with their flock of yellow goslings fed on Summer days, and from every farmyard came the challenge of the cock and the clucking of the hens.

As the barefooted children came to the schoolhouse on the hill, the little girls had print pinafores over their drugget frocks. The small boys dabbled their feet in the cool water of the brook on their way.

The Reason Why

WHY had there been so much more change here than in the old home? There were many reasons. Long ago, French Acadians had cleared many of these fields. Then an English officer had received a large grant of land, and he and his brothers and cousins, instead of renting it out as many others had done, worked on it themselves and lived there. Another large farm formed part of the grant given to the United Empire Loyalists, and its owner had prospered.

But the finest of all the farms belonged to an Englishman who had come to Canada with but a shilling in his pocket. He knew his business, hired out, married a wife of his own class. By industry and thrift they had prospered, and now their big family of boys and girls were helping.

There was, too, at least to childish eyes, a very beautiful house where a handsome old gentleman and his six daughters lived with their little brother. Rumor said that two older sons had gone to a far-away place called Mexico.

Away on the other side of the schoolhouse were other homes. Soon the children and their parents went to live in a house close to the English farmers and learned that they, as well as their Scottish neighbors, could be very kind.

Childish Pleasures

HOW did the little girls and boys of whom the house was growing full play? Well, father's head was full of all sorts of nursery rhymes. As the little ones sat on his knees and the older ones on the floor, he sang of Jack and Jill, the Frog Who Would a-Wooing Go and many another nonsense jingle. The littlest one would ride on his knee, and very often he would be a great big bear and drive the older ones screaming and laughing away.

Few were the toys of those days, but the home-made top would spin as long as your handsome one. Mother was never too busy to make or to dress a doll, and a ball in Summer or a sleigh in Winter gave lots of fun. Then there was the swing in the barn, far better than any of the contraptions city children have nowadays. Timid children could not enjoy sliding down the hill on the ice to the brook, but what fun the others had.

Snowball fights, when there was no danger of breaking windows, gave boys exercise as well as fun, especially when the teacher made one of the gang.

When the Spring came, kingcups grew in the brook and tiny white scented violets on the hills. In the shelter of the fences you could gather the lovely blue violets. At the edge of the snowbanks under the trees were ground spruce and many kinds of vines and mosses.

Then there was the delight of reading. What if there were no beautiful copies of Hans Andersen, Stevenson, Andrew Laing, Walter de la Mare and a dozen other authors children may choose from in these days? A child's book hunger is easy to satisfy, and many a volume now thought only suitable for grown-ups was read by children of eight or nine or ten long ago.

Wild Strawberry Picking

FEW city children know the delight of wild strawberry picking. To go out on a Summer morning when the sun was bright and low and the grass was still sparkling with dew in little parties of three or four was in itself a delight. The air was sweet with the smell of clover, white and red. From bush and fence came the song of robin and song-sparrow and the chirp of the bluebird. There were fields to cross and fences to climb before, near the edge of the wood, you came to the field where the little ripe berries hid among the tufts of rich grass. Then began the search for beds, and soon each was busy trying to fill a cup. The bowl or basket or can was laid in the shade of bush or stump, and very proud was the little girl who was first ready to empty her dish. The little boy who put more berries into his mouth than his cup was readily forgiven when his sharp eyes discovered among the grass the grey-bird's nest with its four speckled eggs not much larger than the biggest strawberry. A peep, and all stole away to let the wee mother come back.

As the sun rose higher, the children searched and gathered till, before it had grown too hot, the last cup was emptied and the big dish was filled with the fragrant fruit. What a treat for father and mother and all!

A Trip to the Shore

PERHAPS the greatest of all pleasures was a trip to the shore of the great bay, about a mile away. The children could not go alone. The red banks were high, and little ones might fall over or a venturesome lad bury himself in the soft clay that overlaid the bright red sandstone. So a party of grown-ups took a rare holiday with their little folk on a day when the tide was low.

There must have been a road to the shore, but the way best remembered led through a field of sweet grass and past a grove where there were Indian camps of birch bark. Half afraid, the children watched the squaws outside weaving baskets of brightly colored splints and the men making axe-handles, or the tubs, big and little, with their dangerous looking knives. Meanwhile papooses of all sizes sat and stared at the visitors. They had come from Indian Island, away out in the bay. Nearby a broad strip of smooth sand, and beyond the water scarcely covering the beds of green seaweed growing there. Soon the little girls were busy with the lovely green libands, making them into wheels and other shapes.

Fathers and big boys had made a fire and filled an iron pot with water and went out among the seaweed to catch lobsters. Those who were afraid of the big, sharp-toothed claws used a kind of hook, but others, more skillful, caught them by hand. We will leave them and see what the children are doing.

The babies are happy in the warm sand, finding rounded pebbles and shells. A big girl has taken little sisters to a place where a cliff runs out into the shallow water, and there, out of sight of the rest of the party, they bathe and paddle in the sunlit water. Some distance away the boys are taking a swimming lesson, and their merry shouts echo along the shore.

Now the tide is coming in. The big basket is full of lobsters. The water in the great pot is boiling, and in go the lobsters to be cooked till their shells are a bright red. Children and grown-ups gather round the fire. The shellfish are taken out of the pot and, having cooled a little, are eaten. No salad was ever more delicious.

A cool wind blows in from the sea. The setting sun lights up the masts of the fishing fleet far away. The waves against the big sand bar make an eerie sound. It is time to go home.

A farmer with his horse and cart has been gathering the dry seaweed that in long, grey wreaths lines the shore. He calls the tired little ones and, perched on top of the load, they and one of the mothers ride home. The others walk through the fields as the stars come out overhead.

These were some of the pleasures of boys and girls at the Canadian seaside before picture shows, radios or airplanes were dreamed of, when Santa Claus was never seen, and his simple gifts brought wonder as well as delight.

The Warrior on the Seas

His camp is on the foam.
And he returns from victory
Bringing his captives home.

Home he brings his captives,
Beauteous to behold,
Some in silver armor,
Some in mail of gold.

A brief truce, and tomorrow
Again the chanceful field!
Where the burnished legions all night long
Have glimmered, and flashed, and wheeled.

Suburb and Country

Preparing Geraniums and Fuchsias for Winter Storage

IT is now high time that geraniums and fuchsias were removed from the beds and borders in which they have flowered during the Summer months, and placed in a safe position for the Winter. Neither will stand more than a degree or so of frost, and, once they have become damaged through exposure, it is extremely difficult to Winter them satisfactorily.

The plants should be lifted from the open ground with a small border fork, and the soil shaken from the roots. The next step is to cut back the top growth. This is not wanted now, unless it is intended to continue flowering the plants in the greenhouse. Few amateurs have the space at disposal to do this, and prefer to let the plants go practically to rest, storing them as closely together as possible. With this end in view, each branch may be cut back to a length of two inches or three inches only. These short stems will break into growth freely in the Spring, and provide plenty of cuttings, or, alternatively, the young shoots can be thinned out and the old plants grown on to form shapely specimens. In some cases—where strong—they will yield welcome blossoms.

Cutting back can be done with a knife or a pair of secateurs, but the latter are really most convenient, providing they are sharp enough to cut without bruising. Each cut should be made just above the point at which a leaf stalk joins the main stem. The reason for this is that a dormant growth bud is situated in the axle of each leaf stalk, and a new shoot will start from this later on. If the cut is made midway between two of these dormant buds, a short length of stem will be left with no leaf or shoot to draw sap through it; consequently it will gradually shrivel and die, and the decay may spread a long way before it is arrested.

Shorten the Roots

WHEN the shoots have been trimmed off, the plant should be turned round, and long roots cut back in a similar manner. In their Summer quarters both fuchsias and geraniums make fairly extensive root systems, but, if the stem and leaf growths are reduced, they will have no need for so much root growth. By reducing it, the plants can be accommodated in smaller pots. This is not only an economy of space, but, incidentally, makes watering easier. Few things are more difficult than to keep the soil in a large pot in good, healthy condition throughout the Winter, when the plant growing in it is practically dormant.

The next step is to pot the plants. For this purpose, the smallest pots should be used which will comfortably accommodate the roots. Two or three pieces of broken crock should be placed in the bottom of each for drainage, and this covered with a scattering of smaller crocks, gravel or coarse rubble. A free outlet for surplus water is most important, and will make a great difference to the ease with which the plants may be wintered. For the same reason the soil used for potting should be porous.

Some good potting loam, mixed with about one-third its bulk of sand; and a smaller quantity of good moist peat will serve very well.

Indoor Treatment

IF no greenhouse is available, the plants may be wintered quite safely in a sunny window indoors, though it is necessary to warn against frost. On a cold night it is quite possible for the temperature near the window in a dwelling room to fall well below freezing point. For this reason, it is necessary to remove the plants from the window at night and place them at the back of the room. Even during the day it is not advisable to return to the window if it is freezing very hard out of doors.

It is possible to Winter geraniums and fuchsias in an unheated frame, providing the weather is not too severe and proper precautions are taken against frost. Dried leaves, bracken or straw should be heaped around the sides of the frame as thickly as possible, and sufficient sacks or mats kept at hand to cover the glass three or four layers deep during cold snaps.

Views of Illustration Stations

Illustration Stations on Vancouver Island

By R. M. HALL,
(Supervisor of Illustration Stations)

ILLUSTRATION Stations form one division of the Dominion Experimental Farms. They are contact points, linking up the centrally located Experimental Farms with the problems of out-lying districts. To such places the results of the work on Experimental Farms can be taken and tried out under local environment. Conversely they prove of immense value in helping to plan investigational work at experimental centres. In all cases truth determined by the experimental farms has no value unless it is put to work.

There are seventeen Illustration Stations in British Columbia, three of which are located on Vancouver Island, namely, at Duncan, Alberni and Courtenay. All told there are two hundred and ten functioning in Canada; but it is our purpose, at this time, to deal with the three on Vancouver Island.

In planning any farm programme, a long-time view must necessarily be taken in order to develop the entire farm as one balanced unit. Farm management, then, together with approved cultural practices in the field, form a study, the results of which often, if not always, separate the poor from the good farmer. Not performing a cultural operation when it should be done is poor management. Untimely operations such as hoeing and cultivating hoed crops adversely affects the yield. These are points that do not require the services of an Illustration Station to bring out. It is, however, to the advantage of those in a district to have a centrally located unit whereby favorable or unfavorable practices are followed and comparative results noted to guide them in some particular problem on their own farm.

Illustration Stations are trial centres for various varieties of field crops. The varied soil and climatic conditions on Vancouver Island afford ample study along varietal lines, particularly with potatoes. We know that some varieties do better under dry conditions than others. Here again the individual farmer may be his own experimenter to excellent advantage. Speaking of potatoes brings to mind the fertilizer trials carried out every year on potatoes at each of the three stations under discussion.

When to Apply Fertilizers

A PROJECT was started in 1931 for the purpose of determining the most opportune time of applying commercial fertilizers to the hoed crop. A 3-10-8 mixture is used, applied at the rate of 1,000 pounds per acre. In addition all plots are manured at sixteen tons of stable manure per acre, check areas are also reserved. Fertilizer is applied broadcast before planting time. Applying in the drill at time of planting is also compared with broadcasting on the surface at the time of planting. Plots are replicated twice.

In 1933 applying fertilizer two months before planting the potatoes gave the highest return of marketable potatoes on all three stations. This was particularly true at Alberni, where an extremely dry Summer followed very heavy Spring rains. By broadcasting early in March, soluble nutrients are brought into available form for plant use, rendering considerably increased yields which amounted to 4.43 tons per acre over the check plot. Thus we see a decided advantage in broadcasting commercial fertilier early, especially where Summer droughts prevail.

Livestock Improvement

ALL operators with dairy herds now keep milk records. This is an important factor in successful dairying and is the first step in intelligent herd management. Purebred sires of approved breeding, head all herds on the Illustration Stations. Good livestock management must necessarily go hand in hand with the development of the forage crop end of the business. The minimum quantity of mill feeds should be purchased if care and good judgment are exercised in bringing all departments into balanced production. With the increased production of forage crops, marketing of same should be increasingly effected through the milk pail route or as choice beef.

Swine herds of Yorkshires or Berkshires predominate. Illustration Stations are centres from which may be obtained breeding stock of excellent quality and type.

Many Other Projects

SPACE is too limited to dwell in detail at this time on the full programme under way at each station. Crop rotation work that takes in the entire operator's farm is now advocated, and, in some instances already planned for. Weed control by cultural methods and chemical sprays are studied. Each operator makes a weekly return of work done on the plots. Manual and horse labor hours are accounted for, yields are recorded, and, finally, at the close of each cropping season, a tabulated cost of production report is made showing the debit or credit against each crop grown.

Home Improvements

ATTRACTIVE home surroundings are an asset to any community. They denote pride in one's work. Nothing so detracts from a farm's appearance so much as machinery scattered about the premises, unused and dilapidated buildings marring the landscape, and broken down fences badly in need of repair. It is the policy then of the Division to encourage a more fitting attention to home beautification as a means of deriving a greater measure of enjoyment from life. Trees and shrubs are supplied, perennials set out, and each year a collection of vegetables and flower seeds is sent out as a start towards achieving this end

Perennial borders, flower beds, and a small but well-kept lawn will go a long way towards reflecting the aspirations and personality of those who are willing to make the effort through the medium of beautifying the home grounds.

Varietal Resistance of Plants to Disease Is Subject of Research

By W. JONES

THE testing of different varieties of plants with regard to their degree of resistance to different diseases is part of the routine work of the Plant Pathology Laboratory, Saanichton.

This is being done under laboratory and greenhouse conditions in the laboratory gardens and in the field whenever possible.

Thirteen different varieties of potatoes have been tested in this manner for their degree of resistance to the well-known rhizoctonia disease. Potato tubers were planted in soil thoroughly inoculated with the causal organism. When the sprouts were well developed an estimate of the severity of the disease on them was obtained. It was found that all the plants became infected under such conditions, and there was no consistent evidence that any one variety was superior to the others. High moisture content of the soil during the early growth period is considered to be one of the most important factors favoring the development of this disease.

The susceptibility of thirteen different varieties of potato tubers to the leak disease was also determined, but none of them showed any significant difference under laboratory conditions. The leak disease is often serious in storage and also immediately after planting in Spring. The chief factor favoring the development of this disease is high temperature. It will rarely develop below 40 degrees Fahrenheit.

Tests With Mangels

FOUR different varieties of mangel roots have also been tested with regard to their resistance to storage rot. In this case the roots were inoculated with the causal organism and comparative observations on the degree of infection made. These varieties were also kept under actual storage conditions and the number of diseased roots checked. All were susceptible to infection, but the Long Red variety was the most resistant under the conditions of testing.

The downy mildew of the hop has caused serious losses to British Columbia growers. The Fuggles variety, however, has been found to be practically resistant. Goldings, another variety, has also proved more resistant than the Clusters variety, which is extensively grown. Disease resistance is, however, relative, depending considerably on existing environmental conditions. Under favorable conditions for disease development, a resistant variety may become affected.

Wilt disease of asters is a serious disease, and varieties claimed to be resistant in other parts of the continent are being tested. So far no variety or strain has shown any consistent difference in resistance.

Besides laboratory and greenhouse work, a constant check is kept by members of the laboratory staff on plants showing signs of disease resistance under field conditions. Counts on the percentage of plants infected and the degree of infection is recorded and kept from year to year. In this manner a comparative analysis of disease resistance over a period of years under varying conditions can be arrived at.

Group of Five Renowned Jerseys Exhibited at Royal Winter Fair

AMONG the many famous Jersey cattle seen at the Royal Winter Fair this year in Toronto were five high-producing Jersey cows that average 1,052 pounds of fat, or 1,316 pounds of butter. This outstanding group of cattle, the first of its kind ever assembled in Canada, was sponsored by the Canadian Jersey Cattle Club.

The queen of this group was Brampton Basilua, world's record dairy cow over all breeds for fat production on three times a day milking. She is again on test, and is making a strong bid to beat her former record of 1,313 pounds of fat and 19,013 pounds of milk, an almost unbelievable performance.

It seems almost beyond the scope of reality that this little cow—she only weighs 950 pounds—has produced 188 per cent more butter in 365 days than her own weight, and twenty times her own weight in milk. Basilua is owned by B. H. Bull & Son, Brampton.

Two Worthy Matrons

FROM the well-known Avondale herd of Hon. A. C. Hardy, Brockville, Ontario, came two worthy matrons in Beatrice of Newington and Rosebay's Jolly Rose. Beatrice, along with Brampton Basilua, are the only two living cows in Canada that have been guests of honor at a banquet. Beatrice holds the third highest Jersey butter fat record for Canada with 1,037 pounds of fat and 15,917 pounds of milk, with an average test of 6.52 per cent. Rosebay's Jolly Rose has not only been in the public eye as a producer, but has many show-ring prizes and championships to her credit. Her production certificate shows 16,677 pounds of milk and 1,004 pounds of fat, and stands fourth in the Jersey Hall of Famous Performers.

Great Milk Record

ANOTHER famous cow from the Brampton herd is Maple's Majesty's Beauty. She has 974 pounds of fat from 20,380 pounds of milk. Her milk record stands second in Canada and is the highest Jersey milk record made in North America since 1928. Standard's Comtesse, also from Brampton, has 933 pounds of fat from 13,172 pounds of milk, with a test of 7.08 per cent, and is one of Canada's high-testing cows.

This Jersey assembly represented much that appeals to the farmers of Canada, owing to the fact that milk is sold to cheese and butter factories, as well as to milk distributors on a butterfat basis. This fact, together with the economic producing ability of the Jersey, no doubt accounts in no small way for the fact that at the Royal Winter Fair this year the Jersey was the only dairy breed that has increased its numbers over 1933.

Late Fall Planting and Transplanting Often Is to Be Preferred

By DEAN HALLIDAY

IN many parts of the country Fall planting and transplanting is to be preferred to Spring on several counts, and for a great number of plants.

The important factor to be considered for Fall planting is the condition of the soil—its temperature, its moisture and the ease with which it can be worked.

No plants should be set out in cold soil. This is especially true of evergreens. Many Spring planting failures are caused by setting out plants before the frost is out of the ground. As a result the plants become dormant.

Planting can be done successfully in November and even December, provided frost has not been deep or severe enough to reduce the soil heat too severely. Perennials can be separated and transplanted any time in the Fall if there is enough warmth left to give their roots some start before severe weather.

The soil must contain moisture if the plants are to weather through. This fact makes the Fall planting season an ideal one, for after the rains of this season the ground usually is full of moisture. This gives the plants a resistance to cold weather. Artificial watering is essential if the earth seems to lack the necessary moisture at the planting time.

Yorkshires Proved to Be Most Prolific Breed of Swine in Britain

The three chief bacon breeds raised in Canada are the Yorkshire, Berkshire and Tamworth, and each of these breeds has its following of enthusiasts.

When a producer is deciding which of these breeds to use for his foundation stock there are many points to be taken into consideration; and not the least of these points is the number of pigs that a sow will farrow and rear.

With this in mind the results of a four-year experiment undertaken by the National Pig Breeders' Association of Great Britain will be of considerable interest to pig producers.

For the purpose of this experiment members of the association were requested to furnish statistics as to the number of pigs farrowed by each sow and the number of pigs reared.

Result of Survey

Breed—	1930
Yorkshire	10.24	7.73
Berkshire	8.00	6.25
Tamworth	8.05	6.21
	1931
Yorkshire	10.57	7.96
Berkshire	8.31	6.73
Tamworth	7.55	5.70
	1932
Yorkshire	10.32	7.86
Berkshire	8.46	6.87
Tamworth	8.28	6.19
	1933
Yorkshire	10.78	8.12
Berkshire	7.82	6.22
Tamworth	7.63	5.80
	1934
Yorkshire	10.79	8.05
Berkshire	7.67	6.24
Tamworth	7.82	6.36

The great value of these figures is the fact that they represent the experience of actual producers and cover thousands of litters.

They conclusively show that the Yorkshire sow produces the largest number of pigs per litter with the Berkshire and Tamworth in second place with about the same average number farrowed and reared per litter over the four-year period

The Garden Week by Week

By NORMAN W. F. RANT, F.R.H.S.

IT is not until Fall gives way to Winter that the full beauty of many shrubs, evergreens and trees becomes manifest. This is by no means a matter of comparative values or of contrast. In the absence of flowers of all kinds and with the deciduous trees and shrubs devoid of leaves, evergreens, with the field to themselves, will meet with a fuller appreciation than they enjoy at other seasons of the year. What I wish particularly to refer to in these notes is the number of varieties possessing those peculiar and intrinsic merits which are never seen to such advantage as in the Winter.

Take, for instance, the dwarf Scotch pine, Pinus Sylventris Aurea, in all respects, except in color, a miniature of the type. This little tree has been a dingy yellowish green all Summer, but in the late Fall it begins to change the color of its leaves, withdrawing the green and intensifying the yellow, so that by December it takes on the look of polished brass.

Winter Coloring

TO some extent the same change takes place in other golden-leaved conifers. The slow-growing Lawson cypress takes on an unusual brilliance in Winter, but even more marked is the same change in the more beautiful Cypress Macrocarpa.

Aurea, the feathery foliage of which is borne on chestnut-red stems, has the appearance of having been gilded from base to tip. Of the golden junipers and many other conifers, much more might be said.

Then we have those two beautiful forms of Calluna Aurea and Cuprea. These are often classed as heaths and are of little beauty in Summer, for as flowering varieties they are poor; but the early Winter brings to one a golden yellow and to the other a warm coppery tint, both of which are most effective, particularly when the leaves are wet.

Winter Blues

AS it is with the gold, the yellow and the copper, so it is with the blues. We have the somewhat cold blue of Cedrus Atlantica Glauca and some of the pines and spruces and cypresses. Some of the dwarf or slow-growing Thuyas change their pale green of Summer almost to the bloom of the ripe plum. The common juniper changes its Summer bluish-green to a more intensely blue shade at the same time as the Scotch pine is putting on its Winter color, and the dwarf prostrate form gets even more blue than the type.

Fine Berries

THE evergreen cotoneasters seem to get brighter and more metallic in the Winter, and with their berries make a wonderful splash. The deciduous varieties are beautiful also by reason of their berries, so that one may forgive the absence of foliage. Some plants get whiter in Winter; for instance, Trucrium Fruticlans, whose leaves and branches both take on a very white appearance.

In shrubs other than conifers, with green leaves (and a fresh and kindly green is very cheering in Winter), it always seems to the writer that those plants that are getting ready for their flowering period are most attractive. These include various kinds of ericas, notably the tree heather, Erica Codonodes and Erica Vieitchii, of which the foliage is the most restful shade of moss green that could be desired. They are always beautiful, but never more so than when the hundreds of little buds are showing in preparation for the first hint of Spring. Erica Arborea and Erica Alpina are very nearly like the above, but their leaves are hardly as fine. Erica Australis has a bluer-green color, and is very striking when the flower buds are beginning to show.

Snow Danger

THE only Winter trouble with this class of heaths comes when there is a heavy fall of snow, which seems to cling to them more than to most plants and bends them down, often breaking them. Erica Stricta, which, unlike the above, only finishes flowering in the late Fall, is very striking in the Winter garden with its curiously fuzzy foliage, which makes such an attractive setting for the rusty red of the faded flowers, clustered at the tips of the rigid upright growths. A much more lively green is that of Erica Carnea, which comes into flower early in January. In fact, it is coming into bloom at the present writing.

There is also something to be said for Erica Scoparia in a Winter garden, not so much for their leaves, which are often conspicuous by their absence, but on account of their flower buds, which are showing color even now.

Laurustinus, a very popular shrub in Victoria, is a splendid thing for Winter. Its leaves are attractive, and it is always in bloom by Christmas and keeps on until well on in the Spring.

The Laurel

THE English laurel, though very common, has a distinct place in the Winter garden and may be grown either free or trimmed. In any case its glossy leaves have a homelike, if somewhat sombre, appearance.

Then there are a host of other evergreens which may be used with advantage either in masses or as specimen plants. The berberis; the box, a plant of a hundred uses from edging to topary; the veronicas, particularly buxifolia and traversi, and the holly oak are some examples.

Plant the paper white narcissus bulbs you wish to grow for Winter use in the home in pots of soil and put into a cool dark place, watering thoroughly at the time they are planted and once a month thereafter. They must be allowed to root in the dark not less than six to eight weeks, when they may be brought up to the light as they are desired, at intervals of a week or ten days.

They should be kept in a fairly cool light place until they have a growth of about two or three inches, at which time they may be brought into a warm room and forced rapidly. They will bloom in about three weeks from the time they are brought to the light. The bulbs may be saved and planted outdoors in the Spring.

Trumpet narcissus, like tulips, require a long period of rooting, not being forceable for Christmas except under special conditions. They bloom best from late February on.

Ten Commandments That Should Be Followed by the Dairyman

1. Keep the cow's flanks and udder free from dirt, for more dirt gets into milk from this source than from any other. Clipping the flanks and udder makes this easier and more certain.

2. Wipe the udder with a moist cloth, for this keeps loose hair, etc., from dropping into the pail.

3. Use a small top milk pail, for it is added protection against dirt and has proven its worth.

4. Use cuting flannel or a cloth pad strainer, for wire or cheesecloth strainers are a delusion.

5. Pails, cans and bottles should be rinsed with cold water, washed with hot water and a washing powder, sterilized with boiling water or steam or by use of a chemical sterilizer, and then drained and thoroughly dried out by heat or sun.

6. Rinse each utensil with clean water before using, for this will remove any dirt that may have entered since washing.

7. Milk with clean, dry hands, for wet hand milking is filthy and injurious.

8. Cool the milk to 60 degrees or below immediately after milking and keep cool, for this is one of the best methods for keeping bacteria from multiplying.

9. When delivering milk in hot weather, cover cans with a wet blanket to keep off the direct heat of the sun; the evaporation of the moisture helps to keep the milk cool.

10. Drive disease from the herd and keep the barn clean and whitewashed, for these things are not only bad in themselves, but also lead to a disregard of the previously given commandments.

Would you inherit the kingdom of larger demand for healthy and palatable dairy products, keep in mind the motto, "Clean and Cold," and verily you will enter into the joys of prosperous dairying. A clean herd, a clean barn, clean udders, clean hands, clean utensils immediate cooling and keeping cold are the strategy of the good milk general.

"Mass of Life" Opens B.B.C. Winter Season; Plan New Promenade

By Y. de B.

LONDON.—A notable feature of British musical life is the way in which several millions of people throughout the country are able to enjoy "good music." Nearly every big concert is broadcast over the "National" or the Regional," as well as series of programmes especially compiled for the radio audience.

Concerts broadcast from London (all of which are open to the public) may be classed under seven headings: (1) the weekly or Sunday orchestral concerts, including the regular programmes of the Royal Philharmonic, the B.B.C. Symphony and the London Symphony; (2) B.B.C. concerts of contemporary music—a series of eight given during the Winter season, and averaging one a month; (3) chamber music—six concerts in the Concert Hall at Broadcasting House; (4) the London Music Festival—eight concerts given in the Spring, at which this year Toscanini and Koussevitsky are to be two of the guest conductors; (5) two weeks of concerts early in the new year, resembling the popular Promenade series and to be known as the "Winter Promenades"; (6) the "Foundations of Music" series—a broadcast feature dealing with every aspect of music: The Autumn series, directed by Sir Richard Terry and entitled "From Plainsong to Purcell," is a much-enjoyed feature of opera. The B.B.C. has done much in the way of opera broadcasts by regular relays from The Old Vic. and Sadler's Wells during the Winter and from Covent Garden during the Summer. Studio broadcasts of opera, however, are difficult, not only from the point of view of expense, but of presentation. Last year Boris Godounow was presented with such success that three important opera productions from the studio are announced for this season, including Strauss' Salome (conducted by Albert Coates) and Shostakovitch's Macbeth.

NOT COMPETITOR

Just what part the radio has played in dispelling the old belief that the British are an unmusical people is difficult to say. Certainly it is proving instrumental in making them more musical. This applies more reasonably to the wireless audience in the provinces, for whom indeed these concerts are broadcast. With London's population of more than 9,000,000 there is no fear that because a symphony programme is being broadcast the Queen's Hall will be empty. Thousands of households possess radios, yet only illness, a particularly black fog or the familiar "all seats sold" placard will keep the London concert-goer from being present in the flesh. Contrast this with conditions on the other side of the Atlantic, where "regular" symphony concerts are broadcast only when every seat has been sold and hundreds turned from the doors. Only then can such a broadcast be afforded, for it is feared that regular broadcasts would seriously affect the attendance. In London, attendance has no bearing on the matter. So that the music lover in the most isolated village in the kingdom—providing he has a "wireless set"—can say next morning, along with the actual attenders-in-the-flesh, "I heard the first performance of Vaughan Williams' Symphony in F minor. And he will have heard it at least twelve months before the New York musical world.

MASS OF LIFE

The Winter season of B.B.C. Symphony concerts at Queen's Hall began with a programme devoted to Delius' great "Mass of Life"—a fitting tribute to the great man's memory and the more impressive because the conductor was Sir Thomas Beecham, who knew Delius so intimately and is today the acknowledged interpreter of his works. It is a deeply impressive oratorio, full of typical Delius moods. The soloists were Roy Henderson, Stiles-Allen, Astra Desmond and Francis Russell, supported by the Royal Philharmonic Choir.

At the first of the Courtauld-Sargent series the conductor was Georg Szell, of Prague, and the soloist was Mary Jarred. The programme was composed of sixteenth and seventeenth century music and the composers represented were Mozart, Haydn, Arne, Giovanni, Merulo and Gabrieli. It was a restful enough evening after the number of "modern" programmes of late.

MYRA HESS BUSY

In a few weeks Myra Hess will be off to America, but meanwhile she is to fulfill at least twenty engagements on this side of the water. Last week she appeared as soloist with the Philharmonic Orchestra, playing the Beethoven Concerto No. 4, in G. With Myra Hess as soloist and Beecham conducting, the first concert of the Royal Philharmonic Society's 123rd season was bound to be a success. The Queen's Hall was full and a "first performance" was Sibelius' incidental music to "The Tempest." It cannot be termed "great," but it makes pleasant hearing.

PROMETHEUS

A few nights later Myra Hess appeared with the B.B.C. Symphony at their second concert. She played the piano part of Scriabin's "Prometheus" ("The Poem of Fire") for piano, orchestra, organ and chorus. This work had its first performance in Moscow in 1911, when it had a very mixed reception. "The union of color and light with music" is the novel idea behind "Prometheus," with colored lights thrown on a screen by means of a keyboard instrument with a continuous part. These light effects, however, have only been attempted once—at the New York performance in 1915. Swift changes of mood and atmosphere are noticeable throughout, while the huge score itself calls for further comment. In parts, there are forty-five staves to a page, besides the part for light. There are eight horns, five trumpets, three trombones and tuba; big and little bells in the percussion, as well as two harps, celesta, organ and four-part choir and solo pianoforte—a formidable work, to which Myra Hess proved equal.

"THE PLANETS"

The second highlight of the evening was the performance—a fitting memorial to the memory of the composer — of Holst's orchestral suite, "The Planets." Again, an exceptionally large orchestra is used, including six horns, four trumpets and tenor tuba, bass oboe and bass flute. Six kettledrums are used (requiring two kettledrummers), two harps, celesta, xylophone, organ and a choir of women's voices.

The work takes more than an hour to perform, but as the powerful music unfolds we forget time. Symbolic of the influences of destiny, the seven planets as Holst saw them meant neither mere astronomy nor fanciful mythology. "Mars, the Bringer of War," opens the suite, full of frenzy and ruthlessness, stupendously powerful. As the climax is reached, with a blast on the organ and fanfare from the tenor tuba, despair and fury are there, struggling. It ends, and in its wake comes "Venus, the Bringer of Peace." Soft horns, flute and solo violin—these all produce a wonderful effect on calm after the storm. During the next forty minutes there pass in quick succession, "Mercury, the Winged Messenger"; "Jupiter, the Bringer of Jollity"; "Saturn, the Bringer of Old Age"; "Uranus, the Magician," and finally, "Neptune, the Mystic."

It was Adrian Boult who conducted the first performance of this magnificent work in 1918, just before Holst left for Salonika, so that it was particularly appropriate, one thought, that he should conduct this memorial performance of the work sixteen years later.

ZARATHUSTRA SPEAKS

The third and final work on this outstanding programme of the B.B.C. Symphony was Strauss' symphonic poem, "Also Sprach Zarathustra," based—like Delius' "Mass of Life" and one of the movements in "Mahler's "Third Symphony"—on Nietzche's great work. It is a homage to the genius of Nietzche, in which Strauss has admittedly "meant to convey musically an idea of the evolution of the human race from its origin, through the various phases of development, religious as well as scientific, up to Nietzche's idea of the superman." It is not, it may be pointed out, an attempt "to portray Nietzche's great work musically." For this we go to Delius, to his "Mass of Life," performed last week, in which the music was so strongly colored by the Nietzche philosophy.

Two Negoes were boasting about the merits of their respective motor cars, both worn, shabby, old wrecks. One of them said: "Deys jus' one reason why Ah cain't run dis cah o' mine 100 miles a houah."

"An' what's dat reason?" asked the other.

Winning Pulitzer Prize Is Miracle To School Teacher

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

THE winning of the Pulitzer prize for her very first novel, "Lamb in His Bosom," was a miracle, declares the author, Mrs. Caroline Miller from 'way down in Georgia.

"School teachers don't make much money, ever, ever," declares Mrs. Miller, whose husband is a superintendent of schools in the small home town. "And I was in a fix and began to think of pioneer women who had about twenty children, and they lived and were contented, which we modern women aren't—we're too busy or lazy, or something." And so thinking Mrs. Miller wrote her book chapter by chapter, in long hand, submitting each chapter to her somewhat reluctant husband to read.

The writing "solved a personal problem for me and made me feel how lucky I was to live in these days," she states. When the book was finished she had no idea how to market it, so she wrote to Mrs. Peterkin (author of "Scarlet Sister Mary") and asked her how to go about it. And Mrs. Peterkin, an entire stranger, wrote her a pleasant note and gave her the name of an agent in New York.

The book was accepted for publication and then came the "miracle," the winning of the prize.

"Folk say I don't know what suffering and want are," she says, "but I do, and whenever I think of people who may be about to commit suicide, I wish I could get at them and tell them to hold on until tomorrow or the next day, because a miracle may happen. It did to me."

Mrs. Miller talks of the characters in her books as if they were living people. She cried when Fairby, Lias' little illegitimate child, was burned to death. "She would have grown up to be beautiful," she said. "You remember I spoke of her hair." And she cried when Lias died, because she liked him in spite of the fact that "he was a devil." And the incident of Cean killing the panther in her home as it was about to spring on her newborn son really happened back in pioneer days, only she killed him with a chair, says Mrs. Miller, "but folk would never have believed that, so I made it a shotgun."

MRS. CAROLINE MILLER

Besides the husband there are three children in the Miller home, a boy of seven and twin sons that their mother says "really are just darling." She gets homesick to see them when she is away, for she is, according to herself, a "very good mother who loves her children."

AUTOBIOGRAPHY AND BIOGRAPHY

By CHARLES ESTCOURT, Jr.

NEW YORK (NANA).—"Autobiography," by John Cowper Powys (Simon & Schuster), is a philosophic, sensuous, atavistic, analytical book written in that kind of style by and about that kind of person. We hope all those adjectives will not frighten you from reading it, for it is, in addition, engrossing, as must be the confession of any man who slits open the veins of his soul and invites you to look within and see the person who makes the personality. He burrows deep not only into himself, but into the things about him. Mr. Powys is a great artist. He writes like one and he seems to have lived like one.

A biography which is a world and perhaps a nebula away from Mr. Powys is "Father Goose," by Gene Fowler (Coviel, Friede). Mr. Fowler is an explosive writer, spattering great bursts of brilliance as he streaks by his subject. This time his subject is Mack Sennett, the man to whom movie fans are indebted for the flung custard pie, for Keystone cops, for bathing beauties and for other foundation stones of Hollywood.

Hans Fallada makes a great forward stride in "The World Outside" (Simon & Schuster), and turns a stern back on gush. He tells the story of a petty criminal whose spirit has been debauched by five years of prison life, which rob him of the ability to think for himself and stand on his own two trembling feet. This Willi Kufalt is not exclusively a criminal, but he is any bookkeeper, any nine-to-five clerk, any little man, what now? But Herr Fallada's researches into the hearts of the obscure no longer are accompanied by tongue-clucking. He writes now with a certain ruggedness which we hope his public will appreciate.

Mystery of the week: "The Visiting Villain," by Carolyn Wells (Lippincott), in which Fleming Stone sets his wit and wits to unraveling the baffling murder of a millionaire who left four wills and did other things which earn murder.

The following story illustrates the wit of Whistler. He was generally at war with artists of Bouguereau School, whose over-finished and commonplace work he could not abide. One day, while walking in Piccadilly, he met Sir Frederick Leighton, who has been called the English Bouguereau. The two men sauntered along together, talking art. "But, my dear Whistler," said Leighton, "you leave your work so rough and sketchy! Why do you never finish?" Whistler screwed his glass into his eye and gave a fiendish laugh. "My dear Leighton," he said, "why do you ever begin!"

MARY NEWCOMBE NOT SPARKLING

LONDON (NANA).—Mary Newcombe's eagerly awaited Beatrice in the Old Vic. production of "Much Ado About Nothing," though attractive and full of changing moods, is quiet and does not sparkle as much as is that lady's usual wont.

The Benedick of Maurice Evans, a young actor who is rapidly making a name for himself at the Vic., is far more robust, and, indeed, the best thing in a production which has many charming touches, but is a little too arty-and-crafty at times.

Historical Films Are Continuing To Be Produced

By JOAN LITTLEFIELD
(Copyright, 1934, by The North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

LONDON.—J. B. Priestley, essayist, novelist and playwright, is now definitely turning to films. He wrote a story with a Lancashire setting for Gracie Fields' last picture, "Sing As We Go"; he is to do the scenario for George Arliss' next British picture; and he has now gone to Arizona and other Western states to get local color for Gracie's next film, to be directed by Basil Dean at Ealing next January.

Mr. Dean is anxious to make Gracie acceptable to American cinemagoers, who at present are inclined to regard her style of humor as "foreign." The new picture will have a pronounced American flavor and Gracie herself may go to the States "on location" for the outdoor shots of the picture.

Mr. Priestley, talking to an eminent London film critic before leaving for America, said:

"I am just as anxious to command the technique of the film as I am to master the technique of the novel or the play. The idea is to have the technique of all three at my fingers' ends so that when I get an idea for a story, I can choose the appropriate form in which to express it. It's a pretty ambitious project, I know, but I think I can do it."

Talking of story material, Mr. Priestley said that producers both here and in Hollywood had made the mistake of not looking in the right period for their stories.

"If they must get out of modern times," he said, "let them get their scenario departments to examine the novels of 1890 to just before the war and they will find what they want there. The novels of that period have a great sense of narrative construction, and there are surely great film possibilities in the works of Stanley Weyman, Seton Merriman and Charles Reade. There is a pretty close connection between the novel form and the film, much closer than between the film and the theatre. But I think that one of the mistakes producers make over here is in not having more original stories written for the screen."

Mr. Priestley also thinks that Britain should make some real slapstick shorts.

ARLISS PREMIERE

George Arliss' first British picture, "The Iron Duke," is to have its world premiere at a charity performance at the Tivoli Theatre, London, November 30. The Prince of Wales will be present.

Mr. Arliss says that all his costumes have been copied stitch for stitch from some recognized portrait of Wellington or from other accurate sources.

"When I came to London," he said, "one of the first people I called upon was my old friend, Morris Angel, who used to look after my costumes forty years ago, when I first appeared on the London stage. He and Herbert Norris, the well-known costume expert, ransacked the old Guildhall and the United Services Institute for information about Wellington's sartorial habits.

"One of the costumes I wear is taken from the famous portrait of the Duke by Sir Thomas Lawrence, dated 1814, which shows him in field marshal's full dress uniform, bearing the sword of state as he appeared in the procession to the city to return thanks for peace. The sword, which is still in existence, has been copied by a master craftsman and is an excellent piece of work. Wellington is wearing all his decorations, too, including the star of the Order of the Garter on its blue ribband.

"There is an amusing tale about the Grand Old Man and his battle array. In active service on the field he used to wear a blue cloak lined with white when fighting was not expected, but should there be any fighting, or even preparation for a battle, the Duke would retire to his quarters, and, with his delightful sense of the fitness of things, would throw a short grey cloak over it that he might be easily recognized from afar. Details of this cloak came from Apsley House in Piccadilly, which was presented to the Duke by a grateful nation."

DRAKE FILM

For eight years the British film industry has been toying with the idea of making a film of Drake and his game of bowls. Herbert Wilcox has a script which would almost certainly have been used if he could have had the services of Ronald Coleman for the title role. Now Walter Mycroft, of British International Pictures, has decided to produce a Drake film in which Matheson Lang will have the part of the great Elizabethan.

The same company is to star Lilian Harvey in "Invitation to the Dance," a piece about the composer Weber, which is also to be heard on the air shortly in a broadcast version.

Producer of Greatest Stage Shows Learned Much of Art in Canada

Leon Leonidoff Served in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver

By L. S. R. SHAPIRO
(Central Press Canadian Writer)

NEW YORK. — Outside of a cemetery on a windy night there is nothing more eerie than an empty theatre. Even the world's largest and most luxurious theatre—the Music Hall in Radio City—seemed like a huge tomb on my morning visit. The cave-like structure was in semi-darkness, the rows of glistening seats stretching almost as far back as the eye could see seemed like so many tombstones. Only one man sat in the entire theatre of 6,500 seats. He was a small man wearing a leather jacket and a crumpled pair of grey trousers. He sat in front of a board which stretched over the two seats in front of him. On the board was a microphone and several push-buttons.

The man spoke into the microphone.

"Overture." And suddenly the theatre came to life for its audience of one. Out of the depths in front of the stage a platform swung into view and on it were seventy-five musicians. A director tapped his baton. The huge curtains parted. Thirty-two girls went into a Tiller routine. They faded from view on a revolving platform. A glee club was singing. The stage was brilliantly lighted. A ballet; then a dancer; then a breath-taking scenic effect; than a singer—and all the time the little man at the microphone was barking out orders.

"I don't like that lighting; try number twenty - nine — no, try twenty-eight . . . The tenor in the glee club is standing too close to the microphone . . . Let me show you how to act in that scene. . . . Try that undersea ballet again. It's not right . . ."

TORONTO MAN RESPONSIBLE

And so every Thursday morning a new stage spectacle that amazes tourist and native alike takes definite form. How so massive and intricate a production can be conceived, rehearsed and polished at the rate of one a week is one of the mysteries of Broadway. Only one man holds the secret to this phenomenon. He is the little man who sat alone in the huge theatre.

His name is Leon Leonidoff and he was cut out to be a doctor. It was while he was a medical student at the University of Geneva that h became interested in the theatre. He staged several shows while at the university and at the same time appeared in and directed many plays adapted from the Russian. He then organized a group of Russian students who were interested in the theatre. This was the "Izba" organization which toured the world after the war. When the company came to America Leonidoff's versatile talents came to the notice of S. L. Rothafel, who later became better known as "Roxy." Rothafel was director of the Capitol Theatre on Broadway at the time and he engaged young Leonidoff as ballet master.

LEON LEONIDOFF

BECAME A CANADIAN

"It was after a season with Roxy at the Capitol," Leonidoff related to your correspondent, "that I went to fill an engagement in Montreal. That was in 1921 and I was associated with Jack Arthur at the Allen Theatre in Montreal. I think it's called the Palace now. We staged the shows there and then I was sent to the Capitol Theatre in Vancouver. I was finally sent East again, and this time I started a long and very valuable association with Toronto. I staged shows at the Hippodrome Theatre. I ran a dancing school, I put on two Junior League shows and also fashion shows for the Robert Simpson Co.

"By 1926 I had become a Canadian to all intents and purposes. I had made many friends in Montreal and Toronto and I gained some very valuable experience as well as friendships. It was at that time that the Roxy Theatre—then the largest in the world—opened and I came back to New York to take over the production activities at that theatre. I was there until the Music Hall opened, when I was engaged as director of production."

The immensity of Leonidoff's job at the Music Hall may be gauged by the number of people who work directly under his direction. There is a production staff of seventy persons, who carry out the staging, costuming and lighting of the shows after Leonidoff has explained the ideas he wants developed. There are eighty stage hands back of the footlights to handle the scenery and technical effects of the world's most modern stage. And there are about 225 performers on the stage in an average production. Thus 375 persons move about the Music Hall each week under Leonidoff's direct supervision.

Surprise and fantasy are his bywords. "The size of the theatre makes for a sight idea rather than a sound idea. Our stage show will amaze you, but it seldom touches you."

Season to Open Soon

OPERA stars have begun their parade into San Francisco for the opening of the Winter season at the palatial San Francisco Grand Opera House, which was formally opened last season. The season this year began November 14 with Smetana's "Bartered Bride" as the premiere offering in which the prima donna was Elisabeth Rethberg. The famed soprano is pictured as she arrived in San Francisco with Ezio Pinza, opera veteran. Shortly afterward came Lotte Lehmann, who will sing the stellar roles in "Tosca" and "Madame Butterfly." Rethberg will sing in "Otello" and "Tannhauser" as well as in the "Bartered Bride."

Canadian Secures Contract

By BOB McSTAY

Raymond Massey, noted Canadian star of the London stage, has been signed for leading roles in forthcoming British films, according to a communication received over the week-end by F. S. Revell, representative in Canada for British International Pictures. Brother of Hon. Vincent Massey, one-time Canadian ambassador to the United States, Raymond Massey won international laurels last season as an actor-manager with his production of Keith Winter's "The Shining Hour," which became a Broadway success after its try-out in Canada. The play is now enjoying a successful London season.

Possibly the best-known Canadian actor on the London stage today, Raymond Massey has now been signed for a role in B.I.P.'s "Abdul Hamid," according to the word from Elstree. The cast includes Fritz Kortner, star of "Chu Chin Chow," as well as two leading Hollywood players, Adrienne Ames and Nils Asther. The noted continental director, Carl Grune, is making the picture and will shoot the exterior scenes in Constantinople. Filmed on a large scale, "Abdul Hamid" will tell the story of the new regime in Turkey which lead to the fall of the tyrannical Sultan Abdul the Second.

Redhead; Divorce; Evensong

NEW YORK (NANA). — Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers boil and bubble through the melodious "Gay Divorcee," which has a story, songs and lyrics tapped out by dancing feet. "Evensong" is an operetta, telling the story of the rise and inevitable decline of a prima donna. Evelyn Laye, a singer who can act, or vice versa, is good enough in this one to induce you to take the ham of the story with relish. "I'll Fix It," a father-and-son story with Jack Holt should have been mended long before it got this far. The title, "Lady by Choice," should not scare you away. An excellent cast does comical things comically. "Redhead," to say it sweetly, is not quite as satisfying as an evening at home with a good book—or even a bad book.

Theatre Tickets Reduced

BERLIN (NANA).—Certain reforms now being made in Berlin's theatres are very welcome. The "Deutsches Theater" and the "People's Theatre" at last offer free programmes and have reduced the cloakroom fee from fifty to twenty pfennigs (roughly from ten to four cents). In Germany it is compulsory to remove your hat and coat before entering the theatre, opera house or concert hall.

All concerts in Germany will in future be subject to local control. The Reichs Music Board, an honorary body, will carefully record the dates of musical events so that there will be no clashing and items on programmes will be watched to see that young musical talent is adequately encouraged. The price of tickets will be the same as for an average cinema seat, one mark twenty-five pfennigs, or about half a dollar.

Great Britain and the Dominions Overseas

Parliamentary Committee's Report on Wider Self-Government Makes an Outstanding Landmark in History of Great Oriental Nation

LONDON (CP).—Through war and revolt, famine and flood, plague and communal riots, the vast Indian Empire has groped its way under British leadership to the threshold of full partnership in the British Commonwealth of Nations. The production of the select Parliamentary Committee's report on wider self-government for India is an outstanding landmark in the turbulent history of that land, with its teeming millions, its unbreakable religious and caste differences, its great potential wealth and its abject poverty so far as the masses are concerned.

CENTURIES OF STRUGGLE

Centuries of bloody struggle for control have finally brought a more or less peaceful India, whose peoples, in British India and native states—Indian India—alike are ready for self-government "with safeguards," keynote of the plan to be debated in Parliament for the next twelve months or so before its passage is decided.

For every glowing leaf in Indian history there are a dozen pages smeared with blood. As lately as 1930, 50,000 Indians were languishing in jail for their part in Mahatma Gandhi's civil disobedience campaign—the last of the many uprisings against British rule.

REFORMS OF 1921

It is only three-quarters of a century since control in India was turned over to the British Government by the East India Company, following the Sepoy Mutiny of 1857. It by no means established peace. Disorder, always rampant, was particularly rife after the resignation of Lord Curzon as Viceroy in 1905, and continued here and there until 1914.

The first real steps toward self-government came as a result of India's war effort. The Montagu-Chelmsford reforms, effective in 1921, established Parliamentary institutions, paving the way for dominion status. But they did not satisfy long.

Throughout the term of Lord Reading, who became Viceroy in 1921, there was opposition and disorder. The Duke of Connaught went to open the new council; the Home Rule party, the Swarajists, boycotted it. The Prince of Wales visited India, and his arrival was the signal for severe rioting.

Mahatma Gandhi, by this time foremost of the opponents of British rule, chose the weapons of boycott, of civil disobedience. Prospects of peace gradually improved however, and by 1926, when Lord Irwin succeeded Reading, the country was again fairly calm. In 1927 the British Government established the statutory commission to implement its promises of an enquiry into the workings of the reforms.

ROUND TABLE

This commission, headed by Sir John Simon, was refused the co-operation of Mahatma Gandhi and his party. All members of the commission were Europeans. Mr. Gandhi demanded instead a round table conference and the promise at least of dominion status. The Government went a great deal towards meeting the Congress party demands, when Lord Irwin, before the Simon report was presented, announced that the Government's goal was dominion status eventually, and furthermore invited Indians to take part in a round table conference in London.

The Congress party, however, was becoming more extremist. In 1929 Mr. Gandhi declared that unless India was given dominion status within a year, he would lead a campaign for outright independence. He did so, and the new struggle began in earnest in 1930, when he publicly manufactured salt that could not be taxed. The civil disobedience campaign was soon in full swing; the Government had no choice but to make thousands of arrests.

CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE

When the Simon Commission brought down its report at last, it was condemned on all sides. Events had outstripped the commissioners. The Round Table Conference met, however, with the Congress men outside. The native princes took a strong lead, calling for a federal government in which the states and British India should be equal partners.

When the conference delegates returned to India three years ago, the Congress remained obdurate and the campaign of civil disobedience continued, despite the efforts of Indian delegates to call it off. Mr. Gandhi and other Congress leaders were released from prison to negotiate with the Government and Indian delegates.

The result was the Delhi Pact of 1931, in which Congress promised to cease its anti-Government activities, the Government in turn granting political amnesty and making a number of tax concessions.

GANDHI PARTICIPATES

In August, 1931, Gandhi, after much wavering, sailed for London to take part in the second Round Table Conference. This almost broke down over the very complicated communal problem. Gandhi returned very much dissatisfied, threatening to renew his campaigns. In 1932 the struggle began again; promptly, Gandhi and his aides were clapped into prison. Lord Willingdon, former Governor-General of Canada, had by this time succeeded Lord Irwin, and he took things in a firm hand. The new Viceroy's policy was one of no compromise so long as the opponents were vigorously persisting in civil disobedience.

The arrest of the principal leaders was followed with the imprisonment, after trial, of more than 30,000 members of the Congress. Passage of special measures by the Legislative Assembly and the Council of State, and by all the Provincial Councils, revealed passive resistance as losing its attractions.

As in the first conference, the Congress was unrepresented in the third and final Round Table opened in November, 1932. Most of them were still in prison. The conference left a number of knotty questions unsettled. Consequently, the British Government drafted its scheme for self-government, embodied in the famous white paper of August, 1933, now the subject of the Select Committee's report.

Meanwhile, the situation in India gradually clarified as the Government's unyielding restrictions took full effect. The majority of those arrested were released when it became evident that the majority of Congress were willing to work along constitutional lines. Gandhi faded from the picture.

Ghost Vanishes When Hailed by Police Officer

HEREFORD (BUP).—Three people—two of them police officers—claim that they have seen a monk's ghost gliding through the close of ancient Hereford Cathedral on separate occasions at dead of night.

The two policemen are emphatic that the ghostly monk wears black. One constable, mistaking it for a colleague, called out a greeting. The wraith immediately vanished.

MARKING JUBILEE OF BISHOP FURSE

LONDON (CP).—Presentation of a purse has been made to Rev. Dr. Michael B. Furse, Bishop of St. Alban's, to mark his twenty-five years as a bishop. Dr. Furse was consecrated Bishop of Pretoria, South Africa, in 1909, and eleven years lated was translated to the Hertfordshire diocese and returned to England.

Standing six feet four inches, Dr. "Mike" is one of the tallest and also one of the most unconventional members of the English Episcopal bench. He was appointed to St. Alban's during Lloyd George's premiership.

"I was simply thrown at you by a Baptist Prime Minister," the Bishop told his flock at the time, "and as far as I am concerned I have got to sit on your chests for the rest of your natural. It may be unpleasant for all concerned." Like most other public men, the Bishop has occasionally received abusive letters. The only notice he has taken of them is to make an appeal to the senders to put stamps on them, "as he never found them worth the surcharge."

Irish Dig Deep for Light on Ancient Age In Country's History

Evidence Twenty Centuries Old Uncovered as Government Starts Work Among Hoary Ruins —Arctic Flora Unearthed by Mission

DUBLIN (CP).—Irishmen of 20,000 years ago will literally turn in their graves this Winter to provide work for some of the Free State's 113,000 able-bodied unemployed. President de Valera's Government has undertaken scientific archaeological excavations with the relief fund established by Parliament. Like many other countries with unemployment problems, the Free State has found it difficult to secure suitable public works for the workless to tackle. The Government has now adopted the suggestion of the Irish Museum authorities that work of a profitable nature could be found in digging up ancient churches and burial places.

A HAPPY AUGURY

It may be a happy augury for future relations between the Free State and its nearest neighbor that the British Museum has cordially accepted the invitation of the Free State Museum to send their representatives to help supervise the work. Indeed, in one district of the King's County (now Offaly) a representative of the British Museum has had the sole direction of operations on the site of an ancient church. Many beautiful specimens of early Celtic craftsmanship have been brought to light.

Works have now been undertaken in Cork, Waterford, Limerick, Meath, Dublin and Wicklow. In two cases assistance is being given by a professor of Queen's University, Belfast, and a prominent Northern Ireland scientist. Information is being gathered which, it is believed, will throw valuable light on the periods following the last Ice Age, perhaps 200 centuries ago, to the earlier centuries of the Christian era. A complete picture of the oscillations of the climate since the Ice Age has been given.

A NEW DISCOVERY

An archaeological mission from Harvard, which has been at work in Ireland for several months, has unearthed an "Arctic Flora" new to Ireland. The Museum authorities here declare that when related with the recent discoveries of a Danish Bog Excavation Mission under Professor Knud Jessen, it will lay the foundations of a new branch of study of Irish peat bogs.

Human remains dated to the Ice Age have been found in County Waterford caves, while Ballinglass Hill, County Wicklow, has disgorged a three chambered erection of the Bronze Age in a cairn containing burnt bones and old pottery.

Supervising the efforts of a band of unemployed at Aghnaskeagh, County Louth, Belfast University authorities found a smelting furnace of the early Bronge Age with several food vessels in secondary burial cists.

Skulls dug up at Collierstown, County Meath, showed traces of trephining, an ancient operation hitherto unobserved in Irish antiquity. At Kiltera, Villerstown, County Waterford, the excavators discovered an ancient cemetery containing Ogham stones.

REMAINS OF DEER

Numerous remains of Irish elk and giant deer have been found at Ballybetagh, near Dublin, in the course of a search for glacial and bog strata.

General's Appetite Not to Be Spoiled By Burning Floor

LONDON (CP).—To an old campaigner like General Carew Hunt, who is 96, and was storming forts in China seventy-two years ago, a fire under a floor is not a thing to worry about. One morning when servants at Sid Abbey, his Devon mansion, found a cellar alight and a sitting-room floor smouldering, he went on with his breakfast in bed and let the Sidmouth fire brigade carry on.

NEW TEST TO SOLVE CRIME

Arsenic in Hair and Nails May Give Clue to Murder

LONDON (BUP).—If arsenic is found in the hair and nails of a dead person, can it be proved that the poison was administered during life?

The answer has an important bearing on murder cases, and Drs. Sydney Smith and E. B. Hendry, of the University of Edinburgh, claim to have found it.

Writing in The British Medical Journal, they state that arsenic absorbed into the hair during life cannot be removed by prolonged soaking. This, they suggest, might be a basis for distinguishing between arsenic administered during life and arsenic introduced into a body by water percolating through arsenic-containing soil.

MAJOR SIGNIFICANCE

The presence and distribution of arsenic in the hair, nails and skin, state the doctors, has been a major significance in many cases.

Another important discovery is that if arsenic has been absorbed over a short period into growing hair or nails from living body fluids, the distribution will not be even. As the hair grows, an arsenic-containing band grows with it, followed by an arsenic-free zone.

Over a long period of administration, however, more and more of the hair contains arsenic, till the poison becomes evenly distributed.

EVIDENCE NOT SATISFACTORY

Bishop of Birmingham Is No Believer in Material Miracles

LONDON (BUP).—"Adequate evidence for the existence of material miracles—breaches of so-called laws of Nature—is not forthcoming. We may grant that God can work such miracles, but there is no proof that he does."

This statement was made by the Bishop of Birmingham during a sermon at Cambrige University.

It was only in this generation, Dr. Barnes said, that people were approaching the Old Testament with the assumption that the nature miracles recorded therein were not objective facts, but the results of imaginative meditation and religious enthusiasm.

"I accept what one may call 'psychological' miracles; mind states exist which reveal the active presence of God," he declared.

MELBOURNE.—Melbourne police have some difficulty in preventing "Jaywalking." The co-operation with the public in the new system of foot-traffic regulation has made considerable progress, but it is not yet complete, and men on point duty are still working hard.

There was an instance at the Central Police Court of a simple case of "jaywalking" leading to a defendant being heavily fined. A reproof by a police sergeant led to a "jaywalker" assaulting the sergeant. The offender was ordered to pay $125 fines, costs and compensation.

MISSIONARY USES SLAVES

Charge Made by Technical Adviser After Seven Years' Research

LONDON (BUP).—Charges that English missionaries in Southern Africa employ slave labor were made by W. G. Ballinger, technical adviser to the Native Co-operative and Industrial Movement," in an interview on his return here after seven years' research work in Africa.

"It will astound people to know," he said, "that there are English missionaries in Southern Africa, supported by subscriptions raised in this country, who own property which is tended by slaves. This fact must be well known to the missionary organizations to which these missionaries are directly responsible, but no action has been taken by them.

"There is a district where one missionary own several thousand head of cattle which were given to him by a native chief. These beasts are looked after by slaves, whose general shocking living conditions have already been revealed in a Government inquiry report.

"When protests have been made the invariable reply has been that these people cannot be civilized."

SHIP SAILS WITH NO PASSENGERS

Dutch Vessel Makes Regular Weekly Voyages and Said to Make Profit

SINGAPORE (BUP). — A ship which makes weekly voyages between Singapore and Java ports without carrying a single pound of cargo or a single passenger is exciting comment in shipping circles.

She is the Doggersbank, sailing under the Dutch flag. About six months ago she came East and engaged in local trade, cutting freight rates. Local vessels lowered their rates in response, but the Dutch vessel offered still lower rates.

Suddenly the Doggersbank ceased to compete, but continued plying between Singapore and Java without freight or passengers. It is suggested that payment is being made to ensure that the Doggersbank does not seek cargo or passengers.

The vessel is stated to be making a profit by her weekly cruises, and keeps the captain and crew of twelve in employment.

AUSTRALIA HAS HUGE DISTILLERY

Co-operative Plant at Berri Believed to Be Largest in the World

MELBOURNE.—Believed to be the largest single distillery in the world, and certainly the largest in the Southern Hemisphere, the Co-operative Winery and Distillery at Berri, on the River Murray, has processed a quarter of the wine made in South Australia, and a fifth of that made in the Commonwealth. It has stocks on hand worth $2,500,000.

In the winery alone are 118 tanks of 20,000 gallons each, 132 of 5,000 gallons, and eighteen of 6,000 gallons. In addition there are 202 fermenting tanks of 1,500 gallons capacity and fifty-four underground tanks of 2,000 gallon capacity, used in racking off the wine.

Number 10 Many Years Residence Of the Premier

Ramsay MacDonald Breaks Long Sequence to Live at Hampstead—Flowers at Old Bailey Have Malodorous Origin—Display of Smuggled Goods—Cockney Accent's Bad Effect

By GLANVILLE CAREW

LONDON (BUP).—Now that Parliament is sitting again and Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, the Prime Minister, has returned from his Canadian and Newfoundland holiday-rest-cure, No. 10 Downing Street—his official home—is again on the map. Mr. MacDonald will not, however, live, for the present at least, at No. 10. His medical advisers have insisted on his living at his house at Hampstead, the suburb on the northern heights of London.

Whether that arrangement will be practicable for long remains to be seen, but the inconvenience to the Prime Minister, in this critical time, of living at a spot from which not even the most skillful chauffeur can bring him to Westminster in less than half an hour is manifest.

It is all but 200 years since Walpole took up residence at No. 10, when George II had given the house for the use of every First Lord of the Treasury (an office which the Prime Minister always fills and for which office only he is paid).

After Walpole left it in 1742 no Prime Minister actually resided in the place for twenty-eight years. Again, when Beaconsfield went to live there in 1877, it was after a gap of forty-three years. When Gladstone succeeded him he lived there, and from that time until now—with the single exception of the Marquess of Salisbury—each Prime Minister has lived there.

The outside of No. 10 gives no idea of the size of the house. It is very expensive to run in the matter of domestic staff even though it is occupied rent and rates (municipal taxes) free.

FLOWERS IN COURT

"All persons who have anything to do before My Lords the King's Justices of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery for the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court draw near and give your attendance."

It is just 100 years since those words were spoken for the first time at the newly created Central Criminal Court which laymen know as "The Old Bailey." From that day to this the C.C.C. has sat every month to try "all treasons, murders, felonies and misdemeanors and also the accessories of them."

When this famous London court—the centenary of which we are to commemorate shortly—was set up, it sat in the old Newgate Sessions House right by the infamous "Newgate" of the days of Jack Shepherd, Jonathan Wild, Dick Turpin and countless other scoundrels of the Newgate Calendar. All through its —Newgates'—long history the fumes of this pestilential place had filtered into the old court, as it did in the new, and there had been occasions when the miasma had carried off the judges and the witnesses. As an antidote to this gaol fever, the judges carried bunches of flowers and aromatic herbs, and their dias, the court and the dock were strewn with them. That is why today, when H.M. Justices of Oyer and Terminer take their seats on the bench at the new "Old Bailey," opened in 1907, to "defend the children of the Poor and Punish the Wrongdoer," they found upon their desks a nosegay of flowers.

A BARGAIN HUNT

There is in London, in Lower Thames Street, which runs parallel to the river for about a mile to Tower Hill, a building known as the King's Warehouse. It is the repository of smuggled goods seized by the Customs. Usually it is a severe, gloomy, austere place. But the other day it looked like a bargain counter in a department store.

No doubt woman's natural lawlessness, assisted by the fashion which has decreed, for the present, that her entire dress can be folded into inches and weighed in ounces, accounts for the fact that the vast majority of the things displayed were articles of feminine wear.

It was Sale Day of these things, and out of 250 lots more than 200 were of use solely to women.

Girls from neighboring offices were there in droves feverishly hunting, with jealous eyes on the others, through stocks of lingerie, dresses, furs, silk stockings, brassieres and Heaven knows what. As a side-line, apparently hardly worth smuggling or a smuggler's risk, there were a tea-cosy, a kettle-holder, four women's umbrellas, six wig-nets and one bonnet. The men's contributions were two pairs of braces and a mean little bundle of ties.

ACCENT A HANDICAP

Because it is recognized, and it is a fact, that a Cockney accent is a handicap not only against social acceptance but very often a definite bar against practical success in life, a movement is on foot to improve the speech of children in the ordinary schools. The origins of the individual who speaks with a county accent (not dialect) are not necessarily obscure; on the other hand, a London accent nearly always betrays its user socially, and its damaging effects are far-reaching.

And that brings up the subject of slang phrases. The other day a witness at an inquest replied to some question "O.K.," whereat the coroner remarked "You are in England, speak English." Again, when in the Divorce Court someone said he was "fed up," the judge assumed judicial ignorance of the meaning of the phrase. In yet another case where a witness remarked that he had been "led up the garden," he was requested to translate.

Yet even the House of Commons errs. Mr. Stanley Baldwin, one of the few admitted authorities in the House on the use of the King's English, has referred (though not in the House itself) to a "party dog-fight," and even in the House he has been known to claim that the Government has "delivered the goods."

That being so, we may yet live to see the day when an English Minister returning from overseas will "say a jugful" to the House.

A WEATHER FORECAST

Just now when we are all praying for fine weather, we are wrapping up against a biting East wind of the variety peculiar to England which would make even an Eskimo shiver. The newspapers are full of forecasts of snow and sleet, thunder and lightning, hail, and all the other samples of weather which curse us at this time of year. In short, the trouble is, as Tom Hood said:

"No sun—no moon,
No morn—no noon,
No dawn—no dusk—no proper time of day;
No sky—no earthly view,
No distance looking blue,
No warmth, no cheerfulness,
No healthful ease,
No comfortable feel in any member—
No shade, no shine, no butterflies—no bees,

Passing Along the Mace

ADELAIDE, Australia (BUP).—It is estimated that many farmers on Eyre's Peninsula will lose at least three-quarters of their crops through the depredations of grasshoppers, which are advancing in uncontrollable swarms on a front of 250 miles.

Flocks of sheep have been shifted from some areas because of the destruction of feed. Numerous gardens have been ruined and wheat stacks at railway sidings demolished. The Government has refused the offer of an airplane, experts having advised that it is useless to attempt to check the invasion at this stage, though in some districts extensive poisoning is being carried out.

The Government has appointed a committee of experts to investigate the problem and recommend future precautions. The Minister of Agriculture thinks that legislation will be necessary empowering district councils to compel landholders to destroy grasshoppers in the initial stage.

Miss Rosslyn will require four years for the journey. She will earn her way by singing and recounting her adventures in the various theatres in cities through which she passes.

STRANGE ERROR ADDS TO VALUE

Block of Stamps Incorrectly Perforated Sold at Bargain Prices

LONDON.—A remarkable error has been discovered in the new issue of penny-halfpenny stamps.

The stamps in question are in the possession of S. H. Vallancey, a London philatelist. Three rows of 1½d, a block of seventy-two altogether, have been perforated across the King's head.

"It is an error in a million," said Mr. Vallancy, "and no one knows how it occurred. It was not noticed at the Post Office, for the block of stamps was sold in the ordinary way to an office boy from a City firm.

"The boy returned to the Post Office later, however, and almost tearfully complained that he was getting into trouble at his place of employment because he could not separate the stamps properly.

"The Post Office clerk obligingly changed the block, and I now have it. But what that office boy bought for 9s. cost me £10. Yet, from a philatelic point of view, it is a bargain, as it is a rare 'error' in British stamps."

What's New and Interesting for the Women

Seeks Divorce Causes

By Central Press

That changes in economic conditions since 1929 have reduced almost to an irreducible minimum one of the principal causes for divorce is the conclusion of Lucy Stout, noted writer and lecturer on women's problems, who has recently made exhaustive research to discover answers to the question: What are the principal causes of divorce?

Miss Stout's research, extending over a period of several months, brought her into personal contact with hundreds of individuals recently divorced or seeking divorce, as well as judges in many divorce courts, and involved travel in many states, her aim being to embroce in her investigations a group representative of the widest variety of typical cases, ranging from those of modest means to the very wealthy, and including every social rank.

"There seems to be no doubt," said Miss Stout, in discussing her research work, "that the economic stress which has affected people of all classes for the last few years has had a tendency to check the wave of divorces. Certainly it is true that infidelity on the part of husbands accounts for a very small percentage of divorce suits brought by wives, as compared with a few years ago. In many instances I have been told that men who in the money-mad days were philanderers have become homing hubbies, finding unwonted contentment in sane and peaceful domestic life.

FEWER QUARRELS

"Shortage of cash, strange as it may seem, has tended to lessen also the number of cases based on money squabbles between husbands and wives. When funds were plentiful, how they should be divided was often the subject of quarrels; but with hardly enough to get along with, the shortage has prompted teamwork in devising ways and means to keep from going on the rocks, and has brought many married couples closer together and given them new interests in common."

Miss Stout holds that in ordinarily good times the chief causes for divorce rate in this order: first, infidelity; second, money differences; third, physical incompatibility; fourth, lack of sympathetic understanding, which may result from difference in religious views, social standards or education and outlook on life. And she regards strict fidelity, mutual considerateness, fairness and forbearance as the prime essentials om happy marriage.

"There is no doubt," said Miss Stout, "that the number of 'cheating' hubands has been greatly reduced. The stock market crash drove many erring husbands back to homes and firesides where they were almost strangers, and today the percentage of 'cheaters' is very low. If wives would only realize that men are really overgrown children, and treat their husbands accordingly, there would be far less trouble. By realizing this, and using her womanly wiles and intuition, any wife can hold the love of a husband who has ever really loved her.

MEN HAVE CONCEIT

"All men have a certain conceit of themselves. Without it they would amount to little. If wives would take advantage of this, and make their husbands feel that they look up to them—yes, flatter them a bit; why not?—they would have their husbands eating out of their hands.

"And things would be a lot better, too, if men could see themselves as they really are. Full-length mirrors would show many a man who thinks of himself as an Apollo and breaker of women's hearts that his paunch and bald spot suggest anything but a figure of Romance."

Child Prodigy Amazes Elders

EDMONTON.—John Joseph Harold Morris, five years and five months of age, is a great reader, and has stored up in his mind historical and other facts which have astounded his elders.

"The Balkan peninsula is washed by four seas. These are the Adriatic, the Archipelago, or the sea of many islands, the Sea of Marmora, and the Black Sea. Two narrow straits called the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus connect the Sea of Marmora with the Sea of Many Islands and the Black Sea" rolls off his tongue as easily as most children read "The cat ate the rat."

"Mary Queen of Scots was a young woman, very beautiful and fascinating, who had been brought up at the French court, which was exceedingly gay, and there she had been taught the Roman Catholic religion," he quotes in a long breath.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Morris, Harold has three older sisters, and until he was four years old was insistent in his demands that they read to him. Then he began to read himself, and now dives into books of all kinds.

An upstanding young lad—dark hair, bright blue eyes and looking very alert and healthy—his mother does not believe in encouraging him too much along the lines of erudition. He likes to play like any normal boy, and has decided to become a fireman.

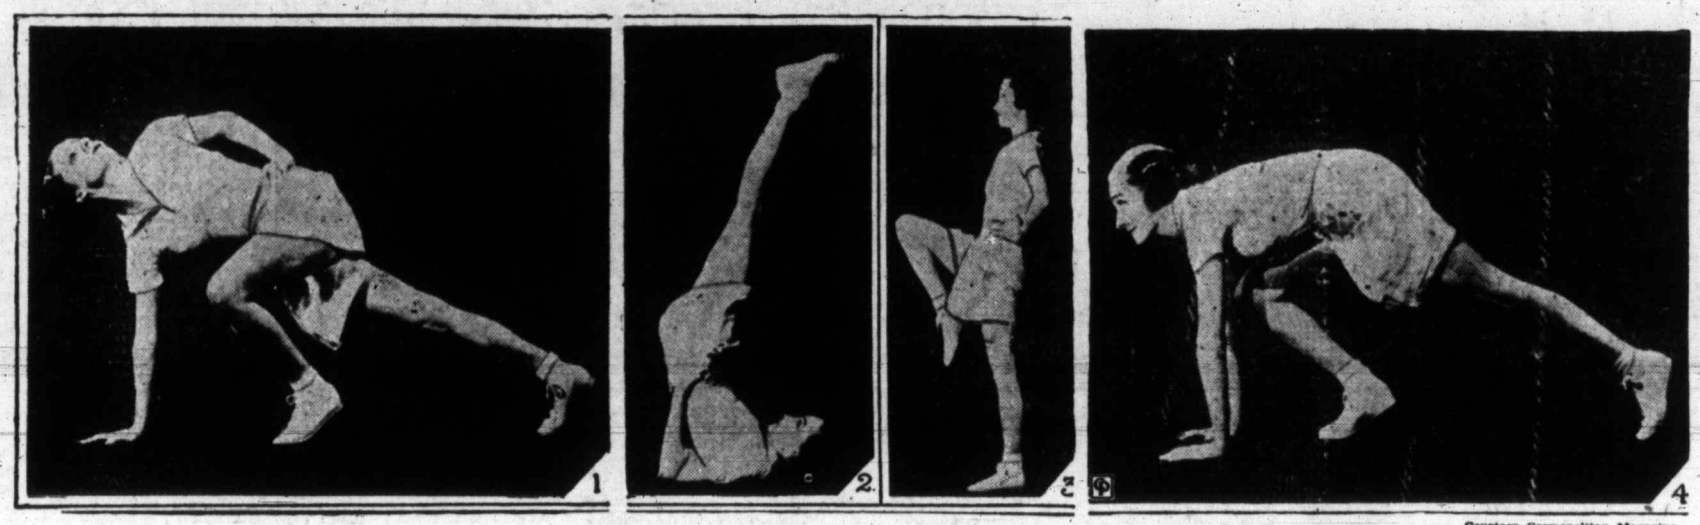
Exercise in Winter and Keep Healthy and Beautiful, Says Expert



Courtesy Cosmopolitan Magazine

Four Exercises Recommended by Arthur A. McGovern, Gymnasium Instructor, to Keep Women Fit

DON'T go around with a sniffly cold that makes people shun you. Don't be sneezing and coughing all over the place, making friends shy away from you and strangers give you dirty looks. And don't let it be necessary to call the boss and tell him you can't come down today because you're sick in bed with a cold.

Keep fit and beautiful with exercise in Winter as well as Summer. Fat accumulates on the body when it is allowed to slump down after a season of swimming, hiking and golfing and tennis.

You need exercise most in Winter, says Arthur A. McGovern, gymnasium instructor, and describes in the December issue of a national magazine a series which will keep you in good health in cold weather. They will also improve figure and posture.

Exercise 1. Get down on all fours, legs out straight, with the weight balanced on the hands and toes. From this position turn over on your right side, bringing the left hand up on the left hip, and moving the left foot forward so that it is about twenty inches up from the right foot. From this position shift the weight to the left foot, and bring the left shoulder forward toward the floor, and then up straight to starting position. If the weight is properly distributed between the left foot and the right hand, the exercise is not difficult. East time you return to starting position, bring the head up so you are looking at the ceiling.

Exercise 2. Place a rug or a mattress on the floor to lie on. Swing the feet up overhead, trying to touch the floor with the toes. As your feet brings your hips upward, place the hands under the hips to act as a brace, the elbows resting against the floor. After you get into position and feel steady and well balanced, kick both legs up and down. As the knees return to the starting position, bring them as near the shoulders as possible. Repeat ten times, counting each time the legs return to the starting position.

Exercise 3. Stand upright, hands on hips, and run, but instead of bringing the legs forward, have the feet return to the same place each time. Raise the knees as high as you can and come down lightly on the toes. Repeat ten times, counting each time the left foot returns to the floor.

Exercise 4. Get down on all fours with the weight of the body largely on the hands, feet slightly apart. Keeping the hands solidly against the floor, jump, bringing the right knee up under the chest and the left leg outstretched backward. Jump again, bringing the left knee forward and the right leg back. Alternate continuously ten times, counting each time the right knee is forward.

Household Hints

To make a fire extinguisher, put three pound of salt in a gallon of water, and to this add 1½ pounds of sal ammoniac. Put the mixture in a bottle, and when a blaze is discovered, pour the solution on it.

To remove blood stains from a garment, soak the article in cold water overnight. Then add one teaspoonful of kerosene to soap and water and wash. Let it remain for a few minutes, then wash in cold water.

When raisins sink to the bottom of the cake, try scalding the raisins well, them roll them in flour before mixing into the batter. If this does not prove effective, try rolling in butter instead of flour.

To prevent home-made marmalade from becoming moldy, soak the waxed paper with which it is covered in milk. Seal the tops of the jars securely.

To stimulate the growth of plants, put coffee grounds around the roots about two or three times a week. Then once a week give them a tablespoonful of olive oil. Never allow the earth to become dry and hard.

Pictures Add to Home Charm if Hung Correctly

By FLORENCE B. TERHUNE
(Central Press Decoration Expert)

To hang a picture correctly does not merely mean some wire, a hook, or a few nails in the wall. It does mean, granting you have been careful to select the right picture for the right spot, that you are going to be careful of all details.

First, place your picture so that its centre of interest is on the eye level of the people standing in the room. A very prevalent mistake is having pictures too high, and a picture too high is discontented and more trying than one hung too low.

A picture usually looks best when hung over a mantel, long table, sofa, or the like, for furniture gives a stabilizing effect of an under support. Use your larger pictures over your largest furniture and the smaller ones over or near the proportionately smaller things. A large picture, you see, is too top-heavy for a lightweight piece, and the small picture, unless used as one of a group, is too spotty or light-headed over the heavy one.

Pictures which draw your attention in opposite directions should not be hung close together. Watch, too, your silhouettes. Pictures of famous people, placed back to back, as if they were not on speaking terms, instead of facing each other in a friendly way.

LOWER EDGES ON LINE

But whatever you do or do not do, never expose the picture wire, for it should not show. Leave a little leeway in the wire across the back of the picture to relieve any strain, but be sure that it does not come above the top of the picture when hanging. There are small patent hooks and nails to be had for ten cents that are guaranteed to hold pictures up to several hundred pounds, even in a thin plaster wall, and the hole they leave is nil.

Generally speaking, then, there is no reason to hang a picture from the moulding, but should you want to, use two parallel, vertical cords, one running up from each side of the picture. Never use that triangle cord affair with the tassel in the middle. Any triangle, either cord or wire, pulls the eyes away from the picture by coming to the point at the top, and thus focuses your attention there instead of leaving it on the picture, where it belongs.

If you have a picture or mirror hung that way, why not look at it critically right now and see if this is not true. You'll chance it, I know.

T-Strap Is Formal

Antique Rose Moire Dinner Dress; Right, Black Kid T-Strap Sandals

By LISBETH

THE sandals have it when it comes to formality in footwear. And the T-strap sandal, especially, has this quality. It is, besides, a neat and becoming covering for the foot. The T-strap cuts the length of the too-long trilby, and it looks equally well on the shorter foot.

Stiff fabrics are employed this season to express the new feeling for dramatic clothes. The lovely tunic dinner dress pictured has a tunic of antique rose moire posed over a slit skirt of black transparent velvet. The rose velvet hat and black kid sandals, highlighted by silk kid and piped with silver, stress the formality of the gown.

Helpful Aids to Beauty

EAT SLOWLY

The speed at which you eat exerts some influence upon the weight of a thin person. Food should be chewed slowly and thoroughly. Such leisurely and complete mastication might almost be said to take the place of additional food. For thorough chewing makes your food seem much more delicious, and satisfies your appetite better. It increases the flow of saliva and the digestive juices in the stomach and makes the meals provide more nourishment, because of their complete digestion.

COOL RINSE

A properly administered cool rinse after an ordinary shampoo really is beneficial to the hair and scalp. It acts in the capacity of scalp tonic. It has same effect on the scalp as the application of cool water has on the skin. It stimulates the circulation and sends the blood pumping vigorously through the scalp. However, extremely cold water should not be used. Remember that your scalp is just about as sensitive as the skin of your face. And if you use very cold water for the last rinse, it will chill your scalp and fail to prove beneficial.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

The white henna bleach for lightening superflous hair is the one that is used in most beauty shops. To prepare this bleach, mix enough white henna (which is really chalk of magnesia) with two teaspoons of peroxide and half a teaspoon of ordinary household ammonia to form a thick paste. Then spread this paste over the hairy areas that you wish bleached, and permit it to dry. When the paste is thoroughly dry, remove it with tepid water and a soft cloth. It is really only the peroxide and ammonia that do the bleaching. The chalk of magnesia is used merely as a base to insure moisture for a longer period of time.

Dessert—Coffee Jelly

TWO tablespoons granulated gelatine, one-half cup cold water, one cup boiling water, one-third cup sugar, two cups strong coffee. Soak gelatine five minutes in cold water. Dissolve in boiling water, strain and add to sugar and coffee. Turn into mold, chill and serve with whipped cream.

Hot Water Takes Off Onion Peel

When you have a number of onions to peel, cover them with hot water and let stand for a minute or two, and that thin skin so hard to get off can be removed as if by magic.

Stuffed Peppers Of Corned Beef

Six green peppers, two cups canned corned beef, one cup dry bread or cracker crumbs, one cup tomato soup or canned tomatoes, seasonings of salt and pepper, onion salt, celery salt. Seed the peppers and parboil for five minutes, mix the minced corned beef with the crumbs, tomato soup and seasonings. Stuff the peppers and bake for thirty minutes in a 350-degree F. oven. Serve on a platter garnished with parsley or celery leaves.

Varied Shades of Brown Are Popular

By LISBETH

SHADES of brown never were so popular as they are this Autumn, it seems to us.

Dark brown velveteen makes collar and belt, and a brown fet hat with matching velvet bow, and brown kid pumps trimmed with rows of beige stitching, are worn under it.

Carole Lombard, right, is posing in a stunning new suit with three-quarter-length coat. It is fashioned of lightweight beige tweed, and the coat is lined with burgundy corduroy, and was designed by its creator to be equally smart for town or country wear.

The short-sleeved jumper is of corduroy, and fastens with dull gold bars looped into cord. The fedora hat, with its elegant new high crown, and gauntlet gloves also are of the corduroy.

Cheap Steak Tasty

A housewife dares us to try this hint: Buy your usual cut of steak, but do not have it cubed. Instead, carefully remove bone and large gristle, then wrap steak in two or three layers of waxed paper. Adjust wringer on washing machine so it is not too tight and run steak, wrapped in paper, through the wringer two or three times. With correct cooking, this will make the most inexpensive cuts of meat as tender as the best. Sounds rather idiotic, doesn't it? But just try it.

Patou Shows Half-Season Collections

Jean Patou is showing a number of dresses discreetly designed to meet the present way of living; trim little black dresses for the afternoon and black dresses for the evening, made with skirts which do not touch the ground and necklines which are low at the back and are cut high to the base of the throat in front, says an article in The Times, London. For afternoon dresses Patou uses cloke crepe with a satin finish, plain satin and moire; for the evening, satin, celophane, lace, crinkled crepes and moire. With black he puts color, as on a black lace dress worn over a low bodice of pale green satin ribbon, or on a simple black afternoon dress, when he puts long tight cuffs of bright plaid to the sleeves, or when, with skirts and jackets, he puts a soft white chiffon blouse trimmed with silver or one in orange chiffon spotted with satin.

The skirts of all the afternoon and morning dresses are slim in line and very well tailored, whether slit at the hem, pleated in front, or made with panels. One dress is in crepe satin used on the dull side. In front from neck to hem is hung a broad soft panel used on the shiny side. The high neck is turned back in front with soft white lingerie points, and the sleeves long and tight fitting, have white cuffs. Most of the dresses are worn with belts, either of shiny leather or in material like the dress. There are few sashes.

The evening dresses and little dinner dresses are slit about the hem as far up as the knees, usually at the back.

LELONG STYLES

Lucien Lelong has also made a stylish collection for the half-season period. His morning dresses and ensembles are bright and practical, made in tweeds and plain woolens with bright additions in jumpers, little jackets, buttons and belts. His afternoon dresses are very simple, and for them he uses a good many crepes and jerseys. For the evening Lelong invariably makes dresses which are formal, however simple. Skirts for the morning are short and tight, with hidden pleats or a slit at the right place in the hem. For the afternoon they are a little longer and have some sort of hidden fullness, but always a slim backline. Long, tight sleeves are usual; some are tucked all the way up horizontally. When there are full sleeves, long or short, the fullness is drawn towards the back to give the cape appearance.

BIBS FOR AFTERNOON

Ornamental bib fronts to the afternoon dresses are made in different shapes and materials. Many of them are in soft white lingerie; or the linen may be stiff and starched, as when a dress or coat has wide, crisp, white revers. Long pointed collars are turned back on themselves to make a loop. Little black dresses are worn over white waistcoats and are slit down the back and in front, to show the white of the waistcoat. One black dress is cut with a long swallow tail which reaches to the hem behind. Skirts are often worn with short basqued jackets.

The evening dresses at Lelong's are specially attractive. There is one in black satin which has a long skirt full from the knees by wide inset pleats, slim hips, and a jacket bodice with a pagoda basque, a fitting bodice fastening down the front with diamond buttons, a plain rounded neckline and short puffed sleeves. A black tulle dress has a long Garibaldi tunic of black velvet and at the waist a blue enamel locket brooch. A black sequin dress, slim, with a train, has a hip-length cape of sequins embroidered on cloth and edged with white ermine. This cape falls straight in front and is easily fitted to the waist behind.
